PREFACE.

THE text of this edition of Catullus is constituted upon the conviction that only codices Sangermanensis (G) and Oxoniensis (O) are of ultimate authority in determining the readings of the lost codex Veronensis (V), and that the readings of the other known MSS. (except T) that differ from those of G and O have the value of conjectural emendations merely.

In the Critical Appendix are exhibited in full the readings of G and O, with the omission, however, of such as present only unimportant orthographical peculiarities. For the readings of G I have depended mainly upon the published collations of Baehrens, Ellis, and Schwabe (in his last edition), together with the photolithographic fac-simile of the MS. published at Paris in 1890. For the readings of O I have followed a collation and complete transcript of that MS. made by me in July, 1889, by the courtesy of the Librarian of the Bodleian. This collation was carefully compared on the spot with the collations of Ellis and Schwabe, and is therefore, I trust, reasonably free from error.

A fac-simile of a page of codex O, reduced one-third in size, follows this preface.

My especial thanks are due to the editors-in-chief of this Series for their unfailing kindness and invaluable criticisms, and to my friend and associate, Mr. Frank W. Nicolson, for his assistance in proof-reading and in the preparation of the Critical Appendix.

CODICIS O CATVLLIANI FOL. 21 r.

INTRODUCTION.

Early Lyric Poetry at Rome.

1. The beginnings of lyric poetry among the Romans reach back to the prehistoric period of the city, and were as rude and shapeless as was the life of her people. Amid the rough farmer-populace of the turf-walled village by the Tiber the Arval Brethren and the Salii chanted their rude litanies to the rustic deities, — for even then religion was a prime cause in moving men toward poetry. In roughly balanced Saturnian verses men spoke regret and panegyric for the dead and praises for the valorous deeds of the living. The mimetic passion and rude wit of the Roman led him also into boisterous personal satire and into epigram more pungent than polished. But until the last few decades of the Republic these products of the Muse are either anonymous or connected with names well-nigh forgotten, and the remnants that have come down to us display no striking poetic excellence.

2. The progress of a national literature is perhaps rarely by fits and starts, even though it appears so to be. But the front advances in such a uniform line, that only now and then, when one wave sweeps out far beyond the rest, is the general advance of the tide remarked. So it would probably be unjust to the unknown poets of the Roman Republic to believe that their work did not mark a continual advance from period to period in lyric feeling and expression. Yet only in the first half of the last century before Christ did Latin poetry enter upon its first period of brilliancy. Amid the hot passions, the vigorous hatreds, the feasts and brawls, the beauty and the coarseness, of life in the capital during this most active period in the history of Rome, there arose a school of writers who, though often conservatives in politics, were radicals in poetry. The tendencies of the traditional Roman past were by them utterly disregarded. Inspiration was drawn from the stirring life into which they were plunged, as well as from the sympathetic study of the sources of poetic art among both the earlier Greeks and the Alexandrians. As was to be expected, their models of rhythm were not the rude hexameters and ruder Saturnians of their Roman predecessors, but the more polished versification of the Greeks; and their subjects were sometimes their own personal experiences and emotions, and sometimes themes suggested by their Greek prototypes. So a new school of Roman poetry arose and flourished, to be superseded in turn by the polished Augustans, who cultivated the niceties of elegance, but at the expense of verve.

Catullus.

3. Of this new school of poets the most prominent and interesting figure is Catullus. It is possible to know him personally as only now and then an ancient writer can be known to us, and yet he gives us but few definite biographical facts concerning himself, while still fewer are given by other authors of his own and later ages. But the little body of poems that constitute his extant works is so replete with his intense personality, and shows forth so unreservedly his every emotion, that the man stands out before us as does no other man of the age with the exception of two or three of its political leaders. And all this is true, even though we acknowledge, as we are bound to do, that in many questions of importance concerning his life we must be content with a working hypothesis instead of a series of established facts, and that the biographer, as the interpreter of the poems of Catullus, must be understood to be presenting probabilities, and not certainties.

4. With regard to his full name we are left in some doubt. He refers to himself by name in his poems twenty-five times, but in each case only by the cognomen, Catullus, while the better manuscripts of his writings are inscribed simply Catulli Veronensis Liber. Yet there is no difficulty in ascertaining his gentile name from other writers. Varro (L. L. VII. 50), Suetonius (Iul. 73), Porphyrio (on Hor. Sat. I. 10. 19), Charisius (I. 97), Jerome (Chron. a. Abr. 1930), all give it as Valerius. There are fewer references to his prænomen. Four of the later and interpolated manuscripts give it in their titles as Quintus, and until lately it was supposed that to this indication might be added the testimony of the elder Pliny (N. H. XXXVII. 81). Relying upon such authority Scaliger went so far as to emend c. 67. 12 so as to bring in for the unintelligible words qui te the prænomen of the poet in the vocative, Quinte; and his suggestion won the approval of even so keen a critic as Lachmann. But it is now universally conceded that the initial Q. prefixed to the word Catullus in the passage specified from Pliny is an interpolation, the best MS., the codex Bambergensis, containing only the cognomen without prefix. There is, moreover, positive evidence in favor of a different prænomen. Jerome (l.c.), in speaking of the birth of the poet, calls him in full C. Valerius Catullus, and Apuleius (Apol. 10), whose accuracy, however, in the matter of names is not above suspicion, calls him C. Catullus. In the face, then, of the testimony of interpolated manuscripts only, his prænomen must stand established as Gaius.

5. Concerning the birthplace of Gaius Valerius Catullus there is abundant testimony. The titles of the best MSS. of his works call him Veronensis, and Jerome (l.c.) declares him born at Verona. In this testimony concur his admirers among the poets of the centuries immediately following (e.g. Ov. Am. III. 15. 7; Mart. I. 61. 1; X. 103. 5; XIV. 195; Auson. Op. 23. 1); and his own writings furnish confirmatory evidence of the same fact. He calls himself (c. 39. 13) Transpadanus; he possessed a villa at Sirmio on the shore of Lacus Benacus near Verona (c. 31); he was acquainted with Veronese society (cc. 67, 100); and he spent part of his time at Verona (cc. 35, 68[a]).

Date of Birth and of Death.

6. The year of his birth and that of his death are stated by Jerome in his edition of the Chronicles of Eusebius, probably on the authority of the De Poetis of Suetonius. Under date of the year of Abraham 1930 (= B.C. 87) Jerome says, Gaius Valerius Catullus scriptor lyricus Veronae nascitur, and under that of 1960, or, according to some MSS., 1959 (= B.C. 57, or 58), he says, Catullus XXX. aetatis anno Romae moritur. There is nothing to contradict Jerome's date for the birth of the poet, but unfortunately for our belief in his entire accuracy, a number of the poems of Catullus were clearly written later than B.C. 57, — some of them at least as late as the end of the year 55 B.C., or the beginning of the year 54 (e.g. cc. 11, 29, 53, 113). Jerome is, therefore, certainly wrong about the date of the poet's death, and hence about at least one of the two other statements, the date of his birth and his age at death. The only scrap of evidence from other sources on these points is the vague statement of Ovid that Catullus died young (Am. III. 9. 62 obuius huic [in Elysio] hedera iuuenalia cinctus tempora cum Caluo, docte Catulle, tuo).

7. The poems of Catullus himself furnish us, however, with some good negative evidence concerning the date of his death. It probably occurred in the year 54 B.C. In the first place, there are no poems that clearly must have been written later than the close of the year 55 B.C., or the earlier months of the year 54, nor any that are even capable of more ready explanation, if a later date for their composition be supposed. The remark about the consulship of Vatinius (c. 52), which did not take place till the end of the year 47 B.C., forms no exception to this statement (cf. Commentary), and the prosecution of Vatinius by Calvus, mentioned in c. 53, may well have taken place in 56 B.C., instead of in the fall of 54. Furthermore, c. 11, which was surely written toward the close of 55 B.C., shows a decided change in the feeling of Catullus toward Cæsar, and accords well with the statement of Suetonius (Iul. 73), that after Catullus had angered Cæsar by his epigrams concerning him and Mamurra, a reconciliation with the poet took place, apparently at his father's house at Verona. It is hardly credible that if Catullus lived during the exciting years that followed 55 B.C., the only indication of his new feeling toward Cæsar should be the reference in c. 11, and that this was followed by silence. Such neutrality was not the fashion among the young friends whom Cæsar was constantly winning to himself from the ranks of his political opponents. There seems, indeed, to be an indication in c. 11 that Catullus might be expecting some post under the great commander. But the most satisfactory conclusion is that death came within a short time after the close of 55 B.C., and anticipated all hoped-for activities (cf., however, § 50).

8. Whether Jerome is wrong in one or in both of his other statements, remains, and must always remain, in doubt. All known facts concerning Catullus harmonize well with the hypothesis that he was born in 87, and died in 54 B.C., at the age of thirty-three, or that he was born in 84, and died in 54, at the age of thirty; but nothing more definite can be said about the matter.

Family and Circumstances.

9. The only relative mentioned by Catullus is his brother, whose death was the occasion to him of such intense and lasting grief (cc. 65, 68, 101). But Suetonius (l.c.) speaks of the father as a host of Julius Cæsar even so late, apparently, as the close of the poet's life. Why he (to say nothing of the mother) is never mentioned by the poet, we cannot tell. Not improbably, however, he did not have the same active sympathy with the tastes and inclinations of Catullus as the father of Horace had with those of his son. Catullus, moreover, was not the only son, and was probably younger than the one whose untimely death in the Troad he records.

10. Yet there was apparently wealth enough in the family to enable even the younger brother to enjoy the advantages that wealth brought to the young Italian of that day. He was able early in his young manhood to go to Rome, and to make that city thenceforth his abiding-place (c. 68. 34 ff.). He owned a villa at Sirmio (c. 31), and another on the edge of the Sabine hills (c. 44). And there is no indication that while at Rome he was busy with any pursuit that could fill his purse, although, like many another young Roman, he later obtained a provincial appointment, and went to Bithynia on the staff of the governor Memmius in the hope of wealth (cf. § 29 ff.). The hope, he tells us (cc. 10, 28), proved abortive, but Catullus had yet money enough — perhaps even to purchase a yacht for his homeward journey like any millionnaire (cf. § 35 and introductory note to c. 4) — at any rate to continue his merry life at Rome, apparently without great pecuniary embarrassment. All these indications point to no financial inability or niggardliness on the part of his father. Possibly the villas, and an increase of income, came to him upon the death of his brother.

11. Whether Catullus, like Horace, was accompanied to Rome by his father is doubtful. On the whole, it seems hardly probable that he was. To say nothing of the considerations possibly connected with the interests of the elder son, the father was apparently resident in Verona at the time when Julius Cæsar was governor of Gaul (Suet. Iul. 73), and this fact may indicate that at no time was the family home at Verona broken up in favor of a new one at Rome.

Education.

12. Doubtless to the care of some friend of the family at Rome the youth was entrusted. And there were many Transpadanes at Rome, — some of them making great names for themselves in the literary world. With some of these certainly a man of station prominent enough in Verona to be later, at least, the friend of Julius Cæsar, might command interest. Under the charge of one of them he might have placed so promising a young man as his son doubtless was. To which one the trust fell cannot now be determined, but as Catullus later (c. 1) addresses Cornelius Nepos as the friend and foster-father of his earlier poems, it seems not unlikely that to his guardianship (cf. § 63) Catullus owed his introduction into the society of Rome.

13. The purpose of his coming thither is nowhere stated, but may easily be divined. Rome was the school of Italy, at least to all who could pay for her tuition. And a youth with a poet's soul burning within him could hardly have been content with such schooling as a Transpadane town afforded, even to her wealthiest inhabitants. But whether Catullus did much studying of a serious sort may well be doubted. It cannot be quite true that his 'only books were woman's looks,' for his poems show an ardent and sympathetic study of the Greek poets. But his attainments in rhetoric and philosophy, if he had any at all, were certainly not of a scholastic character, and he apparently never cared to follow the students of the day to Athens or to Rhodes.

14. Not books, but life, exercised over him the preëminent charm. And this life was not the life of the past, but of the present, — the busy, delirious whirl of life in the capital of the world. Into it he plunged with all the ardor of a lively and passionate nature. Rome was from that first moment his home, the centre of all his beloved activities. Verona, his Sabine villa, and even Sirmio, became to him but hospitals or vacation haunts. Once only did he leave Italy, and even his joy at reaching Sirmio again on his return (c. 31) could not long detain him from Rome. And at Rome death met him.

15. In life at Rome, then, Catullus found his full development as a poet. Already from the donning of the toga uirilis, so he tells us (c. 68. 15 ff.), he had been busied with love and love-verses. But whether this period antedated or followed his coming to Rome cannot be decided, since the date of publication of the Chronica of Nepos (c. 1. 8) is unknown, and on this alone could a decision of the other point be based. Such poems as those that concern Aufilena (cc. 100, 110, 111) may possibly date from the Veronese period of the poet's life (though c. 82 cannot possibly do so), and yet it is just as possible that their scene was Rome (cf. introductory note to c. 100), and the same may be said of the poems concerning Ameana (cc. 41, 43). Much more likely is it, however, that of the other poems that show some connection with Veronese affairs cc. 17 and 67 date from his residence in his native city, while c. 35 was surely written during only a temporary visit there (cf. Commentary).

Lesbia.

16. But whenever these poems were written, they spring from experiences that did not touch deeply the soul of the writer. A passing fancy, a moment's passion, an evanescent humor brought them forth. But at Rome, and not long after he arrived at Rome, Catullus met the mastering passion of his life, and beside the verses to which it gave birth the melodious chamber ditties of Horace and the elaborated passions of the elegiasts are but as tinkling cymbals. To the woman who exercised this wonderful power over him he gives the name of Lesbia. But more often he is not content with a name, and the familiar terms of endearment flow from his lips with a newer and deeper meaning; for he delights to feel that though his experience is on the outside like that of other men, his mistress is peerless in virtues and his love for her a love passing that of women. On his side the passion was sudden and intense. He adopts the words of Sappho, and tells Lesbia (c. 51) of the deadly faintness that seizes upon him even while he feels himself a god, and more than a god, in sharing her smile and her voice. And with the swift passion comes the mad desire to win her love. Lesbia is a married woman (c. 83. 1), but that consideration demands only additional care and diplomacy on his part, and is no bar to his efforts. He lays siege to her heart. His importunate persistence, youth as he is, commands her attention even amid a throng of lovers, but apparently only irritates her. What does this youngster, lately come to Rome, hope for amid so many of his betters? He sees that victory must be won over this brilliant woman of the world by proving himself no mere moon-calf. Therefore he curbs his sentiment, and matches wit with wit. Even her own display of petulance is turned against her in neat retort (cc. 83, 92). And meanwhile Catullus was winning his way in the Roman world. The unknown young man was becoming well known, and the haughty beauty finally surrendered, doubtless influenced by vanity rather than by passion.

17. Yet Catullus had no haunting fears concerning the genuineness of her love for him. He was so completely mastered by his own passion that he could not doubt hers. Their meetings, necessarily secret for the most part, on account of the lady's position, took place at the house of a friend (c. 68. 68). But not even the possibility of discovery restrained the ardor of the poet's soul. He poured forth his feelings most simply and unrestrainedly in a series of charming trifles. Mere childlike delight in multitudinous kisses (cc. 5, 7), daintiest pretence of lover's jealousy at the favors accorded Lesbia's sparrow (c. 2), gentle, half-smiling sympathy with her over the untimely death of her pet (c. 3), flow from his pen with a perfect freedom of movement and yet with an exquisite grace and perfection in every part. And the mere thought that any proud damsel could once claim comparison with his Lesbia rouses him to hot scorn (cc. 43, 86).

18. The sight of this young poet at her feet may have been attractive to Lesbia, but it could not take the place of all other attractions. The exclusive demand his love made upon her grew irksome. He might be so wholly swallowed up in love for her as to disregard everything else, but she was not so in love with him. It flattered her vanity to hold him thus in thrall, but was tiresome if she also must have her freedom limited by the same shackles. And so she gradually turned away from him toward other pleasures. He finally met her coldness by an attempt to assert his own independence (c. 8). But even in his self-exhortation to firmness in meeting indifference with indifference, he cannot forbear to dwell upon the happy days of the past, nor can he conceal his own hope for a reconciliation. Strangely enough, he seems not even to suspect infidelity on Lesbia's part with other lovers. Though he himself had made her unfaithful to her husband, he is troubled by no fear that she may be entering upon fresh fields of conquest. Though he cannot explain her present action, he is so utterly blinded by his own passion, that he even warns her to consider the desolate lot that awaits her, if she persists in breaking with him (c. 8. 14 ff.).

19. However misplaced was the confidence of Catullus in the force of his appeal to Lesbia, his independence of bearing was persevered in till it conquered, — at least to a certain extent. Lesbia saw that she had carried her coldness too far, and was likely to lose forever a lover whose talents and devotion were such that to be given up by him was a serious wound to her vanity. And with a shrewd calculation of the effect of such a course upon his wounded heart, she made her unexpected way into his presence, and prayed for reconciliation. As might be expected, the unsuspicious lover received her with a burst of rapture (c. 107).

20. But the relations of the two lovers never could be restored to their old footing. Neither of them felt precisely as before. Lesbia had no intention of confining herself to Catullus alone, but only of numbering him as still one of her slaves. Catullus, too, had won knowledge in a hard school, and the trustful confidence he had felt in Lesbia's full reciprocation of his love was gone. He does reproduce his former tone of joyous mirth in one poem celebrating the reconciliation (c. 36), but when Lesbia appeals to the gods to bear witness to her pledge of eternal fidelity (c. 109), though he joins in her prayer, it is clearly not with hearty faith, but only with a somewhat reserved desire. And with more experience, his heart is becoming a little hardened. However jesting the tone may be interpreted in which he answers Lesbia's protestations (c. 70), a strain of cynicism begins to make itself heard that is foreign to his former songs, though it has not yet become settled bitterness. But Catullus is fast learning to write epigram.

21. It was useless to suppose that he could long remain ignorant of the fact that Lesbia's favors were not confined to him. No one but himself had ever been ignorant of the true state of the case. Rumor now began to penetrate even his fast-closed ears, and that which he perhaps had already begun to fear came with no less a shock when presenting itself in the garb of fact. The emotions it aroused apparently varied from time to time. At one moment his old passion is strong within him, and in dwelling upon the happiness of the past he determines, with a pretence of philosophic carelessness that is supported by the broken staff of mythological precedent, to overlook the frailties of a mistress whose lapses from fidelity he believed were yet but occasional (c. 68. 135 ff.). At another moment he appeals in remonstrance and grief to the friends who have become his rivals (cc. 73, 77, 90).

22. And his perturbed soul was still further wrenched by another heavy blow that fell upon him at about the same time with these disclosures. His dearly loved brother was dead, and, to heighten the anguish of the moment, dead far away in the Troad, without a single relative near him to close his eyes, utter the last formal farewell, and place upon his tomb the customary funeral offerings. The news either reached Catullus when on a visit to his father's house at Verona, or summoned him suddenly thither from Rome. For a time this emotion dulled his sensibility to every other. He could think of nothing else. He foreswore the Muses forever, save to express the burden of his woe (cc. 68. 19; 65. 12). To the request of the influential orator Hortensius for verses, he could send only a translation from Callimachus, and the story of his tears. He must even deny (c. 68[a]) an appeal from his friend Manlius for consolation on the death of his wife, — perhaps the same Manlius for whose happy bridal he had but a short time before written an exquisite marriage-song (c. 61). And even when Manlius sought to recall him to Rome by hints concerning the scandal aroused by Lesbia's misdoings, the only answer was a sigh (c. 68. 30).

23. Possibly other news also reached him concerning his faithless mistress. At all events when, shortly afterward, he did return to the capital, his eyes were fully opened. Not that he now ceased to love Lesbia, for that was beyond his power, and therein lay his extremest torture. He had lost all faith in her, he knew her now to be but an abandoned prostitute, and yet he could not break the chain of his old regard. 'I hate and love,' he cries, 'I know not how, but I feel the anguish of it' (c. 85).

24. Though he was condemned still to love Lesbia, the former connection with her was now broken off, never to be renewed. Yet he has for her words of sorrow rather than of scorn. Even now, as formerly (c. 104), he cannot malign her, although she has sunk so deep in degradation. In a simple, manly way he declares the fidelity of his love for her (c. 87), and the condition to which he has now been brought by her fault and not his own (c. 75). However difficult it be to associate the idea of pure affection with a passion like his, there is, nevertheless, an appeal of truth in his solemn asseveration at this moment of bitterest grief that his love for Lesbia was not merely the passion of any common man for his paid mistress, but was as the love of a father for his son (c. 72). Not wholly evil, a heart that could feel such an impulse, even toward a mistaken object.

25. But however gentle his treatment of Lesbia, the rivals of Catullus found now no mercy at his hands. For them he had but bitter scorn and anger, since he mistakenly regarded them, and not Lesbia herself, as responsible for her downfall. Egnatius and his set of companions (cc. 37, 39), Gellius (cc. 74, 80, 88, 89, 90, 116), perhaps also Æmilius (c. 97), Victius (c. 98), and Cominius (c. 108), and other unnamed lovers (cc. 71, 78[b]) suffer on this account from the stinging lash of his satire. Even Cælius Rufus, like Quintius an early friend of the poet (c. 100), and like Quintius the subject of remonstrance a short time before (cc. 77, 82), now finds no such gentle treatment (cc. 69, 71?). Possibly, also, the apparent fling at Hortensius in c. 95. 3, who was most kindly addressed in c. 65, may have been prompted by personal rather than by professional jealousy. Most significant, too (cf. § 28), is the bolt aimed at a certain Lesbius (c. 79).

26. The delights of vengeance were perhaps sweet, but they did not bring Catullus peace. The torment of his passion was still raging within him, and from that he longed to find freedom, not again in the arms of his mistress, but in victory over himself. For this he prayed most earnestly (c. 76), and this he finally attained, aided partly, no doubt, by absence from the country (cf. § 29), but more by the persistency with which he kept up the struggle within himself. It may well be, however, that in these months of mental anguish are to be found the beginnings of that disease that caused his untimely death. But the conviction evidently grew upon him that Lesbia had not been led astray by his false friends, but had always been deceitful above all things, and with the clearer insight came not only a gentler feeling toward the men he had judged traitors to friendship (cf. e.g. c. 58 to Cælius Rufus), but a horror and contempt, now unmixed with pity, for Lesbia herself. And when she tried once more, in the day of his reconciliation with Cæsar, and the hope of budding fortune (cf. § 41), to win him back to her, his reply was one of bitter scorn for her, though joined with a touch of sorrowful reminiscence of departed joys.

27. As part of the history of Catullus after the break with Lesbia has thus been anticipated in order to indicate the course of his struggle with himself, it may be well to pause here a few moments longer to ask who this Lesbia was. That we have in the poems of Catullus a real and not an imaginative sketch of a love-episode cannot be once doubted by him who reads. Lesbia is not a lay figure, a mere peg on which to hang fancies, like the shadowy heroines of Horace. That she was no libertina, but a woman of education and of social position, is equally clear from the passages already cited. The name Lesbia, therefore, is immediately suggestive of a pseudonym; and not only the fashions of poetry, but the position of the lady herself, appear at once to justify this expedient on the part of her poet-lover. To this antecedent probability is added the direct testimony of Ovid, who says (Trist. II. 427), sic sua lasciuo cantata est saepe Catullo femina cui falsum Lesbia nomen erat. Apuleius carries us a step further, saying (Apol. 10), eadem igitur opera accusent C. Catullum quod Lesbiam pro Clodia nominarit. The name Lesbia is the proper metrical equivalent for Clodia, as the pseudonym of a mistress should be on the lips of a Roman lover (cf. Bentley on Hor. Carm. II. 12. 13; Acro on Hor. Sat. I. 2. 64).

28. It was reserved, however, for the Italian scholars of the sixteenth century to identify this Clodia with the sister of P. Clodius Pulcher, Cicero's foe, wife of Q. Cæcilius Metellus Celer, who was prætor B.C. 63, then governor of Cisalpine Gaul, consul for the year 60 B.C., and died in 59, not without suspicion that his wife poisoned him (cf. Cic. Cael. 24. 60; Quint. VIII. 6. 53). Among almost all Catullian scholars of the present century this view has found acceptance, in spite of the express dissent of a few. The general character and course of life of this Clodia 'Quadrantaria' (cf. Cic. Cael. and Epp. passim; Drumann II. p. 376 ff.) coincide with those of Lesbia, and many minor details of reference in the poems of Catullus are thus explicable. Especially it may be noted that M. Cælius Rufus (cf. cc. 100, 77, 69, 58) was a lover of this Clodia (cf. Cic. Cael. passim) about the year 58 B.C., and within two years became her bitter enemy. There was all the more likelihood, then, of the reconciliation between him and Catullus marked by c. 58. And if Lesbia be this Clodia, then the Lesbius of c. 79 is her infamous brother, P. Clodius Pulcher, and the epigram becomes clear in the light of historic fact (cf. Commentary).

Journey to Bithynia.

29. But the first date in the life of Catullus that can be definitely fixed by the aid of his own poems is that of his absence from Italy after the final rupture with Lesbia (cf. § 24). He went to Bithynia (cc. 10. 7; 31. 5; 46. 4) on the staff of the governor, Memmius (c. 28. 9). Such expeditions on the part of young Romans of that day are so familiar that it is needless to cite other instances than those (cc. 9, etc., 28) of Veranius and Fabullus, the poet's friends. The ordinary motive was not only a love of adventure, but the desire for acquiring wealth at the expense of the provincials in one of the dozen ways possible under a friendly and not too conscientious official patron. Catullus apparently had not been poverty-stricken, however jestingly he claimed that common distinction of the society-man at the capital, though an increase of income may not have been without attractions for him. He had up to this time, too, apparently loved Rome above all other cities, and had not cared to leave it for any considerable period of time, even that he might visit Greece. But now there were two motives that might lead him to look with desire upon a journey to Bithynia. In the first place, it offered him an opportunity to visit the Troad and to pay the final offerings of love at the grave of his brother (cf. § 22). In the second place, he had been passing through a terrible mental struggle that was perhaps not yet over, and Rome had become painful to him. In the distraction of travel and residence in a foreign clime he might find that absence from himself for which he sighed.

30. How he obtained the appointment we do not know, for there is no earlier reference to Memmius in his poems, and none but uncomplimentary references to him later. But it is not strange that with all his circle of literary friends at Rome he should command influence enough to secure such a post; nor is it strange that C. Memmius, himself a learned man and a verse-writer (Cic. Brut. 70. 247; Ov. Trist. II. 433; Plin. Ep. V. 3. 5; Gell. XIX. 9. 7), was pleased to have the company in his province of such men as Catullus and his poet-friend, C. Helvius Cinna (c. 10. 31).

31. Memmius was prætor in 58 B.C., and therefore in all probability ruled over Bithynia in 57–56 B.C., though this fact cannot be substantiated from other sources. Of the journey of Catullus to Bithynia and of his stay there we have no record up to the period of his approaching return to Italy, save in the one poem (c. 101) in which he commemorates the funeral-offerings at the grave of his brother in the Troad, and speaks the last farewell, — a farewell of infinite sadness because spoken with no hope of a future reunion. To make these offerings of pious affection was one of the motives of Catullus in coming to this distant land, and doubtless the sad duty was not long postponed after his arrival there. What were the other occupations of his life in Bithynia we cannot tell. No poems remain, at any rate, to mark the pleasures of social intercourse, no squibs of raillery, no brilliant bits of fancy, such as distinguish the Roman days of the poet. The year is a long silence. Perhaps he was too sad to write; perhaps the irksomeness and dulness of his official life wore hard upon his Muse; perhaps, however, he was gathering inspiration from their native scenery and legend for those poems of his matured genius, cc. 63 and 64, and had even then begun to block them out. When they were published cannot be determined.

32. Life in Bithynia was surely unsatisfactory from a financial point of view. The cobwebs in the poet's pockets were not displaced by gold. Perhaps the shrewder men on the staff learned better how to make hay while their brief sun was shining. Catullus, however, came back home poor, and blamed Memmius for it. But whether Memmius really deserved the exceedingly opprobrious epithets heaped upon him (cf. cc. 10, 28) may well be doubted. Virulence of language in invective, especially in the use of terms applied to sexual impurity, was by no means accompanied among the ancients by corresponding intensity of feeling, and is often to be understood as formal and not literal.

33. Yet some pleasures in his Bithynian life Catullus must have experienced; for when on the approach of spring (56 B.C.) he bids his companions adieu, it is with a tribute to the delight he has taken in their company (c. 46. 9 dulces comitum coetus), and a reference perhaps to the expected pleasure of a reunion with them in Italy (c. 46. 10–11).

34. But the pain of parting was very insignificant in comparison with the overwhelming joy of home-coming. The exquisite grace of the two sparrow-songs of Catullus (cc. 2, 3) is matched by the most perfect delight that breathes through the pair of poems (cc. 46, 31) that mark the beginning and the end of his homeward voyage. They stand supreme among the poems of home that have come down to us from antiquity, thrilling and quivering with purest and most childlike passion. With this pair of poems probably belongs a third (c. 4), which followed speedily upon the two others.

35. The third of the triad (c. 4) indicates that Catullus made this return voyage in a small vessel of Amastriac build purchased by him for this purpose. It almost seems from his account as if it were built to his order, and that he embarked in it at Amastris rather than at the seaport of Nicæa. And all this, indeed, may be true, in spite of the fact that c. 46 apparently speaks of Nicæa as the point of his immediate departure homeward; for various reasons might be suggested to account for a journey to the eastern part of the province after bidding Nicæa a final farewell.

36. In c. 46. 6 the poet speaks of a plan of visiting claras Asiae urbes on his return voyage. He seems also to feel some joy at the prospect; but this is the only passage in his writings that shows any susceptibility to the charm of historic associations connected with the ancient Greek cities. The course of the homeward voyage is but vaguely sketched in c. 4, and the only city actually mentioned there as visited on the journey is Rhodes (c. 4. 8), though we may infer from c. 46 that other famous sites between the Hellespont and Rhodes were not neglected by him. He may even have visited Athens, for his little ship probably was drawn across the Corinthian isthmus by the famous ship-railway instead of braving the dangers of the longer and rougher passage around the Malean cape. Yet no such mention of Athens exists in his writings as would suggest that he had ever visited, or cared to visit, that city. A similar doubt besets the question of his point of debarkation in Italy. If the expressions of c. 4 were to be taken literally, we must understand that the phasellus carried its master actually up the Po and the little Mincius into the Garda-lake, even to the shores of Sirmio itself. But this is well-nigh impossible; and even if possible, is it likely that the poet, so eager to reach home, would have submitted to the tedium of a tow-boat's voyage (for surely the phasellus could not sail up the Mincius), when a few hours by post from the mouth of the Po would have brought him to his desired haven? Apparently both the beginning and the end of the voyage of the phasellus as recounted in c. 4 are not to be interpreted with strict literalness. But the rapturous joy with which Sirmio is saluted in c. 31 forbids us to suppose that the poet first visited Rome, and later made his way northward. Even the gaiety with which the dedicatory inscription of the model of the phasellus (c. 4) is struck off, — a poem after an entirely new style, — shows that at the time of its composition the first enthusiasm of delight had not yet evaporated.

Later Years. Relations with Cæsar.

37. But even Sirmio could not long detain him from his loved Rome. His reappearance among his old friends is marked by a single poem (c. 10), whose gay and charming humor shows that even the vicinity of Lesbia had lost its power constantly to embitter his thoughts. And to the passion for Lesbia now appears to have succeeded that for a boy, Juventius, with the charms of whose company Catullus perhaps attempted to drive out the thoughts of his former love. How the intimacy began we cannot tell. The Juventian gens sprang from Tusculum, but inscriptions (C. I. L. vol. V. passim) show that people of that name also lived in the neighborhood of Verona. It may be, therefore, that the boy came to Rome under the guardianship of Catullus, as perhaps Catullus, years before, under that of Nepos. But nothing further is known of him beyond what may be inferred from the poems of Catullus that concern him (cf. introductory note to c. 15). His history is interwoven with that of a pair of friends, Aurelius and Furius, both at first friends of Catullus, to the former of whom the poet at one time was led to entrust temporarily the care of his ward (c. 15). The result might have been anticipated. Juventius learned to prefer them to Catullus, and in consequence Catullus vented his wrath upon them in a group of bitter poems (cc. 16, 21, 23, 26), though for Juventius he had only sorrowful remonstrance (cc. 24, 81).

38. Yet all this experience appears to have touched him in no wise deeply. It was but a passing diversion, and his jealousy not the bitter passion felt against his rivals with Lesbia. With far more earnestness did he throw himself into the political quarrel of his time. The year of his return from Bithynia

(56 B.C.) had witnessed the so-called renewal of the triumvirate at Luca, and Cæsar appeared to have won everything. In accordance with the agreement made at the Luca conference, Pompey and Crassus were consuls a second time for the year 55, and the senatorial party was at its wits' end. Catullus was apparently not an active political worker, but he did not hesitate to join his political friends in personal attacks upon the foe. Perhaps his earlier shafts were those aimed against Mamurra (cf. § 73), Cæsar's notorious favorite (cc. 29, 41, 43, 57), whom Catullus sometimes celebrates under the nickname of Mentula (cc. 94, 105, 114, 115), and these opened the way for the direct attack upon Cæsar himself (cc. 54, 93). But whatever the order of attack, that Cæsar was piqued by it we know from Suetonius (Iul. 73). That he made a successful effort to win over Catullus, as he did Calvus, we are also assured from the same source. Cæsar understood better than most Romans that political power in that city and that day must rest largely upon personal popularity, and he was not above exerting himself to win the good will of individuals of high or low degree. And aside from the fascination due to his great political and military success, he had personal traits that gave him a power over young men. It was the mysterious influence of a natural leader of men; and in many more than these two instances the number of his friends was recruited from the ranks of the younger of his fiercest foes. There was another element also that must have tended to promote the reconciliation between Cæsar and Catullus. The father of Catullus was resident at Verona within the limits of Cæsar's Cisalpine province. He may not have taken an active part in politics, but at any rate he was a personal friend of Cæsar, and often his host (Suet. l.c.). This intimacy may well have led him to see clearly what the result of the approaching struggle for supremacy in Rome was likely to be, and to desire the more eagerly to see his son arrayed for Cæsar and not against him.

39. At all events, the reconciliation was brought about, and the lively pen of Catullus ceased to lampoon the great commander. Some have thought, however, that Mamurra was not included in the peace, and that the utmost Cæsar could effect in his favorite's behalf was that his personality should be thereafter thinly veiled under the pseudonym Mentula.

40. But Cæsar was not to profit greatly from his new ally. Up to the end of the year 55 B.C. Catullus displays only hostility to Cæsar and the Cæsarians. The reconciliation apparently took place at the house of the father of Catullus at Verona during the winter visit of the governor to the nearer province in the early part of the year 54 (Cæs. B. G. V. 1). The only poem that shows the change of feeling toward Cæsar is c. 11, and this is connected with another marked incident in the life of the poet.

41. Catullus was now the friend of Cæsar. The great commander was entertained at his father's house, and perhaps even there was making his plans for future campaigns. The fortunes of the poet were rising. What might he not hope for from his great patron, and why should others not share in his success? Furius and Aurelius, scorned by him since their faithlessness in the matter of Juventius, were eager to crawl back into his favor. And they fancied they could bring him a message that would be joyfully greeted, and would secure them the favorable reception they sought for their own advances: Lesbia was willing to recall her recalcitrant lover. She had once before been successful when making the first advances herself (cf. § 19). Why should she fear defeat now? But both she and her ill-chosen emissaries were speedily undeceived. The broken chain of the old love could never be welded again. Catullus had won by absence, by self-discipline, and most of all, perhaps, by real knowledge of facts in the case, the freedom from his passion for which he had prayed (c. 76). He could once more believe in the friendship of Cælius Rufus, and to him acknowledge, with pain, indeed, but no longer with unavailing torture, his true view of Lesbia's character (c. 58). And these proffers now made to him through, and by, Furius and Aurelius were definitely and disdainfully rejected (c. 11),— with a manly, not a petulant disdain, for Catullus could not even then forget that he had loved Lesbia.

42. This manly utterance was almost the last of the poet's life. A few scattered verses there may have been, closing perhaps with the touching appeal written from Verona (cf. § 56) to his brother-poet, Cornificius, for a word of consolation, but that was all; and sometime in the year 54 B.C., in his beloved Rome, so says the chronicler, the swiftly burning candle of his life burned itself out.

43. With him died the clearest, if not the richest, poet-voice ever lifted in Rome. He lacked the lofty grandeur of Lucretius, the polished stateliness of Vergil, the broad sympathies of Horace. For on the one hand, he was no recluse to be filled with heavenly visions, and on the other, his personality was too intense to allow him to cultivate a tolerant spirit. He delighted in life with a vigorous animal passion. Not without charm to him was nature in her sylvan aspect (cf. e.g. c. 34. 9 ff.), yet his highest enjoyment was in the life of men. And this life he did not study, as did Horace, from the standpoint of a philosopher. Indeed, he did not study it at all, but simply felt it. For he was not outside of it, but a part of it to the fullest degree, swayed by its ever-changing emotions. Such a nature must of necessity ever remain in many essential aspects the nature of a child. And such was the nature of Catullus throughout his brief life,—warm in quick affections, hot in swift hatreds, pulsing with most active red blood.

Poems.

44. The great majority of his verses — all the most successful of them — are the direct expression of his own heart at the moment. No poet was ever more unreserved, more perfectly ingenuous. And yet, such is the facility of his genius and the excellence of his taste, his verses show no ruggedness or roughness, but glide along with the utmost ease and swift grace toward their mark. But he was no precisianist in metrics. His hexameters are less perfect and flexible than those of P. Varro or of Lucretius, his elegiacs less harmonious and melting than those of the Augustans, his logaœdics often less melodious than those of Horace. And nevertheless his rhythmical skill suggests constantly that it is the effect of great artfulness.

45. He studied with admiration both the Lesbian and the Alexandrian poets, though it is not easy to determine the precise limits of the influence of either school upon his genius. Part of this difficulty arises from the meagreness of the remains of these Greek writers that have survived the Middle Ages, and part from the intense fire of his own personality that has metamorphosed into its own likeness all the material that came into contact with it. Even when he is professedly translating Sappho or Callimachus (cf. cc. 51, 66), his translation is full of original elements, and is worked out in a personal fashion. He is often Sapphic in his tendency to self-address, and in the warmth and tenderness of his emotions, and often Alexandrian in his liking for episode, for richness of mythological allusion, for striking turns of phrase (cf. especially cc. 63, 64, 68^b passim) ; and yet he is, after all, never other than distinctively Roman.

46. The speech Catullus employs is, as might be expected from what has already been said, the speech of every-day life. It will not be necessary to discuss here its phenomena in detail. It approximates closely in general to the speech of Plautus and Terence and of Cicero's letters, and suggests in some respects that of Petronius and other writers of the Silver Age, abounding as it does in diminutives (for the expression of tenderness, or of scorn, or even without any proper diminutive force), in words of Greek or of provincial extraction, in alliteration and anaphora. Yet in many instances in epic passages, or those of a more elevated tone than the majority of his lyrics, he does not hesitate to employ words and figures that suggest the earlier tragedians rather than the comedians.

47. Cicero, in his later years, professed contempt for the whole tribe of these poetae noui (like Catullus and his friends) who had forsaken all the traditions of Ennius (Or. 161; Tusc. III. 45; Att. VII. 2. 1); and Horace mentions Catullus but once, and then with definite disparagement (Sat. I. 10. 19); but even from these references it may be fairly inferred that the poetry of Catullus was well and acceptably known among his immediate generation of Romans, and had not to wait till the time of the elegiasts for a purely posthumous fame. It was, indeed, not so very long after his death that Cornelius Nepos ventured to rank him in quality alongside Lucretius (Att. 12. 4). His fame, then, was contemporary with himself. But even a cursory examination of his extant book of poems shows evidence that it was not published till after the poet's death. For although it has come down to us mutilated by the accidents of time in a most unseemly manner, no mutilation can account for the condition of c. 58^b, which is clearly but a rejected trial-sketch for the poem afterward elaborated as c. 55, and not a misplaced part of c. 55 itself (note the much greater frequency of dactyls in the second place in the verses of c. 58^b than of c. 55). Would Catullus himself have published such a mere fragment? Still more, would he after the reconciliation with Julius Cæsar have published, or republished, the poems in which Cæsar is bitterly assailed? For this same reason, if for no other, it is also impossible to suppose, with certain critics, that Catullus himself arranged the book for publication, but was overtaken by death before it was actually published.

48. The only satisfactory hypothesis is that the book was both arranged and published, after the author's death, by some literary friend of his at Rome, where he ordinarily kept his books and papers (cf. c. 68. 33–36). The posthumous editor arranged the poems in three general groups. First come sixty shorter poems on various themes, all in iambic or logaœdic rhythms. Then follows the group of longer poems (cc. 61–68^b), introduced by the three epithalamia (cc. 61, 62, 64), with their Eros accompanied by the Anteros of c. 63; this group of poems begins with glyconics (c. 61), continues with dactylic hexameters (cc. 62, 64), divided by passionate galliambics (c. 63), and concludes with elegiacs (cc. 65–68^b). It is followed by a third group of shorter poems (cc. 69–116), all in the elegiac metre, but as varied in theme as the first group. This division was suggested entirely by the metres and length of the poems, and not at all by their subject-matter; for the third group contains poems agreeing in subject and date with others in the first group (cf. e.g. c. 99 with c. 48, c. 81 with c. 24, c. 93 with cc. 29 and 57). Within each group poems on the same or similar themes occasionally stand together (e.g. cc. 2 and 3; cc. 61 and 62; cc. 88–91; cc. 110 and 111), but more frequently are divided by one or more poems on another, and often a contrasted theme (cf. cc. 5 and 7; cc. 21 and 23; cc. 62 and 64; cc. 69 and 71; cc. 70 and 72).

49. The editor certainly included one mere fragment (c. 58^b); and perhaps more of the poems whose condition we attribute to the neglect of a later age (e.g. cc. 2. 11–13; 14^b; 54; 78^b) may have been published by him in their present form, on account of his anxiety to omit no scrap found among his friend's posthumous papers.

50. Another possibility suggests itself. The editor certainly must have disregarded what would have been the wishes of Catullus in publishing, or republishing, the poems against Cæsar, especially if none had yet been written in his favor. The editor was doubtless one of the circle of literary friends of the poet at Rome, and so was, if not, like Catullus, a subject of sudden conversion, an anti-Cæsarian. Is it possible that he still further used his discretion, and served his own sympathies, by refraining from the publication of later poems favorable to Cæsar, and that by this theory, and not by that of the speedy death of the poet, we are to explain the absence in his works of all poems (except c. 11) showing a change of personal, if not of political, feeling? But this question may be reserved for another occasion.

51. It is not to be supposed, however, that all of these poems saw the light for the first time after the death of their author. The manifest point of most of the personal poems would have been utterly lost, had they not been published immediately after their composition, and the passage already cited from Suetonius (Iul. 73) shows clearly that Cæsar was acquainted before their author's death with some of the poems directed against him. One poem also (c. 16. 12) contains an evident reference to the earlier publication of c. 48 (or of cc. 5 and 7?). It seems likely, therefore, that many of the poems were published singly, at least among the circle of the poet's friends, while the extant dedication of a libellus to Cornelius Nepos suggests that a smaller collection of them was made and published by Catullus himself (cf. introductory note to c. 1).

52. Catullus undoubtedly wrote other poems than those included in the extant liber, but of the fragments attributed to him by the grammarians some are proved to have been falsely so ascribed, and the few remaining are, even if genuine, so slight as to be insignificant (cf. Commentary on cc. 18–21).

Manuscripts.

53. The popularity enjoyed by Catullus among the Augustan elegiasts did not preserve his memory alive through the declining centuries of the Roman empire. The scholars and poets of the latter half of the first millennium after Christ had forgotten even his name. Only Rather, bishop of Verona, in a sermon delivered there in 965 A.D., confesses that he had just become acquainted with his writings; and an anthology of Latin poets written at about the same time (now cod. Thuaneus, Parisinus 8071) contains a single poem of Catullus (c. 62). Then he drops out of ken once more till the opening of the 14th century, when a writer of Vicenza, Benvenuto Campesani (who died before 1330), celebrated in a few enigmatic verses (cf. Critical Appendix ad fin.) the rediscovery of the text of Catullus 'under a bushel,' apparently at Verona. From this MS., or from copies of it, numerous Italian scholars, among them Petrarch, early learned to know the poet. The original MS. soon disappeared, and has never been found; but two descendants of it, apparently not more than one generation removed, are preserved to us, and form the basis of the present text of Catullus. One of these copies, ordinarily called G (now No. 14,137 in the National Library at Paris) was made in the year 1375, and the other, O (No. 30 of the Canonici Latin MSS. in the Bodleian Library) at about the same time. (Cf. also introductory note to Critical Appendix.)

54. The earlier editions of Catullus, however, were based upon interpolated MSS., and though displaying great erudition and classical taste left much to be desired in the way of true principles of textual criticism. The edition of Karl Lachmann (Berlin, 1829) first established the text of Catullus upon a scientific basis, though the two MSS. on which he mainly depended, D and L (in the Royal Library at Berlin), are far inferior to G and O. These became first known to the world, G in 1830 through I. Sillig (Jahrb. für Philol. xiii. p. 262 ff.), and O through Robinson Ellis in his first edition of Catullus (Oxford, 1867). During the last quarter of a century, then, the constitution as well as the elucidation of the text of Catullus has made its most marked advances.

Friends and Foes.

55. A few of the persons distinguished by the love or by the hatred of Catullus may conveniently be mentioned here. Some such persons, however, as Cæsar, Cicero, and Clodius, are so well known otherwise to the ordinary reader as to need no biographical notice in a work of this sort. Others, like Lesbia, have been sufficiently noticed in previous paragraphs of this Introduction. Still others are of so little present importance, or are so little known to us outside the mention of them by Catullus, that the brief references to them in the commentary on the individual poems may suffice. The names of all these, with references to the poems in which they are addressed or mentioned, may be found in the Index of Proper Names at the end of this volume.

56. It is a temptation to identify the Alfenus to whom the remonstrance of c. 30 is addressed with P. Alfenus Varus, consul suffectus 39 B.C., especially if he, in turn, can be identified with the Alfenus Varus who protected Vergil's property at Mantua (Ecl. 1, 6, 9), who was perhaps a native of Cremona (though falsely identified by the scholiasts on Horace with Alfenus uafer of Sat. I. 3. 130). For if Varus was at Cremona during the winter and spring of 55–54 B.C., while Catullus was at Verona (cf. § 40), we perhaps have a key to the difference in tone between c. 30 and c. 38. From Cornificius at Rome the poet could expect in his growing illness only written comfort, and that is all he asks. Alfenus Varus at Cremona was within easy reaching distance of Verona by a direct highway, the Via Postumia, and might have visited Catullus in person, but did not. Hence the deeper feeling of slight with which Catullus addresses him.

57. The 'Pollio frater' of c. 12. 6 is very likely the only Pollio known to us from this period, C. Asinius, Cn. f. (born 75 B.C., died 5 A.D.), who became prætor in 45 B.C. and consul in 40, in which year he gained a triumph over the Parthini. At first a Cæsarian, he might have been won over to the senatorial party after Cæsar's death, but finally cast in his lot with Antonius, from whom, however, he became alienated, but without entering the circle of the intimate friends of Augustus. As orator, dramatic and lyric poet, historian of the first triumvirate, and literary critic, he gained lasting fame, and is frequently quoted by succeeding writers. Among his intimate friends were Vergil and Horace; cf. Verg. Ecl. 3. 84; 4; 8. 6; Hor. Carm. II. 1; Sat. I. 10. 42, 85.

58. Nothing further is known of the older brother of Pollio addressed in c. 12. The family of the Asinii sprang from Teate, the capital of the Marrucini, but it is doubtful whether Marrucine in c. 12. 1 is simply a distinguishing epithet. C. Asinius Pollio is the first of the family known to bear a cognomen, and perhaps that custom was introduced in his generation, his elder brother taking the cognomen Marrucinus from the seat of the family.

59. The Cælius of c. 58 is probably identical with the Cælius of cc. 82 and 100, and with the Rufus of cc. 69 and 77 (and also cc. 73 and 59?), the names and circumstances suggesting M. Cælius Rufus, born, according to Pliny (N. H. VII. 165), on the same day with C. Licinius Calvus, May 28, 82 B.C. (though perhaps this date is too late, by a few years, for the birth of Cælius). Cælius is well known as an ambitious politician and an orator (Cic. Brut. 79. 273; Quint. Inst. VI. 3. 69; X. 1. 115; 2. 25; Tac. Dial. 18, 21, 25). He was at first a partisan of the optimates; but after filling the offices of tribune (52 B.C.), quæstor, and curule ædile (50 B.C.), and contracting immense debts by his extravagant life, he became a follower of Cæsar, and was by him made prætor for the year 48. But being shortly thereafter deposed for attempts at revolutionary legislation, he tried to seduce certain of Cæsar's troops, and was finally killed under the walls of Thurii. He was an active and interesting correspondent of Cicero, by whom he was defended (56 B.C.) in the famous speech pro Caelio against the charge of attempted poisoning brought by Clodia (Lesbia), whose favored lover he had been. He himself appears to have broken this connection, and perhaps to have opened the eyes of Catullus to Lesbia's real character, after which the friendship was again cemented between him and Catullus which had been severed by their rivalry (cf. §§ 25, 26). The poems addressed to him were apparently written in about the following order: cc. 100, 82, 77, (73), 69, (59), 58.

60. C. Licinius Macer Calvus, apparently the most intimate friend of Catullus, was the son of the annalist, Licinius Macer, and was born May 28, 82 B.C. (cf. Plin. l.c.). He died in, or not very long before, the year 47 B.C. (cf. Cic. Fam. XV. 21, 4). He was renowned as a most able and skilful orator, though of low stature (cf. 53. 5; Sen. Contr. VII. 4. 7; Ov. Trist. II. 431), and as a writer of epic, lyric, and epigram (cf. Cic. Brut. 279, 283; Tac. Dial. 18; Quint. Inst. X. 1. 115; Plin. Ep. I. 16. 5; Gell. XIX. 9. 7; Serv. on Verg. Ecl. 6. 47; 8. 4). On account of his intimacy with Catullus and the similarity of their political principles (cf. Suet. Iul. 73) and of their writings they are often named together (cf. with above Hor. Sat. I. 10. 19, and indexes to Propertius and Ovid). The few extant fragments of his works are appended to the editions of Catullus by Lachmann and L. Müller. The death of Quintilia, apparently from the tone of c. 96 the wife of Calvus, gave occasion for one of the finest and most touching of the briefer poems of Catullus.

61. The Cornificius to whom Catullus addressed the pathetic appeal of c. 38 was a poet (cf. vv. 7 and 8), and is doubtless to be identified with the Cornificius mentioned by Ovid (Trist. II. 436) in connection with other verse-writers of the period of Catullus. It is not so clear, though quite possible, that he is the Q. Cornificius to whom Cicero wrote friendly letters (Fam. XII. 17–30), dated between 45 and 43 B.C. This Cornificius was an active officer of Julius Cæsar, a member of the college of augurs, and later governor of the province of Africa, which he endeavored to hold against T. Sextius, the general of the second triumvirate. His death is mentioned by Jerome under date of 41 B.C.: Cornificius poeta a militibus desertus interiit, quos saepe fugientes 'galeatos lepores' adpellarat. If this be the friend of Catullus, he may perhaps be counted as another of the group of young writers won over by Cæsar from the ranks of his political foes. His interest and activity in rhetorical studies are distinctly indicated by Cicero, and there seems to be no good reason to doubt that he is the Cornificius rhetor not infrequently quoted by Quintilian. With but slightly less probability may be attributed to him the work on the derivation of the names of the gods ascribed by Macrobius and Priscian to an author of his name: but the verse in criticism of a grammatical point in Vergil attributed by Cledonius (V. 43. 2) to Cornificius Gallus may have been written, as some have thought, by Cornelius Gallus. Only two fragments of the verses of Cornificius have been preserved, one a hendecasyllabic (Macr. VI. 4. 12), and the other the latter part of a hexameter from his Glaucus (Macr. VI. 5. 13). They are appended by L. Müller to his edition of Catullus.

62. The Cato to whom c. 56 is addressed was probably not that pattern of ancient Roman strictness, M. Porcius Cato, later called Uticensis, but the grammarian, Valerius Cato, who was a countryman of Catullus (Suet. Gram. 11), and whose amatory poems are mentioned by Ovid (Trist. II. 436) in connection with those of Cinna (cf. § 63), Cornificius (cf. § 61), and Anser.

63. C. Helvius Cinna, a companion of Catullus on the staff of Memmius (cf. c. 10. 30 and § 30), whose epic poem, the Zmyrna, is praised in c. 95, was probably the Cæsarian tribune mistaken for L. Cornelius Cinna, the anti-Cæsarian, in the riots attending the funeral of Julius Cæsar, and killed by the populace (Plut. Brut. 20, Iul. 68; Suet. Iul. 85; cf. Shakspere Jul. Cæs. III. 3). The insignificant extant fragments of his poems are appended by L. Müller to his edition of Catullus.

64. The Cornelius of c. 1. 1 seems to be Cornelius Nepos, the historian; witness Ausonius, who says (XXIII. 1–3) 'Cui . . . libellum' Veronensis ait poeta quondam, inuentoque dedit statim Nepoti. Nepos (circ. 94–24 B.C.) was certainly a provincial from Cisalpine Gaul (Plin. N. H. III. 127 Nepos Padi accola), and probably a native of Ticinum (Plin. Ep. IV. 28. 1; Mommsen in Hermes III. p. 62). His acquaintance with Catullus, though nothing certain can be traced concerning it, was doubtless fostered by their similarity of origin (cf. § 12). Nepos was author not only of the work De Viris Illustribus, of which a part, with lives of Cato and of Atticus, is still extant, but also of other historical works (cf. c. 1. 6 n.) and of poems (Plin. Ep. V. 3. 6).

65. Q. Hortensius Ortalus (114–50 B.C.), Cicero's greatest rival as an orator, was also somewhat of a historian (Vell. II. 16. 3), and wrote erotic poems (Ov. Trist. II. 441; Plin. Ep. V. 3. 5), which the Greeks at the banquet of Antonius Julianus (Gell. XIX. 9. 7) characterized as inuenusta, though they admitted that Catullus and Calvus wrote some verses comparable with those of Anacreon. Presuming, perhaps, upon his own gifts as a poet, Hortensius asked Catullus for a poem (c. 65. 18–19), and the poet complied with the request, though with an absence of compliment that indicates no intimate friendship with his petitioner, whose much greater age and high position gave him, however, the power to become an influential patron. That the friendship made no progress seems to be indicated by the uncomplimentary allusion to the verses of Hortensius in c. 95. 3 (cf. however § 25 ad fin.).

66. The Varus of c. 10 is apparently identical with the Varus of c. 22, who is a friend of Catullus and a critic of poetry, if not a poet himself. This may well be the distinguished Quintilius Varus, the Augustan critic (Hor. A. P. 438 ff.) and poet (Acro and Comm. Cruq. on l.c.). He is called a native of Cremona; and his death in 23 B.C. (according to Jerome) drew from Horace a touching address of sympathy to Vergil (Carm. I. 24). Judged from the tone of the passage in the Ars Poetica, Quintilius must have been somewhat older than Horace, while yet he could hardly have been born long, if at all, before Catullus. The attempt to identify the Varus of c. 10 and c. 22 with Alfenus Varus of c. 30 is unsatisfactory.

67. The Manlius Torquatus, whose marriage with Vinia Aurunculeia is celebrated in c. 61, was perhaps the L. Manlius Torquatus whose father was consul in 65 B.C. (cf. Hor. Carm. III. 21. 1; Epod. 13. 6), and who was himself prætor in 49. He allied himself with the Pompeians, and was killed in Africa in 47 (cf. Bell. Afr. 96). In 62 B.C. Manlius prosecuted P. Cornelius Sulla on the charge of conspiracy with Catiline. Cicero and Hortensius appeared for the defence and secured an acquittal. In Cicero's speech on that occasion (Pro Sulla), and especially in his Brutus (76. 265), Manlius is highly praised.

68. A certain Veranius is mentioned in cc. 12, 28, and 47 in connection with a Fabullus, evidently an intimate friend of his, as both were of Catullus. Beside these three references to them jointly, c. 9 is addressed to Veranius alone, and c. 13 to Fabullus alone, the equal recognition thus scrupulously given them by Catullus suggesting the existence of a close bond of intimacy between the two friends. Nothing more is known of them than can be gathered from Catullus himself. Veranius has in c. 9 just returned from a residence in Spain, and in c. 12 the presence there of Fabullus also is noted. The 13th poem, too, a jesting reference to a prospective dinner offered Fabullus, appears to have been written while Fabullus was absent somewhere, or had just returned, and may well refer to the same occasion as c. 9, the different tone of the individual poems, one sportive, and one affectionate, corresponding to characteristic differences in the dispositions of the two friends. In cc. 28 and 47 Veranius and Fabullus have been away from Rome as members of the retinue of a certain Piso, a provincial governor. They returned to Rome apparently not long after the time of the return of Catullus himself from Bithynia (56 B.C.; cf. § 31 ff.).

69. If, then, there be such a connection as indicated between cc. 9 and 13, the absence in Spain cannot have been that with Piso, and must have preceded it by several years; for the reference to Lesbia in c. 13. 11 clearly antedates the break of Catullus with her, and that occurred before his journey to Bithynia. But it is not incredible that two friends so intimately connected as Veranius and Fabullus should have been together on more than one journey after fortune; and the journey to Spain like the later one with Piso (cf. § 70) may well have been on the staff of a provincial governor, — probably about 60 B.C., as the reference to Lesbia indicates (cf. c. 13. 11 n.).

70. The Piso unfavorably commented upon in cc. 28 and 47 (cf. § 68) is probably L. Calpurnius Piso Cæsoninus, consul in 58 B.C. (the year of Cicero's exile), and in 57–55 governor of Macedonia, where he made an honorable record. After his return to Rome in 55 B.C. he attempted to reply to certain strictures of Cicero uttered in his absence, and drew down upon himself the overwhelming invective power of his adversary in the famous speech In Pisonem, in which the whole life, character, and actions of Piso were held up to undeserved obloquy.

71. The service of Catullus on the staff of C. Memmius, governor of Bithynia, has already been discussed (§ 29 ff.). Concerning Memmius himself we may add further that neither his political nor his personal character was above reproach. He was in 54 B.C. party to a most barefaced attempt to secure the consulship by bribing the consuls of that year (Cic. Att. IV. 18. 2), and was charged with the seduction of the wives of Lucullus (Cic. Att. I. 18. 3) and Pompey (Suet. Gram. 14). He appears to better advantage as a scholar and the patron of literary men, especially of Lucretius, who dedicated his great poem to him. Cicero (Brut. 70. 247) speaks well of his Greek scholarship, and of his ability in oratory, though blaming him for lack of application. Accused of ambitus in 53 B.C., on account of the operations of the preceding year, he went into exile in Greece (cf. Cic. Fam. XIII. 1), where he died about the year 49.

72. Prominent among the invective poems of Catullus is a group directed against a certain Gellius. This comprises cc. 74, 80, 88, 89, 90, 91, 116, but the poems are not arranged in chronological order. Apparently the earliest in composition is c. 116, and the second c. 91, — the first indicating that Catullus had tried to avert the hostility of Gellius by sending him translations from Callimachus, but declaring from that time open war, while the second asserts that Gellius had broken the bond of friendship with Catullus by becoming a lover of Lesbia. In c. 80. 1 the youth of Gellius is indicated, and in all the series except c. 116 he is charged with various abhorrent crimes. The most acceptable suggestion of his identity was originally made by Pantagathus (†1578), who judged him to be that son of L. Gellius Publicola (consul 72 B.C.) who is said by Valerius Maximus (V. 9. 1) to have been accused before the senate of in nouercam (cf. c. 88. 1, etc.) commissum stuprum et parricidium cogitatum. This younger Gellius was himself consul in 36 B.C., and his age therefore also accords with the intimations of Catullus. The patruus of c. 74 is identified by some critics with the Gellius Publicola attacked by Cicero in Pro Sestio 51. 110, while yet others have supposed, but with no sufficient reason, that this Gellius, and not the one of Valerius Maximus, is the Gellius assailed by Catullus.

73. The attacks of Catullus upon Mamurra have already been mentioned (§ 38). That he is identical with the 'Mentula' of cc. 94, 105, 114, and 115 we may be tolerably certain on noting the use of that name for Mamurra in c. 29. 13, and on comparing the wealth and extravagance of the two men (cc. 114 and 115 with cc. 29, 41, and 43), their literary pretensions (c. 105 with c. 57. 7), and their licentiousness (cc. 94 and 115. 7–8 with cc. 29. 7–8 and 57). These latter indications, however, but support that of c. 29. 13, and would not independently establish the identity.

74. A sufficient biography of Mamurra is given by Pliny (N. H. XXXVI. 6. 48), who says he was an eques of Formiæ and praefectus fabrum of Cæsar in Gaul, and quotes Nepos as authority for the statement that Mamurra first of the Romans incrusted the entire walls of his house on the Cælian with marble, and had within it none but solid marble columns. Cicero, too, mentions Mamurra's ill-gotten wealth (Att. VII. 7. 6), and in Att. XIII. 52. 1 (written in 45 B.C.) refers to the calm way in which Cæsar received news of his death (so Nipperdey interprets the allusion). The connection of Mamurra with the provincial Ameana (cc. 41, 43) may be assigned to the time when he was in attendance upon Cæsar in his winter journeys to the nearer province.

75. The poet Volusius of cc. 36 and 95 is probably not to be identified with Tanusius Geminus, as Muretus and other later writers would have it. The only ground for such identification is a remark made by Seneca (Ep. 93. 11 annales Tanusii scis quam ponderosi sint et quid uocentur). But of all the names that appear in Catullus, Lesbia and Lesbius are the only ones known to be pseudonyms (for Mentula is hardly a name, but an easily recognized epithet). And the quid uocentur of Seneca may readily refer to some other popular characterization of the work of the annalist, and not to the cacata charta of c. 36. 1.

Metres.

The metres employed by Catullus are as follows: —

76. Dactylic Hexameter (cc. 62, 64) and Elegiacs (cc. 65–116). The occurrence of spondaic verses is very frequent, and doubtless is due to Alexandrian influence. In all, there are 42 such verses, of which 34 end in a quadrisyllable. In only ten instances is this a proper name. In c. 64 there is a succession of three spondaic verses (vv. 78–80). — The tendency to employ a succession of spondees in the same verse is striking. Thus c. 116. 3 is made up entirely of spondees, and 71 verses have spondees in the first four places. — The penthemimeral caesura is by far the favorite, though the hephthemimeral occurs occasionally; and the feminine caesura in the third foot is not unknown, though it is entirely excluded from the fourth. — The hexameters end preferably in a dissyllable or trisyllable, but in the ending of the pentameters greater freedom is allowed. — Hypermeters are found in c. 64. 298 and c. 115. 5. On hiatus, see § 86 d.

77. Pure Iambic Trimeter (c. 4). Perhaps c. 29 is in the same metre; but cf. note on Mamurram in v. 3.

78. Iambic Trimeter (c. 52, and perhaps c. 29), with the optional substitution of a spondee for the first iambus of any dipody. The scheme, then, is, —

79. Choliambic or Scazon (cc. 8, 22, 31, 37, 39, 44, 59, 60). The scheme is as follows: —

$$\| \asymp : \smile | - \asymp | \smile | - \cup | \llcorner | \smile \|.$$

Thrice also the thesis is resolved (in cc. 22. 19; 37. 5; 59. 3, — unless in c. 37. 5 we read cōnfūtūēre as a quadrisyllable).

80. Iambic Tetrameter Catalectic, otherwise called Iambic Septenarius (c. 25). The scheme is, —

81. Phalaecean, often called Hendecasyllabic (cc. 1–3, 5–7, 9, 10, 12–16, 21, 23, 24, 26–28, 32, 33, 35, 36, 38, 40–43, 45–50, 53–58^b). The scheme is, —

$$\| \frac{\smile}{\cup} \frac{\asymp}{-} | - \cup \cup | \smile \cup | - \cup | \smile \cup \|.$$

It may be remarked that while the verse most frequently opens with the irrational trochee (as always in Martial), there are nearly seventy exceptions to this rule, and they are about evenly divided between the regular trochaic opening and that with the iambus. The peculiar experiment with this metre tried in cc. 55 and 58^b is noted in the introduction to c. 55.

82. Glyconic and Pherecratic series are combined by Catullus as follows: —

a. A second Glyconic catalectic followed by a second Pherecratic acatalectic forms the verse called Priapean, used in c. 17. The scheme is, —

$$\| \smile \asymp | - \cup \cup | \smile \cup | \llcorner \| \smile \asymp | - \cup \cup | \llcorner | - \wedge \|.$$

The first series in this verse ends with a complete word, and does not allow hiatus after it: elision occurs there four times (vv. 4, 11, 24, 26).

b. The stanza of c. 34 is composed of four verses, of which the first three are second Glyconics catalectic, and the fourth a second Pherecratic acatalectic. The stanza of c. 61 is similar, but with four, instead of three, Glyconics. The scheme of the Glyconics thus arranged is, —

Synapheia is observed throughout, as in the Priapean stanza. Once an irrational spondee takes the place of the cyclic dactyl (c. 61. 25).

83. Greater Asclepiadic verses compose c. 30. The scheme of each is as follows: —

Contrary to the practice of Horace, caesura is not always observed between the successive series in each verse.

84. The Sapphic stanza (cc. 11, 51) as used by Catullus has the following scheme: —

$$1.\ 2.\ 3\ \| - \smile \smile | - (\geq) | - \smile \smile | - \smile \smile | - \smile \smile \|$$
$$4\ \| - \smile \smile | - | - \wedge \| .$$

In allowing a trochee thrice in place of the irrational spondee (cc. 11. 6; 11. 15; 51. 13), and in indifference to the caesura, Catullus resembles Sappho more closely than does Horace.

85. In c. 63 the Galliambic verse is used. It is said to have originated as a lesser Ionic tetrameter catalectic, having, therefore, the following scheme: —

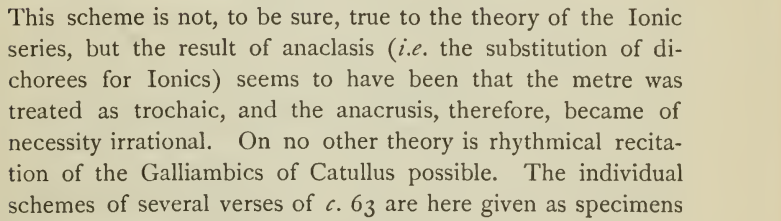

$$\| \smile \smile : - - \smile \smile | - - \smile \smile | - - \smile \smile | \sqcup \overline{\wedge} \| .$$

But as used by Catullus anaclasis always occurs (except in vv.

54 and 60?), and the resultant trochees are often, the last almost always, resolved. The scheme may therefore be written as follows (the regularly occurring caesura being indicated by a comma) : —

This scheme is not, to be sure, true to the theory of the Ionic series, but the result of anaclasis (i.e. the substitution of dichorees for Ionics) seems to have been that the metre was treated as trochaic, and the anacrusis, therefore, became of necessity irrational. On no other theory is rhythmical recitation of the Galliambics of Catullus possible. The individual schemes of several verses of c. 63 are here given as specimens of the application of the general scheme : —

Prosody.

86. a. Catullus was unusually fond of Elision, admitting it freely under almost every circumstance.

b. On the other hand, he admitted Diaeresis only five times : cc. 2. 13 soluit ; 61. 53 soluunt ; 66. 38 dissoluo ; 66. 74 euoluam ; 95. 5 peruoluent.

c. Synaeresis occurs in cc. 40. 1 Rauide ; 55. 10 Camerium ; 62. 57 conubium ; 64. 120 praeoptarit ; 82. 3 ei.

d. Hiatus in thesis is found in cc. 66. 11 nouo auctus; 68. 158 primo omnia; 107. 1 cupido optanti. In cc. 27. 4, 66. 48, and 97. 2, it occurs in the MSS., but not in the emended text here presented. Hiatus in arsis occurs in cc. 10. 27 mane inquii; 55. 4 te in; 97. 1 di ament; 114. 6 domo ipse.

e. Systole of final o is not uncommon, especially in verbs. In 10. 26 commodă (imperative) occurs.

f. Diastole occurs in cc. 64. 360 tepēfaciet, and 90. 6 liquēfaciens (but cf. 68. 29 tepĕfactet).

g. In c. 116. 8 dabis final s does not make position with the initial consonant following; and in c. 23. 27 the reading of V, satis beatus, is probably correct, representing satis beatu's (i.e. beatus es). In cc. 62. 4, 64. 20, and 66. 11 a final syllable ending in a single consonant is lengthened in thesis before hymenaeus. A final syllable ending in a short vowel is thrice lengthened in thesis before a mute followed by r (in cc. 4. 9 Propontida trucem; 4. 18 impotentia freta; 29. 4 ultima Britannia); and it is noticeable that all these instances occur in pure (?) iambics. A similar syllable is lengthened in thesis before initial s followed by a consonant in cc. 17. 24 pote stolidum; 22. 12 modo scurra; 44. 18 nefaria scripta; 63. 53 gelida stabula; 64. 186 nulla spes; 67. 32 supposita speculae. But Catullus is not careful to follow out this rule of position in all cases, any more than he is consistent in instances of systole and diastole, or in such cases as cc. 43. 2 nĭgris, but 68. 63 nīgro; and especially 71. 2 podāgra, but 71. 6 podăgra. In these minor matters he allows himself greater freedom than either Lucretius or the later poets, and the same liberty is seen in the greater matters concerned with his treatment of metres. His graceful command of rhythm was far removed from the fixed formalities adopted by the Augustans.

CATVLLI VERONENSIS LIBER.

Cui dono lepidum nouum libellum
Arido modo pumice expolitum ?

1. A modest dedication to Cornelius. The poem probably served originally as an introduction to a part only of the extant liber Catulli. The entire collection is too large, and too varied in contents, to be described by the word libellus used in v. 1 (cf. Birt, Antike Buchwesen, pp. 22, 291, 401 ff.). The original libellus may have included, as Bentley and others after him have thought, cc. 1–60, but more likely was of undeterminable content, being incorporated in the entire liber published shortly after the poet's death (cf. Intr. 48, 51). — Metre, Phalaecean.

1–3. With the rhetorical question and answer, cf. 100. 5 cui faueam potius? Caeli, tibi: nam, etc.

1. cui: see Crit. App. — dono: the indicative present with future meaning is sometimes used to express the imminence of decision in questions implying great anxiety or eagerness; cf. 63. 55; Plaut. Cas. 384 compressan palma an porrecta ferio? Cic. Att. XIII. 40 aduolone an maneo? Verg. Aen. IV. 534 en quid ago? rursusne procos experiar? Sen. Contr. II. 3 (11). 19 carnifex dicat, 'agon?' — lepidum nouum: of the external rather than of the internal character of the book; cf. 22. 6 noui libri; 78. 1 lepidissima coniunx; Plaut. Pseud. 27 lepidis litteris, lepidis tabellis, lepida conscripta manu; Stat. Silu. IV. 9. 7 noster [libellus] purpureus nouusque charta; Mart. IV. 10. 1 dum nouus est, rasa nec adhuc mihi fronte libellus. The tone is as if the young author held in his hands his first completed volume, and were charmed by its aspect; of its intrinsic merits he speaks modestly in vv. 8–10. — In 6. 17 lepidus refers to the dainty character of the verse itself (cf. Mart. VIII. 3. 19; XI. 20. 9 lepidos libellos), and Ausonius evidently understood it in that sense here; Aus. 23. 1–4 'cui . . . libellum' Veronensis ait poeta quondam . . . at nos inlepidum, rudem libellum. — libellum: especially used of a book of poetry, shorter than a prose liber; cf. Birt, l.c.

2. arido: a formal epithet of pumex; cf. Plaut. Aul. 297 pumex non aequest aridus quam hic est senex; Mart. VIII. 72. 2 morsu pumicis aridi politus. In 23. 12 ff. horn is mentioned as a typical dry substance. — pumice: the ends of the papyrus-roll were rubbed smooth with pumice-stone; cf. 22. 8 n.

3. Corneli: i.e. Cornelius Nepos; cf. Intr. 12, 64. — solebas: probably in the way of private friendship.

4. aliquid, of some value: cf. Cic. Tusc. V. 36. 104 eos esse aliquid putare; Ov. Fast. VI. 27 est aliquid nupsisse Ioui; Prop. Hor. Sat. I. 9. 2 nescio quid meditans nugarum; Mart. I. 113. 6 per quem perire non licet meis nugis; Aus. 26. 1. 1 latebat inter nugas meas libellus ignobilis.

5. iam tum cum, etc.: i.e. even then, at the beginning of my career, when you were already well known and engaged on your great work. The reference is probably not to a direct mention of Catullus in the projected book. — unus Italorum: other Romans had written only annalistic histories of their own country, or general histories covering limited periods.

6. omne aeuum: i.e. the work was a history of the world from the earliest period to his own time, — probably the (lost) Chronica mentioned by Ausonius in Ep. 16. 1 Nepotis Chronica, quasi alios apologos (nam et ipsa instar sunt fabularum) ad nobilitatem tuam misi. The Chronica was doubtless a chronological work like the Annalium Libri III. of Varro, mentioned by Jerome, and the Annalis of Atticus (cf. Nep. Att. 18. 1). — chartis: single pieces of papyrus prepared for writing: cf. 22. 6; Hor. Ep. II. 1. 113 calamum et chartas et scrinia posco; then of the writings themselves: cf. 36. 1, 20; 68. 46; Hor. Carm. IV. 8. 21 si chartae sileant quod bene feceris; Mart. V. 26. 2 aliqua cum iocarer in charta; then of divisions of the writings, books, as here: cf. Q. Ser. Samm. 721 tertia namque Titi simul et centesima Liui charta docet.

7. Iuppiter: with this use as an expletive, like edepol, ecastor, mehercule, medius fidius, etc., cf. 66. 30; Plaut. Merc. 865 Iuppiter, estne illic Charinus? Aul. 241 sed pro Iuppiter, num ego disperii? Ter. Ad. 757 o Iuppiter, hancine uitam!

8. habe tibi: an expression of the conveyance of rights in property, to the formal effect of which the preceding quare contributes: cf. the formula of divorce quoted from the Twelve Tables in Plaut. Trin. 266 tuas res tibi habeto; Mart. X. 51. 16 quae tua sunt, tibi habe; quae mea, redde mihi; Plaut. Bacch. 1142 si quam debes, te condono; tibi habe; Ter. Phor. 435 te oblectet; tibi habe. The familiarity of the traditional order of the words in these formulae may have given rise to the unmetrical tibi habe of V. — quidquid . . . qualecumque: said with modest self-depreciation; quare habe tibi, 'so take it,' quidquid hoc libelli, 'tis all thine,' qualecumque, 'such as it is.' With quidquid hoc libelli as a quantita-

Qualecumque, quod, o patrona uirgo,
Plus uno maneat perenne saeclo.

2.

Passer, deliciae meae puellae,
Quicum ludere, quem in sinu tenere, tive expression, cf. 31. 14; 37. 4 (like quantum with a genitive in 3. 2; 9. 10); Liv. XXIII. 9 iurantes per quidquid deorum est; Hor. Epod. 5. 1 at o deorum quidquid in caelo regit; Sat. I. 6. 1 Lydorum quidquid Etruscos incoluit fines, nemo generosior est te; Verg. Aen. I. 78 tu mihi quodcumque hoc regni concilias; Tib. II. 2. 15 gemmarum quidquid felicibus Indis nascitur. — Est is to be supplied with hoc (cf. Verg. l.c.), and then the quidquid clause is modified by qualecumque directly, in a politely deprecatory tone: cf. Hor. Sat. I. 10. 88 quibus haec, sunt qualiacumque, adridere uelim.

9. patrona uirgo: the muse of lyric poetry, to whom, as one of the guardians of song, the poet prays for the long life of his book: cf. Suet. Gram. 6 scriptores ac poetae sub clientela sunt Musarum; Sulpicia 11 precibus descende clientis et audi. With uirgo, of the Muse, cf. 65. 2; Prop. III. 30. 33 nec tu uirginibus reuerentia moueris ora. But some critics, with Guarinus, understand the reference of Pallas.

10. plus uno saeclo: a modest statement of an indefinite extent of time: cf. Hor. Carm. I. 32. 2 quod et hunc in annum uiuat et plures. With the modest prayer of Catullus for abiding fame, cf. the proud reliance of Horace upon the judgment of his patron (Carm. I. 1. fin.), and, later, his assurance of immortality (Carm. III. 30).

2. The poet envies Lesbia's pet sparrow. — This poem appears to date from the heyday of Catullus' connection with Lesbia (cf. 3. 3 n.), concerning whose identity, see Intr. 27 ff. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. passer: the occurrence of this word and its diminutive as pet names in the works of Plautus shows that even much earlier than this the Romans were accustomed to make pets of sparrows: cf. Plaut. Cas. I. 50 meus pullus passer; As. III. 3. 74 dic igitur me tuum passerculum. Other names of birds are used in the same way (cf. ll. cc.), and other birds are mentioned as pets; cf. 68. 125 (columbus); Plaut. Capt. 1002 (monedula, anas, coturnix); Ov. Am. II. 6. 1 psittacus . . . occidit; Stat. Silu. II. 4. 1 psittace . . . domini facunda uoluptas; Mart. I. 7. 1 Stellae delicium mei columba (cf. VII. 14. 5); XIV. 73 (psittacus); XIV. 74 (coruus); XIV. 75 (luscinia); XIV. 76 (pica), etc. The sparrow was sacred to Aphrodite, according to Sappho, and so an especially fitting pet for Lesbia. — deliciae: of a living object of endearment; cf. 6. 1; 32. 2; and the repetition of this verse, 3. 4. Elsewhere in Catullus deliciae is used of inanimate objects (69. 4) and of acts of endearment (45. 24; 68. 26; 74. 2). — meae puellae: cf. 3. 3 n.

2. quicum: for qui as ablative of the relative pronoun cf. 66. 77; 69. 8; 116. 3; and for the same

Cui primum digitum dare adpetenti
Et acris solet incitare morsus,
Cum desiderio meo nitenti
Carum nescio quid libet iocari
(Et solaciolum sui doloris, Credo, ut tum grauis adquiescat ardor), form as interrogative 67. 17; 72. 7. — in sinu tenere, etc.: pressing the sparrow to her bosom with one hand, she holds him confined while teasing him with, and provoking him to peck at the extended fore-finger of the other hand.

3. primum digitum, finger-tip. — adpetenti: in hostile attack; cf. Plaut. Cist. 208 ita me amor . . . agit adpetit raptat; Tac. Hist. IV. 42 adpetitum morsu Pisonis caput.

5. desiderio: first of a passionate desire for something once enjoyed (cf. 96. 3; Hor. Carm. I. 24. 1 quis desiderio sit pudor), and then of the object of desire (cf. Hor. Carm. I. 14. 18 [nauis] nunc desiderium curaque non leuis). From this point the transition is easy to a mere pet name, as here; cf. Cic. Fam. XIV. 2. 2 Hem, mea lux, meum desiderium; Petr. 139 tu, desiderium meum. — nitenti: of seductive beauty: cf. 61. 193; Hor. Carm. I. 5. 12 miseri, quibus intemptata nites; Prop. I. 2. 6 sinere in propriis membra nitere bonis.

6. carum: here an almost colorless word, somewhat as the Homeric φίλον often is. It modifies nescio quid, the object of iocari, which takes this less marked sort of a cognate accusative; cf. Cic. Fam. IX. 14. 4 haec enim iocatus sum; Hor. Sat. I. 5. 62 in faciem permulta iocatus. The infinitive-phrase is then the subject of libet.

7. et solaciolum: the general sense is, 'My love in playing with her sparrow finds amusement, — yes, and comfort, too, for by this means she stills the torturing flames of her passion.' The play with the sparrow is indulged in both for its own sake and as a distraction from fiercer passion. Vv. 7 and 8 contain, therefore, a sort of rhetorical afterthought, and may properly be considered parenthetical; and while a noun could not stand directly as the subject of libet, solaciolum may yet, by virtue of the remote character of its modification in the afterthought, be allowed as an appositive to the subject. See Crit. App. — doloris: here used of the pain of love-longing: cf. 50. 17; Ov. Art. Am. II. 519 litore quot conchae, tot sunt in amore dolores; Prop. IV. 20. 27 quicumque solent in amore dolores.

8. ut tum: the constant confusion of t and c in the MSS. makes entirely probable the emendation of cum of V to tum. The ut-clause carries on with specification the sol. sui dol. of v. 7, the repetition being made less tautological by the emphasis laid upon grauis; cf. 10. 7, 8, and 96. 3, 4, where there are similar explications of preceding phrases. — grauis: cf. Prop. IV. 21. 2 ut me longa graui soluat amore uia. — ardor: the fire of love; cf. 35. 15; 45. 16; 64. 93; 100. 7; and often in the poets.

Tecum ludere sicut ipsa possem
Et tristis animi leuare curas!

. . . . . .

Tam gratum est mihi quam ferunt puellae
Pernici aureolum fuisse malum,
Quod zonam soluit diu ligatam.

9. ipsa: this demonstrative is sometimes used with even a more remote reference, so that it is equivalent to some such word as dominus (cf. 64. 43 n.), but the reference to puellae v. 1 is here more immediate. — possem: optative of ungratified wish.

10. tristis animi curas: of the painful passion of love, as v. 7 doloris; cf. 64. 72, 95; 68. 18; Hor. Epod. 2. 37 quas amor curas habet. With animi modifying curas cf. 64. 372 animi amores; 68. 26 delicias animi; 102. 2 fides animi.

Some critics have judged that vv. 1–10 form a complete whole, or that, at any rate, vv. 11–13 are the conclusion of some other poem and not of this (cf. Crit. App.). But there seems to be no good reason to doubt that the poem is not concluded with v. 10, while a study of 65 shows how naturally such a picture as that of vv. 11–13 may conclude a poem of warm emotion. Yet the change of mood from possem (v. 9) to est (v. 11) makes it probable that a lacuna exists here, though perhaps of only a single verse, containing in the form of an infinitive-phrase some repetition of the thought in tecum ludere sicut ipsa.

11. quam, etc.: the comparison is, of course, a limited one, extending only to the delight Atalanta took in securing the apple. — puellae pernici: for the familiar story of the victory of Hippomenes (or Milanion) over the beautiful Atalanta in the foot-race by the help of Aphrodite's golden apples, cf. Apollod. III. 9. 2; Ov. Met. X. 560 ff.; Hygin. Fab. 185. Catullus means us to understand, as does Ovid (Met. X. 610 ff.), that not only was the beautiful apple attractive to Atalanta, but she herself was not altogether unwilling to be beaten.

12. malum: cf. 65. 19 n.

13. zonam: for similar reference see 61. 52; 67. 28; and cf. Paul. Fest. p. 63 cingulo noua nupta praecingebatur, quod uir in lecto soluebat, factum ex lana ouis. The figure is as old as Homer; cf. Od. XI. 245. — soluit: on the diaeresis see Intr. 86 b. — diu ligatam: since she had long refused to marry: cf. Anth. Lat. 1704. 48 Mey. te uocant prece uirgines pudicae zonulam ut soluas diu ligatam.

3.

Lugete, o Veneres Cupidinesque
Et quantum est hominum uenustiorum!
Passer mortuus est meae puellae,
Passer, deliciae meae puellae,

3. The poet mourns the death of Lesbia's sparrow. — This daintiest of poems, a charming combination of gentle grace and half-smiling sympathy for the sorrow of the mistress, expressed under the outer form of pity for the fate of the sparrow, is a fit companion-piece to 2, and must be referred to the same period in the author's life. For imitations of this lament over the death of a pet, see the poems from Ovid, Statius, and Martial cited in note on 2. 1, and add the curious titulus sepulcralis of a pet dog in Wilmanns's Exempla Inscr. Lat. 584. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. Veneres: the plural is to be explained partly, perhaps, as an instance of a sort of attraction to the number of Cupidines, as Ellis and Schulze think (cf. 13. 12 with 36. 3), but more as resulting from the conception of the character of Venus and of Lesbia. In the type of Venus were summed up all graces and charms of mind and body. Lesbia was attractive for mental as well as for physical endowments (cf. 36 and 86); she therefore possessed omnes Veneres (86. 6); and Catullus calls upon all to share her sorrow who by the possession of similar characteristics (quantum est hom. uen.) can sympathize with her loss. Cf. Mart. IX. 11. 9; XI. 13. 6 Veneres Cupidinesque. — Cupidines: the conception already familiar to the Greeks of more than one Ἔρως is here extended to the Latin tongue; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 19. 1; IV. 1. 5 mater saeua Cupidinum; Ov. Am. III. 15. 1 tenerorum mater Amorum; Fast. IV. 1 geminorum mater Amorum.

2. quantum, etc.: cf. 1. 8 n. quidquid hoc libelli. — uenustiorum: on the meaning see note on v. 1 Veneres, and cf. 13. 6; 22. 2. So far as there is any comparative idea in the word, it is that of comparison, not with other homines uenusti, but with other homines, 'and all ye men of any degree of grace.'

3. meae puellae: undoubtedly the Lesbia of the other poems: (1) so Martial thought (cf. VII. 14. 3 plorauit amica Catulli Lesbia, nequitiis passeris orba sui; XIV. 77 qualem dilecta Catullo Lesbia plorabat), though Juvenal follows Catullus in mentioning no name (Juv. 6. 7 nec tibi, cuius turbauit nitidos exstinctus passer ocellos); (2) in the few other places where Catullus speaks of his 'puella,' no other than Lesbia is indicated (cf. 11. 15; 13. 11; 36. 2; 37. 11); (3) stronger than all other proof is the internal evidence from the poems themselves, for Catullus surely loved but one woman, and spoke of no other in words of such pure, tender, and all-absorbing passion as in 2 and 3.

4. The initial epanalepsis gives the mournfully iterative tone of a dirge, while the identity of v. 4 with 2. 1 connects the two poems skilfully, and heightens the effect of each by contrast with the other.

Quem plus illa oculis suis amabat;
Nam mellitus erat, suamque norat
Ipsa tam bene quam puella matrem,
Nec sese a gremio illius mouebat,
Sed circumsiliens modo huc modo illuc
Ad solam dominam usque pipiabat.
Qui nunc it per iter tenebricosum
Illuc unde negant redire quemquam.

5. plus oculis suis amabat: cf. 14. 1 plus oculis meis amarem; and similar expressions, 82. 2, 4 carius oculis; 104. 2 carior oculis: Shakspere, Lear I. 1 I love you . . . dearer than eyesight. Although the figure in plus oculis amare is not common in Latin, Terence uses twice the same expression (Ad. 701 magis te quam oculos nunc ego amo meos; 903 qui te amat plus quam hosce oculos), and so it is not altogether due to Alexandrian influence.

6. mellitus: Catullus uses this word in but two other places (48. 1; 99. 1), once of the kissable eyes of Juventius and once of the boy himself, so that it is seen to be with him exclusively a term of endearment; Plautus uses it but once, and in that sense (Pseud. 180 quibus uitae estis, quibus . . . mammillae mellitae); Cicero uses it but once, and in that sense (Att. I. 18. 1 cum . . . mellito Cicerone); while in Varro it appears first in the literal sense (R. R. III. 16. 22 melliti faui), as it does later in Horace (Ep. I. 10. 11 pane egeo iam mellitis potiore placentis); Plautus also twice uses the diminutive mellitulus. — suam: puellam is to be supplied from the genitives of the preceding verses, as shown by the puella of v. 7; cf. Tib. I. 4. 75 pareat ille suae (where coniunx has preceded); II. 5. 103 nam ferus ille suae plorabat sobrius idem (where puellae has preceded).

7. ipsa: modifying puella, with a reference back to suam. — puella: i.e. Lesbia.

8. illĭus: with short penult, as always in Catullus in the case of this and similar genitives, with the exception of 67. 23 illīus.

9. modo huc modo illuc: cf. 15. 7; 50. 5 modo hoc modo illoc; 68. 133 hinc illinc; Sen. Apoc. 9 modo huc modo illuc cursabat; Cic. Att. XIII. 25. 3 o Academiam uolaticam . . . modo huc modo illuc!

11. tenebricosum: an unusual, though Ciceronian, word for the poetical tenebrosum. On the conception of the shadowy journey to Orcus, cf. v. 13 tenebrae Orci; Hor. Carm. IV. 2. 22 nigro Orco; Verg. Geor. III. 551 Stygiis emissa tenebris; Prop. V. 9. 41 Stygias tenebras; Ov. Met. V. 359 tenebrosa sede tyrannus exierat; I. 113 tenebrosa in Tartara; Calp. Buc. I. 52 omnia Tartareo subigentur carcere bella immergentque caput tenebris.

12. unde, etc.: quoted by Seneca (Apoc. 11 fin.) and imitated in Anth. Lat. 1704. 11 Mey. [domus Auerni] unde fata negant redire quemquam. The conception is thoroughly Greek, but from this time becomes common in Latin literature; cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 425 ripam irremeabilis undae; Hor. Carm. II. 3.

At uobis male sit, malae tenebrae
Orci, quae omnia bella deuoratis;
Tam bellum mihi passerem abstulistis.
O factum male! io miselle passer!
Tua nunc opera meae puellae
Flendo turgiduli rubent ocelli.

27 in aeternum exsilium; Prop. V. 11. 2 panditur ad nullas ianua nigra preces: Shaksp. Ham. III. 1 the undiscover'd country from whose bourn no traveler returns.

13. at: very rarely used in imprecations in prose; but cf. 27. 5; 28. 14; 36. 18; Plaut. Most. 38 at te Iuppiter dique omnes perdant! Ter. Eun. 431 at te di perdant; Hor. Sat. II. 6. 54 at omnes di exagitent me; Verg. Aen. II. 535 at tibi pro scelere . . . di . . . praemia reddant debita. — male sit: cf. Cic. Att. XV. 15. 1 L. Antonio male sit! Phaedr. App. I. 21. 11 at male tibi sit! For indicatives with male and a dative see 14. 10; 38. 1. — malae: observe the effect of the repetition of malae after male, and below of bellum after bella.

14. Orci: here not the god of the under-world, as in Hor. Carm. II. 18. 34 satelles Orci; but the under-world itself, as in Hor. Carm. IV. 2. 22 mores aureos . . . nigro inuidet Orco. tenebrae Orci is, then, equivalent to tenebrosus Orcus; cf. v. 11 n. — devoratis: Orcus is ravenous; cf. Hor. Carm. II. 18. 30 rapacis Orci.

15. mihi: another graceful touch of tender sympathy; the grief suffered by Lesbia is Catullus' own grief. — abstulistis: of removal by violence; cf. 62. 32; 101. 5.

16. o factum male: cf. Ter. Phor. 751 male factum! Cic. Att. XV. 11*a*. 1 o factum male de Alexione! (in both instances of death); and the inscription cited in the introductory note to this poem, Wilm. Ex. Inscr. Lat. 584. 4 o factum male, Myia, quod peristi! — io: an interjection expressing deeper emotion than o, whether of joy (cf. 61 passim), or of sorrow (as here). — miselle: a colloquial word from Plautus down, used by Cicero only in his letters; especially used of the dead; cf. Tertull. Test. An. 4 cum alicuius defuncti recordaris, misellum uocas eum.

17. The poem ends with the graceful turning of sympathy back from the dead sparrow to the sorrowing mistress, who is the chief object of the poet's thought. — tua opera: with gentle reproach, as if the sparrow were responsible for causing his tender mistress so much pain; cf. Ter. Andr. 689 sicin me atque illam opera tua nunc miseros sollicitari!

18. In spite of his fondness for diminutives, only twice elsewhere does Catullus use the diminutive form of both noun and adjective; 25. 2 imula auricilla; 64. 316 aridulis labellis. The complaint about disfigurement of the eyes is especially fitting, since one of Clodia's chief charms was her brilliant eyes; cf. Cic. Att. II. 14. 1 de conloquio βοώπιδος; Cael. 20. 49 flagrantia oculorum; Har. Resp. 18. 38 hos flagrantis [oculos]; all references to Clodia.

Phasellus ille, quem uidetis, hospites,
Ait fuisse nauium celerrimus,
Neque ullius natantis impetum trabis
Nequisse praeterire, siue palmulis
Opus foret uolare siue linteo.
Et hoc negat minacis Hadriatici

4. A dedicatory inscription. — On the return of Catullus from Bithynia in 56 B.C. (see Intr. 33 ff.) to his dearly loved home at Sirmio, he suspended as a votive offering in a shrine on his own property a model of the yacht that had brought him safely through his perils by sea, and this poem is in the form of a dedicatory inscription appended thereto. It is needless, not to say impossible, to suppose, as some have done, that the actual yacht was brought up the Po and the Mincio, or by an overland route, and beached in the Lago di Garda, but the votive model is spoken of as if the experiences of its prototype were its own. (For a strong presentation of a different interpretation of the poem cf. C. L. Smith in Harvard Studies in Classical Philology, vol. III., p. 75.) Two other poems, 46 and 31, speak respectively of the beginning and end of the homeward journey. A parody is found in Verg. Catal. 8, and a number of interesting parallels in the address of Ovid on the vessel that carried him into exile (Trist. I. 10). — Metre, pure iambic trimeter.

1. phasellus: a small and light sail-boat, but large enough for cruising; cf. Hor. Carm. III. 2. 28 uetabo fragilem mecum soluat phaselon; Verg. Geor. IV. 289 circum pictis uehitur sua rura phaselis. — quem uidetis: sc. in effigy. — hospites: the principal visitors at this private shrine would be guests of the master of the estate.

2. celerrimus: an instance of so-called attraction in case, more common in Greek than in Latin, but not so rare in the Augustan age (especially in Ovid) and later; cf. Hor. Ep. I. 7. 22 uir bonus et sapiens dignis ait esse paratus. The adjective here is also attracted from the gender of nauium into that of phasellus; cf. Hor. Sat. I. 9. 4 dulcissime rerum.

3. neque . . . nequisse: cf. below negat . . . negare. — trabis: a ship, as is made plain by natantis: cf. Verg. Aen. III. 191 uastum caua trabe currimus aequor; Hor. Carm. I. 1. 13 ut trabe Cypria Myrtoum secet mare.

4. palmulis: cf. Fest. 220 Müll. palmulae appellantur remi a similitudine manus humanae; Verg. Aen. V. 163 laeuas stringat sine palmula cautes; also 64. 7 palmis.

5. uolare: of the swift, skimming motion of the ship: cf. 46. 6; Enn. Ann. 379 Vahl. uolat super impetus undas; Verg. Geor. II. 41 pelago uolans da uela patenti; Ov. Her. 6. 66 illa uolat, uentus concaua uela tenet.

6 ff. Catullus retraces the course of his homeward journey. — hoc: object of negare, referring to the

Negare litus insulasue Cycladas
Rhodumque nobilem horridamque Thraciam
Propontida trucemue Ponticum sinum,
Vbi iste post phasellus antea fuit
Comata silua : nam Cytorio in iugo
Loquente saepe sibilum edidit coma.
Amastri Pontica et Cytore buxifer,
Tibi haec fuisse et esse cognitissima good record of the ship just cited. — minacis Hadriatici: a sea proverbially stormy; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 33. 15 fretis acrior Hadriae; III. 3. 5 Auster, dux inquieti turbidus Hadriae; III. 9. 22 improbo iracundior Hadria. The proper adjective is here used absolutely.

7. insulas Cycladas: a place of danger to the mariner; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 14. 19 interfusa nitentes uites aequora Cycladas.

8. Rhodum nobilem: in more ancient times the island, with its commanding position and excellent harbor, had been a place of much commercial importance, and now its friendship with Rome, its delightful climate, and the residence there of distinguished teachers of philosophy and rhetoric had attracted large numbers of Romans; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 7. 1 (and Mart. IV. 55. 6) claram Rhodon. — horridam Propontida: another sea of bad reputation among sailors; cf. the early stories of the cruise of the Argo, and Val. Flac. Arg. II. 645 me fremens tumido circumfluat ore Propontis; also of the adjacent strait, Hor. Carm. III. 4. 30 insanientem nauita Bosporum temptabo. On the lengthening of the final syllable, see Intr. 86 g.

9. trucem Ponticum sinum: cf. Ovid's account of the inhospitable sea in Trist. IV. 4. 56–60.

10. post: a construction of adverb with substantive common enough in Greek, but very rare in earlier Latin, though rather more frequent from the Augustan age down.

11. comata silua: the figure is as old as Homer; cf. Od. XXIII. 195 ἀπέκοψα κόμην τανυφύλλου ἐλαίης; Hor. Carm. IV. 3. 11 spissae nemorum comae; Verg. Aen. VII. 60 laurus sacra comam seruata; Prop. IV. 16. 28 me tegat arborea deuia terra coma; Tib. I. 7. 34 uiridem dura caedere falce comam. But silua of a single tree, as apparently here, is a rare use.

12. loquente coma: cf. the simpler and better figure in Verg. Ecl. 8. 22 Maenalus pinos loquentes semper habet.

13. Amastri: the city of Amastris, so named from its founder, the wife of Dionysius, tyrant of the Pontic Heraclea, was situated on the Paphlagonian coast of the Euxine Sea, not far from Mt. Cytorus, and on the site of the Homeric city of Sesamus (Il. II. 853). The younger Pliny praises its beauty (Trai. 98). — Cytore buxifer: cf. Verg. Geor. II. 437 iuuat undantem buxo spectare Cytorum. The adjective is ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

14. tibi: Catullus combines Amastris and Cytorus in a single idea, perhaps thinking of the city as built on the mountain; cf. v. 18 n.

Ait phasellus ; ultima ex origine
Tuo stetisse dicit in cacumine,
Tuo imbuisse palmulas in aequore,
Et inde tot per impotentia freta
Erum tulisse, laeua siue dextera
Vocaret aura, siue utrumque Iuppiter
Simul secundus incidisset in pedem ;
Neque ulla uota litoralibus diis
Sibi esse facta, cum ueniret a mari

16. stetisse: i.e. when a tree; imbuisse: i.e. when a ship. The course of the ship is now traced again, but in the original direction, from Cytorus to Sirmio.

18. inde: perhaps a case of poetic freedom with fact, for Catullus was more likely to start on his homeward journey from Nicaea (cf. 46. 5), and not from the extreme eastern boundary of the province; but cf. Intr. 35. — impotentia: lacking self-control, raging; cf. 35. 12; Ter. Andr. 879 adeo impotenti esse animo ; Hor. Carm. III. 30. 3 Aquilo impotens. On the lengthening of the final syllable, see Intr. 86 g.

19. erum: Catullus himself. — laeua siue dextera, etc.: whether the wind was on the starboard or port quarter or dead astern, it made no difference to the craft, which sailed straight ahead.

20. uocaret aura: the fair wind 'invites' the vessel to pursue its course with hopes of a prosperous voyage; cf. Verg. Aen. III. 70 lenis crepitans uocat Auster in altum ; III. 357 aurae uela uocant; Ov. Her. 13. 9 qui tua uela uocaret uentus erat ; and for the converse, Verg. Aen. IV. 417 uocat iam carbasus auras. — Iuppiter: here = aura ; cf. Ov. Met. II. 377 nec se [cycnus] caeloque Iouique credit.

21. pedem: the pedes (Gr. πόδες) were the sheets, or ropes attached one to each of the lower corners of the square sail, whence they were carried aft and belayed at either rail. They were used to stretch the sail taut, so as to secure the full effect of the breeze. The pedes here stand for the two halves of the sail itself, and that was evenly filled only when the vessel was sailing before the wind; cf. Cic. Att. XVI. 6 utrumque [sinum] pedibus aequis transmisimus ; Ov. Fast. III. 565 nancta ratem pede labitur aequo.

22. neque, etc.: not that the vessel scorned the gods and their power (cf. vv. 26, 27), but her seaworthiness kept her out of positions of danger where appeals to them were necessary. — litoralibus diis: vows were made by sailors to Neptune, to Castor and Pollux, and to Venus Marina (Hor. Carm. I. 5. 13 ff.; I. 3. 1, 2 ; IV. 11. 15), as well as to lesser divinities ; cf. Verg. Geor. I. 436 uotaque seruati soluent in litore nautae Glauco et Panopeae et Inoo Melicertae.

23. sibi: dative of agent with the perfect participle, as in 22. 4; 35. 18, etc. — a mari nouissimo, from the most distant sea : cf. Ov. Trist. III. 13. 27 terrarum pars paene nouissima, Pontus : Tac. Agr 10 oram nouissimi maris.

Nouissimo hunc ad usque limpidum lacum.
Sed haec prius fuere: nunc recondita
Senet quiete seque dedicat tibi,
Gemelle Castor et gemelle Castoris.

Viuamus, mea Lesbia, atque amemus,
Rumoresque senum seueriorum

24. limpidum lacum: i.e. the lacus Benacus (Lago di Garda), into the broader, southern end of which projects the peninsula of Sirmio (cf. 31), now Sermione, where stood the villa of Catullus. In the epithet is a thought of the contrast between the dark and turbulent sea over which the journey had been, and the beautifully blue and clear waters of the quiet lake.

25. sed haec prius fuere: i.e. all toil and danger has now become but a matter of quiet retrospect.

26. senet: a word of earlier Latin for the later senescit. — se dedicat: sc. in effigy. — tibi: Castor and Pollux were proverbially united, and were often spoken of, sometimes even as if they were a single person, under one name, — that of Castor being more frequently used, as in v. 27; cf. Hor. Epod. 17. 42 Castor fraterque magni Castoris; Stat. Silu. IV. 6. 15 ab Elysiis prospexit sedibus alter Castor; and the famous witticism of Bibulus in Suet. Iul. 10 euenisse sibi quod Polluci: ut enim geminis fratribus aedes in foro constituta tantum Castoris uocaretur, ita suam Caesarisque munificentiam unius Caesaris dici: but Hor. Carm. III. 29. 64 has geminus Pollux. — The Dioscuri were invoked as dispellers of storms by sailors, who took the electrical phenomenon called still 'St. Elmo's [= Helena's?] fires' for the stars affixed in ancient art to the foreheads of the brothers; cf. 68. 65 and other poets passim.

5. To Lesbia; an exhortation to enjoy love and despise censure. — This utterance of the intoxication of passion must date, like 2 and 3, from the early days of the entire confidence of Catullus in Lesbia. With its companion piece, 7, it is cited by Ovid (Am. I. 8. 58), and by Martial (VI. 34. 7; XI. 6. 14; XII. 59. 3). — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. uiuamus: the key-note of the whole poem is struck in the first word; with uiuere in this pregnant sense, 'to enjoy life,' cf. Verg. Copa 38 mors aurem uellens 'uiuite' ait, 'uenio'; Mart. I. 15. 12 sera nimis uita est crastina; uiue hodie; and the proverbial dum uiuimus, uiuamus. — mea Lesbia: so she is called again in 75. 1, but with a different feeling (cf. also 58. 1).

2. rumores: here not of unauthenticated report, but of direct observation and remark; cf. Ter. Phor. 911 nam qui erit rumor, id si feceris! — senum seueriorum: old men are proverbially censors of the young (cf. Hor. A. P. 174 [senex] castigator censorque minorum), and this is one type of old

Omnes unius aestimemus assis.
Soles occidere et redire possunt :
Nobis, cum semel occidit breuis lux,
Nox est perpetua una dormienda.
Da mi basia mille, deinde centum,
Dein mille altera, dein secunda centum,
Deinde usque altera mille, deinde centum,
Dein, cum milia multa fecerimus,
Conturbabimus illa, ne sciamus, man in Plautus and Terence ; but cf. Cic. De Sen. 65 seueritatem in senectute probo, sed eam (ut alia) modicam ; acerbitatem nullo modo. With the comparative, cf. 3. 2 uenustiorum.

3. unius aestimemus assis: i.e. count as naught; cf. 42. 13 (assis facere) ; 10. 13 ; 17. 17 (pili facere); and, in the same sense, 23. 25 (parui putare). Catullus is the first to use in such phrases assis and pili, where Plautus and Terence have flocci, nauci, pensi, nihili (cf. however Plaut. Capt. 477 neque ridiculos iam terrunci faciunt).

4–6. On the general conception see 3. 11, 12 n.; Prop. III. 15. 24 nox tibi longa uenit, nec reditura dies; Hor. Carm. IV. 7. 13 ff. damna tamen celeres reparant caelestia lunae; nos . . . puluis et umbra sumus; and most beautifully in the Lament for Bion (Mosch. 3. 109 ff.), 'Ah me, when the mallows wither in the garden, and the green parsley, and the curled tendrils of the anise, on a later day they live again, and spring in another year ; but we men, we the great and mighty, or wise, when once we have died, in hollow earth we sleep, gone down into silence ; a right long, and endless, and unawakening sleep. And thou too, in the earth wilt be lapped in silence' (Lang) : R. Browning, Toccata of Galluppi, Death stepped tacitly and took them where they never see the sun.

5. breuis lux: a very unusual rhythm with which to end the verse ; cf. however 7. 7 tacet nox, and note the antithesis between lux at the end of v. 5 and nox at the beginning of v. 6.

7. basia: the word appears first here, but seems in later days to have supplanted entirely in the colloquial dialect both sauia and the more formal oscula, whence it made its way into the Romance languages. The lack of apparent congeners in Latin and Greek, and the occurrence of buss in early English, and of the nouns buss, busserl, and the verb bussen in early days in the conservative mountain dialects of South Germany and Austria, make it probable that this word was of Germanic origin, and made its way to Rome from the region of the Po. — deinde: the later, while dein is the earlier form of the word ; in both ei is regularly contracted into a single syllable.

9. usque, straight on.

10. fecerīmus: with the original quantity of the penult, as occasionally in the poets.

11. conturbabimus: the confusion of the count is already effected in the poem by the hurrying suc-

Aut ne quis malus inuidere possit,
Cum tantum sciat esse basiorum.

Flaui, delicias tuas Catullo,
Ni sint inlepidae atque inelegantes,
Velles dicere, nec tacere posses.
Verum nescio quid febriculosi
Scorti diligis: hoc pudet fateri.
Nam te non uiduas iacere noctes
Nequiquam tacitum cubile clamat

cession of mille and centum. — ne sciamus: for if not even we ourselves know the number, surely the eye of envy cannot determine it.

12. inuidere: i.e. to cast an evil eye, and so bring misfortune, upon a person or thing; cf. Accius ap. Cic. Tusc. III. 9. 20 quisnam florem liberum inuidit meum? The belief in 'the evil eye' is still widespread among eastern nations, and curious traces still survive among more highly civilized communities.

13. tantum, just so many; cf. also 14. 7 tantum impiorum. From ancient times down it has been believed that a spell could be surely based only on some mathematically exact enumeration of particulars (cf. Hor. Carm. I. 11. 2 Babylonios numeros), and so it has been held unsafe to tell, or even to know, such details about one's precious things.

6. Flavius is rallied about an intrigue which he has in vain tried to conceal. With the general theme cf. 55 and Hor. Carm. I. 27; II. 4. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. Flaui: otherwise unknown, though Baehrens suspects him to be the Fabullus of 12, 13, 28, and 47. — delicias: see 2. 1 n. — Catullo: the poet is fond of referring to himself by name; cf. 7. 10; 11. 1; 13. 7; 14. 13; 38. 1; 44. 3; 49. 4; 56. 3; 58. 2; 68. 27, 135; 72. 1; 79. 3; 82. 1.

2. ni sint . . . uelles, granted that [your love] is not . . . you would surely be willing, etc. The imperfect tense in both clauses would express at once a conclusion definitively arrived at after past deliberation; the tenses as they here stand convey the idea of a pause for deliberation after laying down the chosen proposition (ni sint, etc.), and then a triumphant pounce upon the inevitable conclusion (uelles dicere, etc.). For other instances of this construction cf. 58[b] and Draeger Hist. Synt. II. p. 721. — inlepidae atque inelegantes: cf. similar phrases in 10. 4; 36. 17.

4. febriculosi: this word appears first, and only once, in Catullus, and but rarely later.

6. uiduas noctes: cf. Ov. Ep. 18. 69 uiduas exegi frigida noctes; and similarly 68. 6 in lecto caelibe.

7. nequiquam tacitum: i.e. it is to no purpose that the bed lacks

Sertis ac Syrio fragrans oliuo,
Puluinusque peraeque et hic et ille
Attritus, tremulique quassa lecti
Argutatio inambulatioque.
Nam nil stupra ualet, nihil, tacere.
Cur ? non tam latera ecfututa pandas,
Ni tu quid facias ineptiarum.
Quare, quidquid habes boni malique,
Dic nobis : uolo te ac tuos amores
Ad caelum lepido uocare uersu.

the power of speech, for it tells as emphatically and clearly (clamat) as though it could speak; cf. 80. 7.

8. Syrio, etc.: cf. 68. 144 fragrantem Assyrio odore; and the lament of Berenice's hair in 66. 75 ff.; Hor. Carm. II. 7. 8 coronatus nitentis malobathro Syrio capillos; II. 11. 14 rosa canos odorati capillos, Assyriaque nardo uncti.

15. quidquid habes, etc.: cf. 1. 8 n.; Hor. Carm. I. 27. 17 quidquid habes, age, depone tutis auribus.

16. nobis: = mihi; the plural for the singular of the first person (though never of the second) often occurs in Catullus in personal and possessive pronouns and in verbs, sometimes with a change from singular to plural even in the same sentence; cf. 77. 3–4; 91. 1–2. — uolo, etc.: the tone of the poem is certainly different from that of 55, and the raillery of the whole address thus far suggests that these concluding words are not spoken seriously, but after the spirit of Horace in the odes cited in the introductory note. — amores: of a scortillum also in 10. 1 and 45. 1; cf. the same word of Juventius in 15. 1; 21. 4; 40. 7; but of love itself in 38. 6; 64. 27, etc.; and never of a mere petted friend, as in Cic. Att. XVI. 6. 4 salutem dices Atticae, deliciis atque amoribus meis.

17. ad caelum uocare: phrases like ad caelum ferre, efferre, tollere are common enough in Latin, as is uocare with ad uitam, ad exitium, ad salutem, and the like; but this particular phrase is rare, if not unique, and its strangeness adds to the mock-heroic, jesting tone of the sentence. — lepido: not of external character, as in 1. 1, but of internal; cf. 36. 10 lepide; 12. 8; 16. 7; 50. 7 lepor, etc. — uersu: = carmine; Cicero says uersum facere as well as uersus facere; cf. also Verg. Geor. III. 339 quid tibi pastores Libyae uersu prosequar; but the collective use of the singular did not become common till a later age.

Quaeris quot mihi basiationes
Tuae, Lesbia, sint satis superque.
Quam magnus numerus Libyssae harenae
Laserpiciferis iacet Cyrenis,
Oraclum Iouis inter aestuosi

7. To Lesbia, in answer to a possibly somewhat petulant question mentioned in vv. 1–2. The poem is a companion-piece to 5, and was undoubtedly written at about the same time with it. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. quaeris: perhaps after the appeal in 5 for sundry thousands of kisses. — basiationes: the word occurs in Catullus only here, and does not appear again before Martial, who uses it twice (II. 23. 4; VII. 95. 17). Abstract nouns in -io were common in colloquial speech in the time of Catullus.

2. tuae: subjective, as shown by comparison with 5.7 da mi basia; cf. also 8. 18. — satis superque: cf. the slight variation in v. 10; also Cic. Rosc. Com. 4. 11 satis superque habere; Hor. Epod. 1. 31 satis superque ditauit; 17. 19 satis superque poenarum.

3. quam: correlative with tam in v. 9. — numerus harenae, etc.: here is united a simplicity of figure that is even ante-Homeric with a precision of geographical and mythological allusion that smacks of the Alexandrian school. The sands of the seashore, the leaves of the forest, and the stars of the heavens, are the first types of infinite number that occurred to early man; cf. 61. 206 ff.; Gen. 13. 16 I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth; 15. 5 look now toward heaven and tell the stars, if thou be able to tell them; . . . so shall thy seed be; Hom. Il. II. 800 φύλλοισιν ἐοικότες ἢ ψαμάθοισιν; Hor. Carm. I. 28. 1 numero carentis harenae; Ov. Art. Am. I. 254 numero cedet harena meo; I. 59 quot caelum stellas tot habet tua Roma puellas; Calp. Buc. 2. 72 qui numerare uelit . . . tenues citius numerabit harenas.

4. laserpiciferis: cf. Plin. N. H. XIX. 38 laserpicium, quod Graeci σίλφιον uocant, in Cyrenaica prouincia repertum, cuius sucum laser uocant, magnificum in usu medicamentisque. The plant was doubtless the ferula asafoetida, the exuded juice of which is still widely used as an antispasmodic. It held a prominent place among the products and exports of Cyrenaica, and is represented upon coins of the country. Pliny notes, however, that in his time it had ceased to be produced there, and our supply comes from Persia and the East Indies. — Cyrenis: Cyrenae (Gr. Κυρήνη) was the capital of the district of Libya, called Cyrenaica, that bordered upon the Syrtis major. It was founded, according to tradition, about the middle of the seventh century B.C., by Battus, otherwise called Aristotle, a Greek from the island of Thera, and attained great reputation as a centre of trade, and as the birthplace of Eratosthenes, Aristippus, and Callimachus.

5. oraclum Iouis: the Egyptian deity Ammon, or Hammon, origi-

Et Batti ueteris sacrum sepulcrum,
Aut quam sidera multa, cum tacet nox,
Furtiuos hominum uident amores,
Tam te basia multa basiare
Vesano satis et super Catullo est,
Quae nec pernumerare curiosi
Possint nec mala fascinare lingua.

8.

Miser Catulle, desinas ineptire,
Et quod uides perisse perditum ducas.

nally worshipped in Thebes under the form of a ram, or of a human figure with a ram's horns, had his most famous temple and oracle in the oasis of Siwah in the Libyan desert, 400 miles from Cyrene (Plin. l.c.). He was identified by the Greeks and Romans with Zeus and Jupiter; cf. Prop. V. 1. 103 hoc neque harenosum Libyae Iouis explicat antrum. — aestuosi: of glowing heat, as in 46. 5 Nicaeae aestuosae; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 22. 5 per Syrtes aestuosas; I. 31. 5 aestuosae Calabriae.

6. Batti: see v. 4 n. Cyrenis. — sacrum sepulcrum: the tomb of the founder stood in the city of Cyrene, where he was reverenced as a god.

7. tacet nox: with the rhythm cf. 5. 5 n.

9. tam: correlative with v. 3 quam. — te: subject, not object of basiare; cf. v. 2 n. — basia basiare: with the cognate accusative cf. 61. 117 (gaudia gaudere), and, less precisely, such expressions as 14. 3 odissem odio, etc.

10. uesano: of the mad passion of love also in 100. 7 uesana flamma.

11–12. Cf. 5. 11–13 n. — curiosi: cf. Plaut. Stich. 208 nam curiosus nemost quin sit maleuolus. — mala lingua: cf. Verg. Ecl. 7. 27 baccare frontem cingite ne uati noceat mala lingua futuro.

8. The poet, somewhat vainly, appeals to himself to return Lesbia's coldness with coldness. The puella of this poem is undoubtedly Lesbia, for of no other does Catullus speak as in v. 5 (see note), nor, indeed, as in the whole poem. Catullus had evidently fallen in the favor of his inconstant mistress, and was ill able to put up with her coldness in a dignified manner. While, therefore, he complains of the unreasonableness of her treatment of him, he seems to have one eye open for a reconciliation. Far different is the swift and brief-worded bitterness that characterizes the poems written after he had become convinced of Lesbia's utter unworthiness. This was evidently written in the time of temporary estrangement which was ended by the voluntary act of Lesbia (cf. 37, 107, 36, and Intr. 18, 19). — Date, about 59 B.C. Metre, choliambic.

1. Catulle: the poet is fond of soliloquy in the form of self-address, and of speaking of himself in the

Fulsere quondam candidi tibi soles,
Cum uentitabas quo puella ducebat
Amata nobis quantum amabitur nulla.
Ibi illa multa tum iocosa fiebant,
Quae tu uolebas nec puella nolebat.
Fulsere uere candidi tibi soles.
Nunc iam illa non uult: tu quoque, impotens, noli,
Nec quae fugit sectare, nec miser uiue,
Sed obstinata mente perfer, obdura.
Vale, puella! iam Catullus obdurat,
Nec te requiret nec rogabit inuitam:
At tu dolebis, cum rogaberis nulla.

third person (cf. 6. 1 n.); but especially noteworthy in this poem is the change from the second to the third person (v. 12) and back again (v. 19). — ineptire: a colloquial word, occurring twice in Terence (Ad. 934; Phor. 420), not at all in Plautus, nor in any classical writer after Catullus.

2. perisse perditum: cf. Plaut. Trin. 1026 quin tu quod periit periisse ducis?

3. candidi soles: days of good fortune and happiness; cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 5. 7 gratior it dies et soles melius nitent; and the opposite figure in Sat. I. 9. 72 huncine solem tam nigrum surrexe mihi!

4. cum uentitabas, etc.: not of a definite place, as into the house of Allius (cf. 68. 68), but in general, when you were submitting to her rule and guidance.

5. amata nobis, etc.: cf. 37. 12 and 87. 1, 2 for the same expression of his love for Lesbia, and for similar comparisons of affection, 3. 5 n.

6. ibi tum: temporal, contrasted with v. 9 nunc iam; cf. Plaut. Curc. 648 tum ibi nescio quis me arripit; Ter. Andr. 634 ibi tum eorum impudentissuma oratiost; Cic. Caec. 10. 27 ibi tum Caecinam postulasse. Ibi is used alone in the temporal sense in 63. 4, 42, 48, 76; 66, 33. — iocosa: cf. Ov. Trist. II. 354 uita uerecunda est, Musa iocosa mea.

9. impotens: if the emendation impotens ‘noli be correct, the adjective must mean ‘weakling,’ the prey to his own passions; different from its meaning in 4. 18 and 35. 12.

10. nec quae fugit sectare: cf. Theocr. 11. 75 τί τὸν φεύγοντα διώκεις; which passage Catullus may have had in mind, though in Theocritus the words retain more of their literal meaning.

11. perfer, obdura: cf. Ov. Trist. V. 11. 7 perfer et obdura; Hor. Sat. II. 5. 39 persta atque obdura. The asyndeton adds to the tone of rugged determination.

14. rogaberis: as in v. 13, without the accusative of the thing desired. — nulla: a somewhat colloquial and emphatic use for non; cf. 17. 20; Plaut. Asin. 408 is nullus uenit; Mil. Glor. 786 nam cor non Scelesta, uae te! quae tibi manet uita!

Quis nunc te adibit? cui uideberis bella?
Quem nunc amabis? cuius esse diceris?
Quem basiabis? cui labella mordebis?
At tu, Catulle, destinatus obdura.

Verani, omnibus e meis amicis
Antistans mihi milibus trecentis, potest quod nulla habet (i.e. because she has none); Ter. Hec. 79 si non quaeret, nullus dixeris; Cic. Verr. II. 2. 43 hereditas ea, quae nulla debetur.

15. scelesta: Catullus fans his anger and waxes more indignantly reproachful, and yet so immediately runs into the details of past happiness that in spite of his uale, puella he almost seems to be wishing to tempt Lesbia back to himself. Observe also from the rhetorical questions that he has yet no notion that Lesbia's coldness to himself is connected with other intrigues. — uae te: though the dative is commonly used in connection with uae (cf. 64. 196 n. uae miserae), yet the accusative of exclamation is sometimes found; cf. Plaut. Asin. 481 uae te; Sen. Apocol. 4 uae me. — tibi manet: i.e. will from now on continue to be yours (cf. 61. 229; 76. 5); while te manet would mean 'will come upon you in the future' (cf. Prop. III. 28. 58 mors sua quemque manet).

17. cuius esse diceris, who will call you his own?

18. cui labella mordebis: cf. Plaut. Pseud. 67 teneris labellis molles morsiunculae; Hor. Carm. I. 13. 12 impressit memorem dente labris notam; Tib. I. 6. 14 quem facit impresso mutua dente Venus.

19. As the verses that contain the history of the past were closed by the refrain in v. 8 which repeated the opening in v. 3, so those that declare the purpose of the future close with the refrain in v. 19 in repetition of the opening in v. 11. — destinatus: the word first occurs here in the sense of obstinatus; it gives, as compared with obstinata of the corresponding v. 11, the same slight variety that is secured in vv. 3 and 8 by the change from quondam to uere. A similar effort after variety can be observed in other passages; cf. proponis and promittere in 109. 1 and 3.

9. An expression of joy over the return of Veranius from Spain. On the date of composition and the personality of Veranius, see Intr. 68, 69. With the poem, cf. Hor. Carm. II. 7 on the safe return to Italy of Pompeius. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1–2. omnibus, etc.: i.e. who alone of all my friends art dearer to me than all the rest put together, however many they be. The ablative phrase is used in its ordinary partitive sense, modifying the vocative directly, while milibus depends

Venistine domum ad tuos penates
Fratresque unanimos anumque matrem?
Venisti! o mihi nuntii beati!
Visam te incolumem audiamque Hiberum
Narrantem loca, facta, nationes,
Vt mos est tuus, applicansque collum
Iucundum os oculosque sauiabor.
O, quantum est hominum beatiorum,
Quid me laetius est beatiusue?

upon antistans, amicis being readily supplied from the partitive phrase. — mihi, in my feeling. — milibus trecentis: two numerals commonly used independently of indefinite multitude (for milia see 5. 7 ff.; 35. 8, etc.; for trecenti, 11. 18; 12. 10; 29. 14) are here combined for additional emphasis, as in 48. 3; cf. also 95. 3 milia quingenta.

4. unanimos: the word occurs in Plautus only once (Stich. 729), but was apparently a favorite with Catullus, occurring thrice (9. 4; 30. 1; 66. 80), though it is not used by Horace, the elegiasts, or Martial. Vergil, however, employs it thrice. — anum: cf. the adjectival use also in 68. 46; 78b. 4. Plautus uses the word as an adjective only once, but the elegiasts and later prose writers more frequently.

5. nuntii: plural, though of a single message; cf. also the neuter plural in 63. 75.

6. Hiberum: possibly used as a general term for Spaniards, but more likely indicating that Veranius had been in the nearer province.

7. loca, facta, nationes: the country, its history, and the tribes which inhabit it.

8. ut mos est tuus: as this was not the last, so perhaps it was not the first time that Veranius had visited foreign shores, and he apparently had some reputation among his friends as a raconteur. — applicans collum: i.e. pulling your face toward mine, with arm around the neck.

9. os oculosque sauiabor: the union of the two nouns is common; cf. Cic. Phil. 8. 7. 20 ante os oculosque legatorum; Verg. Aen. VIII. 152 ille os oculosque loquentis lustrabat lumine; also the English saying, before my very face and eyes. On the kissing of the eyes, cf. 45. 11–12; 48. 1–2; (Q.) Cic. Fam. XVI. 27. 2 tuos oculos dissauiabor.

10. o: the interjection is used, not with the quantum-clause as a vocative, but with the exclamatory clause following; cf. 31. 7. With a similar triumphant appeal are closed 9 and 107, and with an indignant appeal, 29, 47, 52, and 60. — quantum, etc.: a partitive clause modifying quid; cf. Plaut. Capt. 835 o mihi quantumst hominum optumorum optume; and similar passages cited in 1. 8 n. quidquid hoc libelli.

11. quid, etc.: the neuter is not very rare in Latin in similar sweeping appeals. With the general expression, cf. 107. 7; Ter. Eun. 1031 ecquis me hodie uiuit fortunatior?

Varus me meus ad suos amores
Visum duxerat e foro otiosum,
Scortillum, ut mihi tunc repente uisum est,
Non sane inlepidum neque inuenustum.
Huc ut uenimus, incidere nobis
Sermones uarii, in quibus, quid esset
Iam Bithynia, quo modo se haberet,
Ecquonam mihi profuisset aere.

10. Catullus tells at his own expense how neatly he was shown up when attempting to put on airs about his supposed wealth acquired in Bithynia, whither he went in 57 B.C. in the retinue of the governor Memmius (see Intr. 29 ff.). As might be expected, the forms of expression are thoroughly colloquial. — Date of composition, about 56 B.C. Metre, Phalaecean.

1. Varus: cf. Intr. 66. — amores: cf. 6. 16 n.

3. scortillum: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον. — repente, at first sight. He professes to have changed his opinion later (see v. 33).

4. Cf. similar phrases in 6. 2 and 36. 17.

6–8. The three particular questions are given in a conversational asyndeton. The first concerns the general character of the province, and is carried on with specification (cf. 2. 8 n.) by the second, which concerns its particular condition, and by the third, which narrows the discussion down to the real point of interest, the influence of the province upon the purse of Catullus.

6. quid esset iam Bithynia, what sort of a place Bithynia is nowadays. Cf. Hor. Ep. I. 11. 7 scis Lebedus quid sit; Gell. IV. 1. 12 hoc enim quis homo sit ostendere est, non, quid homo sit dicere.

7. iam: not that the questioners had any precise knowledge of, or interest in, the past history of Bithynia, but only that the news at hand is from a freshly returned traveler. — Bithynia: the country was bequeathed to the Romans by Nicomedes III. in 74 B.C., and organized as a province. Western Pontus was added to it in 65 B.C., on the overthrow of Mithradates by Pompey. The united province was governed by propraetors till 27 B.C., when it was placed in the list of senatorial provinces, where it remained till the time of Trajan. Under the republic it could in no wise compare in importance with the neighboring province of Asia, being but thinly settled in the interior, and having only a scanty fringe of Greek culture along the coast. — quo modo se haberet, how it is getting on. Cf. Ter. Phor. 820 ut meae res sese habent; Cic. Att. XIII. 35. 2 scire aueo quo modo res se habeat; Tac. Ann. XIV. 51 ego me bene habeo.

8. ecquonam, etc., whether I had made any money out of it. Ecquis with an enclitic -nam is both Plautine and Ciceronian; cf. also 28. 6. The question is a com-

Respondi id quod erat, nihil neque ipsis
Nec praetoribus esse nec cohorti,
Cur quisquam caput unctius referret, —
Praesertim quibus esset irrumator
Praetor nec faceret pili cohortem.
'At certe tamen' inquiunt, 'quod illic
Natum dicitur esse comparasti,
Ad lecticam homines.' Ego, ut puellae mentary on the frequent character of Roman provincial administration.

9. nihil neque ipsis, etc.: the three classes mentioned are the inhabitants themselves (ipsis), the governors (praetoribus), and the governor's staff (cohorti), and the order is that of logical emphasis: — not even the inhabitants have anything; how then can governors, to say nothing of staff, ever get anything?

11. cur, etc.: the indirect question depends upon nihil regarded as a cause. — caput unctius referret: i.e. be rolling in wealth on his return; a colloquial figure derived from the expensiveness of fine ointments, which, therefore, only the rich could use; cf. 6. 8 n.; Plaut. Pseud. 219 numqui quoipiamst tuorum tua opera hodie conseruorum nitidiusculum caput? Cic. Verr. II. 2. 22. 54 ita palaestritas defendebat ut ab illis ipse unctior abiret; and an extension of the same figure in 29. 22 uncta patrimonia. With the comparative unctius sc. 'than those of men in general'; cf. 3. 2 n. uenustiorum; 9. 10 beatiorum.

12. quibus: with oblique reference to quisquam, as though a partitive eorum had preceded. — irrumator, a scurvy fellow; the word, like many others of similar antecedents, has come to be used not always in a literal sense, but as a mere term of abuse; cf. v. 24; 28. 9, 10; Intr. 32.

13. faceret pili: cf. 5. 3 n.

14. at: i.e. in spite of the general poverty of the province, — challenging the sweeping character of the preceding statement.

15. natum: if Catullus means that the custom of riding in a litter originated in Bithynia, he tells us what we learn from no other source, — for the grammarian Probus, in making a similar statement, probably borrowed it from him; but the custom was common there; cf. Cic. Verr. II. 5. 11. 27 ut mos fuit Bithyniae regibus, lectica octaphoro ferebatur. Cappadocians and Syrians, men of proverbially great stature and strength, are often mentioned as litter-bearers, as are less frequently Thracians, Liburnians and Moesians (Juv.), and in later days Gauls (Clem. Alex.) and Germans (Tertull.); cf. Mart. VI. 77. 4 quid te Cappadocum sex onus esse iuuat? Juv. 6. 351 quae longorum uehitur ceruice Syrorum.

16. lecticam: a covered litter, borne on the shoulders of slaves (lecticarii), and used in Rome at first by women and children, but later by men also, as a vehicle in the city (where carriages were not allowed), and for short journeys into the country.

Vnum me facerem beatiorem,
'Non' inquam, 'mihi tam fuit maligne,
Vt, prouincia quod mala incidisset,
Non possem octo homines parare rectos.'
At mi nullus erat neque hic neque illic

In collo sibi conlocare posset.
Hic illa, ut decuit cinaediorem,
'Quaeso' inquit, 'mihi, mi Catulle, paulum
Istos commoda: nam uolo ad Sarapim

17. unum beatiorem, the one man who was blest above his fellows; for Catullus had said (vv. 9–13) that no staff — and especially not that of which he was a member — made anything out of the province; cf. 37. 17 une. — me facerem, pass myself off as; cf. Cic. Flac. 20. 46 cum uerbis se locupletem faceret.

18. mihi fuit maligne: cf. male esse with the dative of the person in 14. 10; 38. 1.

20. homines rectos, straight-backed fellows (as lecticarii). Eight appears to have been the maximum number of carriers, while six was common; cf. the citations from Cicero and Martial on v. 15, and Martial often.

21–23. A confidential aside of the poet to the reader. — at mi nullus, etc.: i.e. but I hadn't, and never had had, a single one. — hic: i.e. in Rome now. — illic: i.e. in Bithynia then. — grabati: (Gr. κράββατος) a Macedonian word for a bedstead. It is sometimes mentioned as a possession of poverty, and such seems to be the idea here; cf. Cic. Diuin. II. 63. 129 utrum sit probabilius deosne immortalis concursare circum omnium mortalium qui ubique sunt non modo lectos uerum etiam grabatos, etc.; Sen. Ep. 20. 10 leue argumentum est bonae uoluntatis grabatus aut pannus, nisi apparuit aliquem illa non necessitate pati sed malle. And here not only is the couch a miserable thing to start with, but old and broken as well. No rich lectica had Catullus, — only a wretched bedstead as the nearest approach to it, — and no slave at all, far less eight.

24. ut decuit cinaediorem, like the saucy jade she was; cf. v. 12 n. The girl saw through the trick of Catullus (perhaps he intended she should), and took this witty way of compelling him to acknowledge himself a pretender.

26. commoda: with the short final a, cf. Plaut. Cist. 573 commoda loquelam tuam (at the beginning of a trochaic septenarius); so also more commonly in colloquial usage such pyrrhic imperatives as ama, puta, roga, etc. — Sarapim: an Egyptian deity, apparently at first identical with Osiris, and often later connected in worship with Isis. From Alexandria, where the great Sarapeum stood, the cult spread through Greece and Italy, reaching Rome perhaps as early as the time of Sulla, though it met there with

Deferri.' 'Mane,' inquii puellae,
'Istud quod modo dixeram, me habere,
Fugit me ratio: meus sodalis
Cinna est Gaius; is sibi parauit.
Verum, utrum illius an mei, quid ad me?
Vtor tam bene quam mihi pararim.
Sed tu insulsa male et molesta uiuis,
Per quam non licet esse neglegentem.'

great opposition, and did not attain its height till the end of the first century after Christ. In 58 B.C., only about two years before this poem was written, the worship of the Egyptian divinities had been banished without the city walls. Upon the Campus Martius, however, Isis and Sarapis found a resting-place, and their temples were much frequented by the lower classes. Courtesans especially flocked to Isis, and invalids to Sarapis, whose priests were reputed to have wondrous powers of healing. But Sarapis may stand here for both divinities, and there is no need to suppose the girl was ill because of her professed destination or of her request for the use of a lectica. The spelling Sarapis instead of Serapis is well supported by inscriptions and by Greek usage.

27. mane, hold on there; not so fast. On the hiatus in arsis (with shortening of the final vowel, as always in Catullus) see Intr. 86 d.

28. istud: an accusative of specification, with which me habere is in apposition. Cicero in his letters generally uses a quod-clause without antecedent in such constructions. Note that not only with habere, but in each case below (parauit, illius an mei, utor, pararim) the word definitely indicating the lecticarii is omitted, since the subject has become painfully embarrassing to the speaker.

29. fugit me ratio, I did not think; a colloquialism; cf. Plaut. Amph. 385 scibam equidem nullum esse nobis nisi me seruum Sosiam; fugit te ratio; Auctor ad Herenn. II. 25. 40 in mentem mihi si uenisset, hoc aut hoc fecissem; sed me tum haec ratio fugit: but fugere is more common in phrases of similar meaning, either absolutely or with other subjects than ratio; cf. 12. 4 fugit te.

30. Cinna Gaius: i.e. C. Helvius Cinna, on whom see Intr. 63. The reversal of the formal order of nomen and cognomen is common enough in Latin, but the following here of the praenomen, added hastily after the familiar cognomen, indicates the embarrassment of the speaker.

31. quid ad me: sc. attinet; cf. Cic. Att. XII. 17 uelim appelles procuratores, si tibi uidetur; quanquam quid ad me? Mart. XII. 30. 1 sobrius est Aper; quid ad me?

32. quam mihi pararim: i.e. quam si mihi eos parauerim; cf. the ordinary comparative clauses introduced by tamquam without si.

33–34. Catullus has been stammering out his lame explanation with increasing embarrassment, and now detects, possibly by the ill-concealed merriment of his auditors, that the whole thing was a joke at his expense; hence the sudden

Litus ut longe resonante Eoa
Tunditur unda,

Siue in Hyrcanos Arabasue molles, change to humorous petulance with which he closes. — male: the word has a detractive force which neutralizes, like a negative, words of good signification (cf. 16. 13 male marem, 'no man at all'; Ov. Trist. I. 6. 13 male fidus, 'faithless'), and emphasizes words of bad signification, as here; cf. 14. 5; Ter. Hec. 337 male metuo, 'I'm horribly afraid'; Hor. Sat. I. 4. 66 rauci male, 'outrageously hoarse' (with similar anastrophe to that here). — uiuis: with almost the bare sense of es; cf. Plaut. Men. 908 ne ego homo uiuo miser (cf. 8. 10 nec miser uiue); Tib. II. 6. 53 satis anxia uiuas; and similarly Tac. Ann. IV. 58. 4 ceterorum nescii egere.

11. A final answer to a proffer of reconciliation from Lesbia, and an offer of service from Furius and Aurelius; see Intr. 41. — Date, the end of 55, or beginning of 54 B.C. (cf. v. 11). Metre, lesser Sapphic.

1. comites: the technical word for members of the cohors of a provincial governor; cf. 28. 1; 46. 9; as Catullus may now hope to be a comes of Caesar, Furius and Aurelius have offered to be his humble and useful friends, that they may profit by his good fortune, and Catullus ironically terms them his comites.

2. With vv. 2–12 cf. Hor. Carm. I. 22. 5–8; II. 6. 1–4; Epod. 1. 11–14. — extremos Indos: cf. Hor. Ep. I. 1. 45 impiger extremos curris mercator ad Indos; Prop. II. 9 29 quid si longinquos retinerer miles ad Indos; Stat. Silu. III. 2. 91 uel ad ignotos ibam comes impiger Indos.

3. ut: the rare locative use; cf. 17. 10; Plaut. Bacch. 815 in eopse astas lapide, ut praeco praedicat; Verg. Aen. V. 329 labitur ut forte [sanguis] humum super madefecerat. — longe resonante, far-echoing. — Eoa unda: i.e. the all-encircling ocean-stream at the extreme East; cf. Ov. Fast. VI. 474 uigil Eois lucifer exit aquis; Tib. IV. 2. 20 proximus Eois Indus aquis; Verg. Geor. II. 122 quos Oceano propior gerit India lucos.

5. Hyrcanos: a people dwelling by the southern end of the Caspian Sea (Mare Hyrcanum), joined by Vergil with the Arabians and Indians as distant enemies of Rome; cf. Aen. VII. 605 [siue bellum] Hyrcanis Arabisue parant seu tendere ad Indos. — Arabas molles: so called from their proverbial riches and luxury; cf. Verg. Geor. I. 57 molles sua tura Sabaei [mittunt]; Tib. II. 2. 3 urantur odores quos tener mittit Arabs.

6. Sacas: a nomadic people, called Scythians by the Greeks, dwelling far to the north-east of Parthia and Bactria; cf. Plin. N. H. VI. 17. 50 celeberrimi eorum [Scy- tharum] Sacae, etc. — sagittiferos Parthos: with reference, as very often in Latin literature, to the traditional weapon and manner of fighting of these most dreaded enemies of Rome; cf. Hor. Carm. II. 13. 17 miles [timet] sagittas et celerem fugam Parthi; Ov. Rem. Am. 157 uince Cupidineas pariter Parthasque sagittas; Stat. Theb. VI. 575 [credas] Parthorum fuga totidem exsiluisse sagittas.

7. septemgeminus: as having seven mouths; cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 800 septemgemini ostia Nili; Ov. Met. I. 422 ubi deseruit madidos septemfluus agros Nilus; V. 187 genitum septemplice Nilo. — colorat aequora: by its muddy waters, which, in their overflow, still fertilize the fields of Egypt; cf. Verg. Geor. IV. 291 [Nilus] uiridem Aegyptum nigra fecundat harena.

10. In this and the two following verses is a trace of the reconciliation of Catullus to Caesar; cf. Intr. 38 ff. The poet could not yet sing Caesar's praises unreservedly, though he might have done so had he lived longer; but he has already yielded from his earlier position of unmixed censure. — monimenta: the places mentioned are themselves the reminders of Caesar's greatness.

11. Gallicum: the Rhine is so styled since it was the boundary of Caesar's great conquests, and not with reference to his passage of the river from Gaul into Germany (cf. Caes. B. G. IV. 16 ff.). — horribile aequor: the proverbially rough English channel. — ultimos: cf. 29. 4, 12; Hor. Carm. I. 35. 29 serues iturum Caesarem in ultimos orbis Britannos; Verg. Ecl. 1. 66 penitus toto diuisos orbe Britannos. The preliminary invasion of Britain took place in the late summer of 55 B.C.

13–16. Apparently Furius and Aurelius, at the suggestion of Lesbia, tendered their services in bringing about a reconciliation with her; but Catullus thoroughly despises them for their actions in the past (cf. Intr. 37), and employs them as comites on only one, and that a final, errand, — to convey to Lesbia his decision against her appeal.

15. meae puellae: in half-scornful, half-mournful reminiscence of such passages as 2. 1 and 3. 3; cf. the tone of 58. Possibly Lesbia in this appeal had called herself by the endearing name that her lover used to apply to her.

16. non bona dicta: the clearly-worded and stinging, but controlled bitterness of his reply carries the expression of unalterable determination that is in marked contrast to the tone of 8.

17. uiuat ualeatque: a decisive utterance of farewell; cf. Hor. Ep. I. 6. 66 uiuas in amore iocisque; uiue, uale.

18. tenet, holds in thrall; cf. 55. 17; Verg. Ecl. 1. 31 me Galatea tenebat; Mart. XI. 40. 1 formosam Glyceram Lupercus solus tenet. — trecentos: colloquially used of indefinite multitude; cf. 9. 2 n.; Plaut. Mil. Glor. 250 trecentae possunt causae colligi (but Trin. 791 sescentae causae possunt colligi); Hor. Sat. I. 5. 12 trecentos inseris! and often elsewhere.

21. respectet: i.e. hope to win back; cf. Cic. Planc. 18. 45 ne par ab iis munus in sua petitione respectent. — ut ante: i.e. at the time mentioned in 107 and 36. 4, following upon the break that prompted 8.

22. uelut, etc.: love then languished only, but is now dead and cannot be recalled to life; with the figure, cf. Verg. Aen. IX. 433 purpureus ueluti cum flos succisus aratro languescit moriens, though Catullus secures greater delicacy of expression by introducing ultimi prati, and by using tactus instead of succisus.

12. On Asinius Marrucinus, a napkin-thief, concerning whom see Intr. 58. For the theme cf. 25, and the well-known epigrams on Hermogenes, Mart. XII. 29, and on an unnamed thief, VIII. 59. — On the date of composition, see vv. 9 n. and 15 n. Metre, Phalaecean.

1. sinistra: as the right hand was given in token of friendship, the left was proverbially the one devoted to theft; cf. Plaut. Pers. 227 illa altera furtifica laeua; Ov. Met. XIII. 111 [nec clipeus] conueniet natae ad furta sinistrae: the word occurs in 47. 1 in the figurative sense of 'accomplices' in thieving.

2. in ioco atque uino: cf. 50. 6; 13. 5.

3. lintea: no clear line seems to have been drawn between handkerchiefs, napkins, and even towels, for lintea, mantelia, mappae, and sudaria are used indiscriminately of all these articles. Sometimes the mappae are mentioned as a part of the regular table-furnishing (cf. Varr. L. L. IX. 47; Hor. Sat. II. 4. 81), and sometimes each guest provides his own, as here, and in Mart. XII. 29. 11 attulerat mappam nemo, dum furta timentur.

4. fugit te, that's where you're wrong; cf. 10. 29 n. — inepte, dunce, since you apparently think this business funny; cf. 25. 8 n., where the same word is used with slightly different application to characterize a similar thief of clothing.

5. quamuis, utterly; used by Catullus in this sense only here; but cf. Plaut. Pseud. 1175 quamuis pernix hic homost, and elsewhere.

6. Pollioni fratri: see Intr. 57.

7. talento: of an indefinitely large sum of money; cf. Plaut. Epid. 701 in meum nummum, in tuom talentum, pignus da.

8. mutari uelit: as if it were a business transaction; Pollio is so chagrined at your conduct that he would give a talent to change the facts. — leporum ac facetiarum: cf. the union of the same or similar words in one expression in 50. 7, 8; 16. 7.

9. disertus: i.e. Pollio has the feelings and training of a gentleman; for disertus implying, as here, distinctness of mental vision rather than of speech, see Ter. Eun. 1009 numquam pol hominem stultiorem uidi nec uidebo; at etiam primo callidum et disertum credidi hominem. — puer: frequently used somewhat loosely of a young man, as puella is of a young woman; cf. 45. 11; 62. 47; 78. 4; Hor. Carm. I. 5. 1 quis te puer urget, Pyrrha? Cic. Phil. 4. 1. 3 nomen clarissimi adulescentis, uel pueri potius (of Octavianus at the age of 19); Sil. Ital. XV. 33 non digne puer (of Scipio at the age of 20); cf. also 63. 63 n. As Pollio was born in 75 B.C., he might have been called puer up to the end of Catullus's life; but the date of this poem is established within narrower limits by vv. 14 ff.

10. hendecasyllabos: iambics like those of Archilochus were the traditional weapons of satire; cf. 36. 5; 40. 2 n.; 54. 6; but Catullus used hendecasyllables for the same purpose, as in 42; yet cf. Plin. Ep. V. 10. 2. — trecentos: cf. 9. 2 n.; 11. 18 n.

12. non aestimatione, etc.: i.e. the associations, and not the intrinsic worth, of the napkin make it valuable.

Si tecum attuleris bonam atque magnam
Cenam, non sine candida puella

13. mnemosynum: a Greek word, used only here for the pure Latin monimentum, as in Verg. Aen. V. 536 cratera quem Anchisae Cisseus sui dederat monimentum. — mei sodalis: the singular is used since the two friends, Veranius and Fabullus, are identified in the affections of Catullus; note also how in vv. 15–17 all expression of preference is avoided by reversal of the order of two names, and by the reduction of Veranius to the diminutive form to correspond with Fabullus (cf. Intr. 68; 28. 3 n.).

14. sudaria Saetaba: cf. 25. 7; Saetabis (now Jativa) was a city of Tarraconensis near the eastern coast of Spain, and was noted for its manufacture of flax; cf. Plin. N. H. XIX. 9.

15. miserunt: not far from 60 B.C. (cf. 9, and Intr. 68, 69), within a comparatively short time after which year, this poem, then, was probably written.

13. To Fabullus, an invitation to a dinner, where the guest is, however, to furnish the meal himself. Perhaps the dinner was to celebrate the return of Fabullus from Spain with Veranius; cf. 9 and Intr. 68, 69. — On the date of composition see v. 11 n. Metre, Phalaecean.

1. cenabis: to add to the humorous effect of what follows, the first two verses of invitation are phrased in a tone of lofty condescension, almost as if Catullus were conferring a munificent boon upon a humble friend. The verse is imitated in Mart. XI. 52. 1 cenabis belle, Iuli Cerealis, apud me.

2. The tone of dignity and condescension is kept up by the absurd twist of the modest phrase si mihi di fauent, and the effect is augmented by the extreme indefiniteness of the time set. Catullus has not quite yet determined the important question when he will offer his Barmecide feast. But some critics understand paucis diebus to imply that Fabullus is not yet in the city, and the time of his arrival is uncertain.

3. bonam atque magnam cenam: i.e. a dinner of fine quality and many courses.

4. candida puella: i.e. a psaltria, as in the invitation of Horace

Et uino et sale et omnibus cachinnis.
Haec si, inquam, attuleris, uenuste noster,
Cenabis bene; nam tui Catulli
Plenus sacculus est aranearum.
Sed contra accipies meros amores
Seu quid suauius elegantiusue est:
Nam unguentum dabo, quod meae puellae
Donarunt Veneres Cupidinesque,
Quod tu cum olfacies, deos rogabis
Totum ut te faciant, Fabulle, nasum.

to Hirpinus, Carm. II. 11. 21–24. With the adjective cf. 68. 134 candidus Cupido; 35. 8 candida puella; 68. 70 candida diua; 86. 1 Quintia est candida; Hor. Epod. 11. 27 ardor puellae candidae.

5. et uino, etc.: cf. 12. 2 n. — sale, wit, as in 16. 7; 86. 4. — omnibus cachinnis: cf. 31. 14 quidquid est domi cachinnorum.

6. uenuste: the word indicates the possession of a certain charm of society breeding, as in 3. 2; 22. 2. Cf. the similar vocative iucunde in 50. 16. — noster: also used in the vocative for mi in 44. 1.

7. cenabis bene: now that the condition has been stated, the words have a different expression from that in v. 1. — tui Catulli: cf. 14. 13 ad tuum Catullum; 38. 1 male est, Cornifici, tuo Catullo.

8. plenus aranearum: denoting utter abandonment and emptiness; cf. 68. 49; Plaut. Aul. 83 nam hic apud nos nihil est aliud quaesti furibus; ita inaniis sunt oppletae atque araneis; and more precisely Afran. 412 R. tamne arcula tua plena est aranearum? R. Browning, Ring and Book V. 49 when the purse he left held spider-webs.

9. contra, in return; cf. 76. 23 contra ut me diligat illa. — meros amores: a term implying a perfection of charm; cf. Mart. XIV. 206. 1 collo necte, puer, meros amores, ceston.

10. seu quid, etc.: = uel si quid, etc.; i.e. or if there be a term implying greater delightfulness, it is that. With the form of expression, cf. 22. 13; 23. 13; 42. 14; 82. 2, 4.

11. unguentum: when fine, one of the most expensive accompaniments of feasts; cf. 6. 8 n. Martial (III. 12), apparently inspired by this poem, chides a Fabullus for furnishing his guests with good ointment, but nothing else. — meae puellae: undoubtedly Lesbia; cf. 3. 3 n.; the lack of anything but happy feeling in the memory indicates that this poem was written while the love of Catullus for Lesbia was still untroubled by disagreement or suspicion, — therefore about 60 B.C.

12. Veneres Cupidinesque: cf. 3. 1 n.; Prop. III. 29. 17 adflabunt tibi non Arabum de gramine odores, sed quos ipse suis fecit Amor manibus.

14. Ellis quotes Ben Jonson, Cynthia's Revels V. 2 you would wish yourself all nose for the love on't (a perfume).

14.

Ni te plus oculis meis amarem,
Iucundissime Calue, munere isto
Odissem te odio Vatiniano :
Nam quid feci ego quidue sum locutus,
Cur me tot male perderes poetis ?
Isti di mala multa dent clienti
Qui tantum tibi misit impiorum.

14. To Calvus, on a Saturnalian joke played by him upon Catullus. — It was not uncommon for poets to dedicate and send new writings of their own to some friend as a gift on the Saturnalia, or on a birthday ; cf. Mart. X. 17 ; Stat. Silu. IV. 9 and pref.; II. 3. 62. Calvus had sent a book to Catullus, who, supposing it to be a choice bit of new poetry of his friend's composition, sat down eagerly to read it, but found, to his whimsical disgust, that it was made up of wretched specimens of some poetasters. On the personality of Calvus cf. Intr. 60. The allusion in v. 3 suggests that the poem was not written till after the great speech of Calvus against Vatinius, recorded in 53. It cannot, therefore, be assigned to an earlier date than the year 58 B.C., and probably was written on the Saturnalia of 56 B.C. (cf. introductory note to 53). On the Saturnalia of the year 57, Catullus was apparently in Bithynia, and on that of 55, quite possibly in Verona, while this poem appears to have been written in or near Rome. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. ni te, etc.: cf. the opening verses of the address of Maecenas to Horace quoted by Suetonius Vit. Hor.: ni te uisceribus meis, Horati, plus iam diligo, etc. — plus oculis: cf. 3. 5 n.

2. iucundissime: in about the same sense as carissime ; Calvus is addressed as iucunde in 50. 16 ; cf. also 62. 47 ; 64. 215.

3. odissem, etc.: i.e. I would hate you as roundly as does Vatinius. Calvus had on more than one occasion acted as the prosecutor of Vatinius ; cf. introductory note to 53. With the collocation odissem odio, cf. Psalms 139. 22 I hate them with perfect hatred.

5. male perderes: cf. 10. 33 n., and the converse in Hor. Sat. II. 1. 6 peream male.

6. di mala multa dent: a familiar formula of imprecation ; cf. 28. 14 ; Plaut. Most. 643 ; Ter. Phor. 976 malum, quod isti di deaeque omnes duint, and the prayer for blessing in Plaut. Poen. 208 multa tibi di dent bona. — clienti: under the earlier Roman feudal system, one duty of the patronus was to act as the legal representative of the cliens ; the same terms were now used to denote the legal counsel and the man for whom he incidentally appeared; cf. Hor. Ep. II. 1. 104 clienti promere iura.

7. tantum impiorum, so many scoundrels ; such abominable poets must be men of depraved character (but of himself in 16. 5 pium poetam) ; with the partitive expression cf. 5. 13.

Quod si, ut suspicor, hoc nouum ac repertum
Munus dat tibi Sulla litterator,
Non est mi male, sed bene ac beate,
Quod non dispereunt tui labores.
Di magni, horribilem et sacrum libellum,
Quem tu scilicet ad tuum Catullum
Misti, continuo ut die periret,
Saturnalibus, optimo dierum!

8. nouum ac repertum, newly discovered, for surely no one but a schoolmaster (litterator) would ever think of paying the honorarium of his legal counsel with books; but Sulla evidently thought he had found a kindred spirit in the poet-lawyer Calvus.

9. munus: the relation between lawyer and client was still construed to be that between the patronus and cliens of the earlier social system. Hence, as the patronus was bound to defend the cliens before the courts without the exaction of a special contribution of money from him, so the lawyer was still forbidden to accept a fee from his client. But the prohibition was usually evaded under the guise of gifts and legacies. — Sulla litterator: of this schoolmaster nothing further is known.

10. est mi male: cf. 38. 1; 3. 13 n. — bene ac beate: with the alliterative coupling cf. 23. 15 bene ac beate; 37. 14 boni beatique; so Cicero often, especially with an ethical meaning (= καλῶς κἀγαθῶς).

11. non dispereunt, etc.: schoolmasters were proverbially poverty-stricken (cf. of a later date Juv. 7. 203 ff.), and Calvus was lucky to get from Sulla even so much in return for his legal services.

12. di magni: the same words are used as an exclamation in 53. 5 also, but as a true invocation in 109. 3. — sacrum, accursed, as in 71. 1.

14. misti: for misisti; cf. 66. 21 luxti; 66. 30 tristi; 77. 3 subrepsti; 91. 9 duxti; 99. 8 abstersti; 110. 3 promisti. — continuo die, on the very next day; cf. Ov. Fast. V. 733 auferet ex oculis ueniens Aurora Booten, continuaque die sidus Hyantis erit; VI. 719 tollet humo ualidos proles Hyriea lacertos, continua Delphin nocte uidendus erit. continuo cannot be, as some suggest, an adverb, — if for no other reason, because die Saturnalibus alone is not Latin. The passage from Plaut. Poen. 497 die bono Aphrodisiis, is not in point, for die is there modified by an adjective. But the arrangement here makes improbable the direct modification of die by optimo and dierum. Calvus had evidently despatched the book the evening before, so that it might reach Catullus the first thing next morning.

15. Saturnalibus: a very ancient Latin festival, in commemoration of the golden age when Saturn dwelt among men. The especial day of the festival was Dec. 17 of each year, but the celebration was by popular usage extended over the week following. Presents were exchanged between friends, slaves were temporarily treated as if equals of their masters (cf. Hor. Sat. II. 7), and the utmost freedom and jollity prevailed.

Non, non hoc tibi, false, sic abibit :
Nam, si luxerit, ad librariorum
Curram scrinia, Caesios, Aquinos,
Suffenum, omnia colligam uenena,
Ac te his suppliciis remunerabor.
Vos hinc interea ualete, abite
Illuc unde malum pedem attulistis,
Saecli incommoda, pessimi poetae.

16. non, non: with this emphatic repetition, cf. Ter. Phor. 303 non, non sic futurum est, non potest! Prop. II. 3. 27 non, non humani partus sunt talia bona. — non tibi sic abibit, you shall not get off so easily; cf. Ter. And. 175 mirabar hoc si sic abiret; Cic. Att. XIV. 1. 1 non posse istaec sic abire. — false: keeping up the tone of humorously simulated indignation; the emendation to salse misses the point.

17. si luxerit, as soon as the morrow dawns; the conditional form points the restless impatience that can almost believe the morrow will never come. The day is spoiled for Catullus; but he must drag along a wretched existence through the tedious hours till next morning, when the shops of the booksellers will be opened once more, and he can take revenge in kind. — librariorum: generally used throughout this and the Augustan period of a mere copyist (scriba; cf. Hor. A. P. 354 scriptor si peccat idem librarius usque), but here of a copyist who is also a bookseller; in later Latin it is used of a true bookseller (bibliopola), who, however, usually employed a staff of copyists ; cf. Sen. Ben. VII. 6. 1 libros dicimus esse Ciceronis; eosdem librarius suos uocat.

18. scrinia: cylindrical boxes provided with a cover and used to hold each a number of MS. rolls standing on end. — Caesios, Aquinos: the plural denotes such poets as those mentioned. The change to the singular in Suffenum (v. 19) is but for variety, or perhaps because Suffenus personally was an object of greater attention to Catullus (see 22). Caesius is otherwise unknown; Aquinus only through Cic. Tusc. V. 63 adhuc neminem cognoui poetam (et mihi fuit cum Aquino amicitia) qui sibi non optimus uideretur.

19. omnia uenena: i.e. everything that exists in the line of poisons.

21. uos interea, while as for you, i.e. not to make you wait too long for my commands while I am busying myself with other matters ; cf. 36. 18; 101. 7 n. — ualete abite: asyndetic, as in Hor. Ep. I. 6. 67 uiue uale. With this dismissal of worthless literature cf. Verg. Catal. 7. 1 ite hinc, inanes, ite, rhetorum ampullae, inflata rore non Achaico uerba.

22. illuc: i.e. in malam rem, as is made clear by the common form of objurgation in the comedians. — malum pedem: with a play upon the meaning of pedem ; cf. Ov. Trist. I. 1. 16 uade, liber, uerbisque meis loca grata saluta ; contingam certe quo licet illa pede. — attulistis: cf. 63. 52 n. tetuli pedem.

23. saecli incommoda: pre eminent types of boredom.

14b.

Si qui forte mearum ineptiarum
Lectores eritis manusque uestras
Non horrebitis admouere nobis,

Commendo tibi me ac meos amores,
Aureli. Veniam peto pudentem,

14b. This fragment is so brief that it is almost impossible to determine its original character, though it is probably a modest and grateful recognition of attention at the hands of the public. By different critics it has been taken to be: the protasis to which 2. 11–13 is the apodosis, the whole thus forming a second, and general, introductory poem, while 1 is a special one; a fragment of the prologue to a libellus comprising 15–60, while 1 is the prologue to the libellus comprising 2–14; a fragment of the original epilogue to the libellus 2–14, while 1 is a prologue written expressly for the extant liber. Other less plausible theories have also found supporters. But as it seems more likely that the existing liber Catulli is a rearranged complex of earlier libelli of undeterminable content, and was published by an unknown editor after the death of the author, it is quite possible that this scrap was found among his papers in its present condition, and was inserted in this arbitrary position upon the publication of the liber. See also Intr. 47 ff.

1. ineptiarum: cf. 1. 4 nugas; Mart. II. 86. 9 turpe est difficiles habere nugas et stultus labor est ineptiarum; XI. 1. 13 qui reuoluant nostrarum tineas ineptiarum.

2. manus admouere: sc. ut uolumen reuoluatis; with friendly, not hostile intent; cf. Ov. Met. X. 254 manus operi admouet.

3. non horrebitis, shall not disdain; cf. Hor. Ep. I. 18. 24 quem diues amicus odit et horret. Others, who believe that 14b is really the first three verses of 16, thus strangely misplaced, would understand these words to mean 'shall have the impudence.'

15. To Aurelius, entrusting to his care a young boy, a favorite of the poet. Evidently a poem of the Juventius cycle, which comprises also, directly or indirectly, 16 (?), 21, 23, 24, 26, 40 (?), 48, 81, 99; all of these poems are probably to be attributed to the later period of the residence of Catullus in Rome (56–54 B.C.); see Intr. 37. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. commendo tibi: for some reason, perhaps the temporary absence of Catullus from town, Juventius is to be entertained by Aurelius. — meos amores: cf. 6. 16 n. tuos amores.

2. Aureli: see Intr. 37, 41. If not an intimate and warm friend, Aurelius must have been at this time on

Vt, si quicquam animo tuo cupisti
Quod castum expeteres et integellum,
Conserues puerum mihi pudice,
Non dico a populo: nihil ueremur
Istos qui in platea modo huc modo illuc
In re praetereunt sua occupati;
Verum a te metuo tuoque pene
Infesto pueris bonis malisque.
Quem tu qua libet, ut libet moueto
Quantum uis, ubi erit foris paratum:
Hunc unum excipio, ut puto, pudenter.
Quod si te mala mens furorque uecors
In tantam impulerit, sceleste, culpam,
Vt nostrum insidiis caput lacessas,
Ah tum te miserum malique fati,
Quem attractis pedibus patente porta
Percurrent raphanique mugilesque.

good terms with Catullus, or Juventius would not have been entrusted to his care. And, allowing for traditional grossness of language (cf. Intr. 32), there is no tone of unfriendliness in this poem. But Aurelius (and his friend Furius; cf. 23 and 24) betrayed the trust, and from this occasion dates the enmity of Catullus toward them. — ueniam pudentem, a modest favor.

4. integellum: with the meaning of integri in 34. 2.

6. non dico . . . uerum: cf. 16. 10 non dico . . . sed. — ueremur: for the first person singular, as not infrequently also nos for ego, and noster for meus (cf. v. 16, and 6. 16 n.).

7. modo huc modo illuc: cf. 3. 9 n.

11. qua libet: locative, while ut libet is modal; but cf. 40. 5; 76. 14.

14. mala mens, infatuation.

16. nostrum, etc.: i.e. a breach of chastity toward Juventius would be a treacherous crime against Catullus himself; cf. 21. 7 insidias mihi instruentem. — nostrum caput: i.e. nos (= me), but with a more definite reference to peculiar and cherished interests; cf. 68. 120 caput seri nepotis (= serum nepotem); Plaut. Capt. 946 propter meum caput; Hor. Carm. I. 24. 2 tam cari capitis; Sat. II. 5. 94 cautus uti uelet carum caput; Prop. II. 8. 16 in nostrum iacies uerba superba caput.

17. te: accusative of exclamation. — mali fati: with this genitive of characteristic cf. 17. 7 munus maximi risus; Juv. 3. 4 litus amoeni secessus.

18–19. On this punishment for adultery cf. C. I. L. IV 1261; Arist. Nub. 1083; Hor. Sat. I. 2. 133; Juv. 10. 317.

16.

Pedicabo ego uos et irrumabo,
Aureli pathice et cinaede Furi,
Qui me ex uersiculis meis putastis,
Quod sunt molliculi, parum pudicum.
Nam castum esse decet pium poetam
Ipsum, uersiculos nihil necesse est,
Qui tum denique habent salem ac leporem,
Si sunt molliculi ac parum pudici
Et quod pruriat incitare possunt,
Non dico pueris, sed his pilosis,
Qui duros nequeunt mouere lumbos.
Vos quod milia multa basiorum
Legistis, male me marem putatis?
Pedicabo ego uos et irrumabo.

16. Against Furius and Aurelius, who judge Catullus from his verses to be as bad as themselves. — The reference in v. 12 seems to fix the date of composition within the later period of the life of Catullus (see Intr. 37). Metre, Phalaecean.

1. pedicabo, etc.: the verbs are here not to be understood in the literal sense, but only as conveying vague threats, in the gross language of that day; cf. also Intr. 32.

5–6. With the sentiment cf. Ov. Trist. II. 354 uita uerecunda est, Musa iocosa mea; Mart. I. 4. 8 lasciua est nobis pagina, uita proba; Hadr. apud Apul. Apol. 11 lasciuus uersu, mente pudicus eras; Sen. Contr. exc. VI. 8 quid tu putas poetas, quae sentiunt, scribere? Vixit modeste, castigate; Plin. Ep. IV. 14. 5: Rob. Herrick To his book's end this last line he'd have placed, Jocund his Muse was, but his life was chaste; and per contra Sen. Ep. 114. 3. — pium poetam: cf. the contrary epithet applied to worthless poets in 14. 7 impiorum.

7. salem ac leporem: cf. 12. 8 leporum ac facetiarum; 50. 7 lepore facetiisque.

10. non dico . . . sed: cf. 15. 6 non dico . . . uerum.

12. milia multa basiorum: with reference to 48, and perhaps to other poems like it, addressed to Juventius, but not included in the final liber Catulli. The words are a precise repetition of those in 5. 10, but there is no indication that Aurelius and Furius were at this time interested in the Lesbia episode (but for a later date cf. 11), while they were interested in Juventius (cf. 15, 21, 23, 24, and 81). That the reference is to Juventius rather than to Lesbia is further indicated by the comparison of v. 13 male marem with Ov. Art. Am. I. 524 et siquis male uir

17.

O Colonia, quae cupis ponte ludere longo,
Et salire paratum habes, sed uereris inepta
Crura ponticuli assulis stantis in rediuiuis,
Ne supinus eat cauaque in palude recumbat,
Sic tibi bonus ex tua pons libidine fiat,
In quo uel Salisubsili sacra suscipiantur, quaerit habere uirum. On this use of male see 10. 33 n.

14. The last verse is identical with the first also in 36, 52, and 57.

17. To the village of Colonia; a wish for the violent waking-up of an indifferent old Veronese who had a gay young wife. Very possibly written at Verona before Catullus came to Rome to live (cf. v. 8 n.) The frequency of alliteration is noteworthy. — Metre, Priapean.

1. Colonia: usually identified since Guarinus with the modern village of Cologna, a few miles eastward from Verona, the marshy situation of which fits well with the description in the text. — ponte longo: not the desired bridge, but the existing ponticulus (v. 3) itself. The village folk would fain hold their solemn ceremonials on their bridge, but fear its rottenness, and inability to bear the weight of so many people at once. Pons, often modified by longus, was the ordinary term for a causeway constructed across a morass, part bridge, and part corduroy road; cf. Hirt. B. G. VIII. 14. 4 pontibus palude constrata legiones traducit; Tac. Ann. I. 61 ut pontes et aggeres umido paludum et fallacibus campis imponeret; I. 63 monitus pontes longos quam maturrime superare. — ludere: on the religious ceremonials (cf. v. 6) connected with the bridging of streams by the early Latins, see Preller Röm. Myth.[3] II. p. 134 ff. The custom had apparently been carried northward by the Latin colonists.

2. salire: of the dance, at first priestly, but afterward popular. Cf. the rites of the Salii at Rome (Preller I. pp. 347, 355 ff.). — paratum habes: the use of habere almost as a simple auxiliary is not rare in any stage of the Latin language; cf. 60. 5; 67. 31; and Draeger Hist. Synlax[2] I. pp. 294 ff. — inepta crura, shaky legs; the noun is unique in this humorous application to inanimate objects, pes being commonly used in such connections.

3. ponticuli: the diminutive implies the general worthlessness of the whole structure. — assulis rediuiuis, second-hand sticks.

4. supinus eat, tumble flat; apparently a colloquial expression; the adjective is used in this sense of the sea in Plin. N. H. IX. 2, and of the alluvial plains of Egypt in Plin. Pan. 30. — caua, deep; cf. 95. 5; Ov. Met. VI. 371 tota caua submergere membra palude.

5–7. sic fiat, . . . da: with this form of conditional wish cf. Hor. Carm. I. 3. 1 ff. sic te diua regat, Vergilium reddas; Verg. Ecl. 9. 30 ff. sic distendant ubera uaccae, incipe. Martial imitates in VII. 93. 8 perpetuo liceat sic tibi ponte frui.

6. Salisubsili: the word is not found elsewhere, unless the quota-

Munus hoc mihi maximi da, Colonia, risus.
Quendam municipem meum de tuo uolo ponte
Ire praecipitem in lutum per caputque pedesque,
Verum totius ut lacus putidaeque paludis
Liuidissima maximeque est profunda uorago.
Insulsissimus est homo, nec sapit pueri instar
Bimuli tremula patris dormientis in ulna:
Cui cum sit uiridissimo nupta flore puella (Et puella tenellulo delicatior haedo, tion from Pacuvius given by Guarinus on this passage be genuine, pro imperio salisubsulus si nostro excubet. Here Salisubsulus apparently means Mars; the derivation of the word is evident. The rites of the Salii at Rome were accompanied by violent dances apparently survivals of the orgiastic rites of most ancient times (cf. Preller l.c.), but even such rites as these are not to shake the new bridge.

7. maximi risus: with this genitive of characteristic cf. 15. 17 n.

8. municipem meum: evidently, then, a Veronese; the keen interest of Catullus in this local affair (and perhaps even the metre, used only here) point to a time when he was yet residing at Verona; cf. introductory note to 67.

9. per caputque pedesque: i.e. over head and ears, soused completely under, — and that too (vv. 10–11) in the deepest part of the slough. This marks the end of the movement begun by ire praecipitem. Yet per caput in Liv. Per. XXII. is explained in XXII. 3. 11 by equus consulem super caput effudit to be equivalent to praeceps (cf. Ov. Ib. 255 ab equo praeceps decidit), and the Gr. κατωκάρα has the same meaning.

10. ut: locative; cf. 11. 3 n. — totius lacus putidaeque paludis, the brimming, stinking swamp.

11. liuidissima: of a dark gray or bluish black color; cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 320 uada liuida; Hor. Carm. II. 5. 10 liuidos racemos.

12. insulsissimus est homo, he's the biggest ass of a man.

13. tremula: of the tremulousness of age, as in 61. 51; 61. 161; 64. 307; 68. 142. Precision is not attempted, or an aged man would not be represented as the father of so young a child; but, as in 61. 51; 64. 350; 68. 142, the poet emphasizes the traditional contrast between age and youth by the juxtaposition of the two extreme adjectives bimuli and tremuli.

14. uiridissimo flore, in her freshest bloom; cf. similar figures in 24. 1 flosculus Iuuentiorum; 61. 57 floridam puellulam; 61. 193 ore floridulo nitens; 63. 64 gymnasi flos; 64. 251 florens Iacchus; 68. 16 iucundum cum aetas florida uer ageret; 100. 2 flos iuuenum; Ter. Eun. 318 anni? sedecim, flos ipse; and more detailed similes in 61. 22 n.

15. et, and that too, adding an emphatic explanatory phrase; cf. Cic. Verr. II. 2. 21. 51 hostis, et hostis nimis ferus, and often. — delicatior, livelier, implying a tendency toward wantonness or sensuality; cf. Cic. N. D. I. 36. 102 pueri delicati nihil cessatione melius

Adseruanda nigerrimis diligentius uuis),
Ludere hanc sinit ut libet, nec pili facit uni,
Nec se subleuat ex sua parte, sed uelut alnus
In fossa Liguri iacet suppernata securi,
Tantundem omnia sentiens quam si nulla sit usquam,
Talis iste meus stupor nil uidet, nihil audit,
Ipse qui sit, utrum sit an non sit, id quoque nescit.
Nunc eum uolo de tuo ponte mittere pronum,
Si pote stolidum repente excitare ueternum
Et supinum animum in graui derelinquere caeno,
Ferream ut soleam tenaci in uoragine mula.

[existimant]; Att. I. 19. 8 odia illa libidinosae et delicatae iuuentutis.

16. nigerrimis: i.e. dead-ripe, and so needing the most careful protection from thieves, as the young wife from lovers.

17. pili facit: cf. 10. 13; 5. 3 n.; Petr. 44 nemo Iouem pili facit. — uni: on this genitive form see Neue Formenlehre II.[2] p. 254.

18. se subleuat, trouble himself; i.e. he feels no decent jealousy, and no regard for the honor of his family.

19. fossa: perhaps a water-way constructed to float logs off; for Liguria abounded in ship-timber according to Strabo 202 ἔχουσι δ' ὕλην ἐνταῦθα παμπόλλην ναυπηγήσιμον καὶ μεγαλόδενδρον. — Liguri securi: by transfer of epithet from alnus; cf. 31. 13 Lydiae lacus undae; 37. 20; 51. 11; Hor. Carm. I. 31. 9 premant Calena falce quibus dedit fortuna uitem; III. 6. 38 Sabellis docta ligonibus uersare glaebas; Verg. Aen. II. 781 Lydius arua inter opima uirum fluit Thybris.

20. tantundem, etc.: i.e. with no more feeling than if it had no existence at all. — nulla: cf. 8. 14 n.

21. meus: ironically; cf. Phaedr. V. 7. 32 homo meus se in pulpito totum prosternit (of a conceited tibicen). — stupor: for homo stupidus, the abstract for the concrete; a common usage in colloquial speech from Plautus down.

23. pronum: with no more precise reference to attitude than in v. 4 supinus.

24. pote (sc. est) = potest, as always with this word in Catullus, except in case of the compound utpote; cf. 45. 5; 67. 11; 76. 16 (twice); 98. 1. On the lengthening of the final syllable see Intr. 86 g. — ueternum: cf. v. 21 stupor.

25. supinum: with a play upon the actual position of the man in the mud.

26. soleam: there is no indication in ancient monuments or writers that the shoes were nailed on, though mules used as draught-animals, or on journeys, are several times mentioned as shod. Probably the metal sole (which in cases of great display was of silver, or even of gold; cf. Suet. Nero 30 soleis mularum argenteis; Plin. N. H. XXXIII. 140 Poppaea, coniunx Neronis principis, soleas delicatioribus iumentis suis ex auro quoque induere iussit) was attached to a sort of sock of leather or woven fibre, which was in turn fastened

Aureli, pater esuritionum,
Non harum modo, sed quot aut fuerunt
Aut sunt aut aliis erunt in annis,
Pedicare cupis meos amores.
Nec clam: nam simul es, iocaris una,
Haerens ad latus omnia experiris.
Frustra: nam insidias mihi instruentem
Tangam te prior irrumatione.

by thongs about the fetlock. Such a shoe might readily be lost in strongly adhesive mud.

18–20. In the MSS., 17 is immediately followed by 21; but the earlier editors, influenced by the identity of metre, inserted as 18 the fragmentary address to Priapus beginning hunc lucum tibi dedico, and followed it, as 19 and 20, with two poems of similar character, beginning hunc ego iuuenes locum, and ego haec ego arte fabricata rustica. The first fragment is quoted by Terentianus Maurus (v. 2754) and ascribed by him to Catullus, though there is no other reason for connecting it with his name. It is published in Anthol. Lat. 1700 Meyer, and by many editors of Catullus among his fragmentary poems. The other two poems are generally acknowledged to be spurious. They are published in Anthol. Lat. 1699, 1698 Meyer, 775, 774 Riese; App. Verg. VI. 3, 2 Baehrens; Priap. 86, 85 Buecheler, 85, 84 Mueller.— But the numbering of the genuine poems as disturbed by these interpolations has become traditional, and is here followed.

21. The appeal made to Aurelius in 15 for a chaste guardianship of Juventius has apparently proved ineffective, and this is a final remonstrance with a threat of punishment if it be disregarded. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. Aureli: see Intr. 37, 41. — pater: such a preëminent type of starvation is Aurelius that he might well pose as the parent, or presiding genius, among all similarly afflicted persons: cf. Mart. XII. 53 10 huic semper uitio [rapacitati] pater fuisti. — esuritionum: the word apparently occurs first in Catullus (cf. also 23. 14); it is also found in Petronius and Martial. With the use of abstract for concrete, cf. 47. 2 scabies famesque mundi, and often.

2. non harum modo, etc.: cf. 24. 2, 3; 49. 2, 3; Cic. Red. Quir. 7. 16 Cn. Pompeius, uir omnium qui sunt, fuerunt, erunt, uirtute, sapientia, gloria princeps.

4. meos amores: cf. 15. 1; 6. 16 n.

5. simul: sc. cum eo; una, the common supplement (cf. Plaut. Most. 1022 i mecum una simul), follows in a second clause; cf. 50. 13 ut tecum loquerer simulque ut essem.

7. frustra nam: cf. the same collocation in Hor. Carm. III. 7. 21 frustra: nam uoces audit integer. — insidias mihi instruentem: cf. 15. 16; and with the precise expression, Liv. VI. 23. 6 insidiis instruendis locum.

Atque id si faceres satur, tacerem :
Nunc ipsum id doleo, quod esurire,
Ah me me, puer et sitire discet.
Quare desine, dum licet pudico,
Ne finem facias, sed irrumatus.

Suffenus iste, Vare, quem probe nosti,
Homo est uenustus et dicax et urbanus,
Idemque longe plurimos facit uersus.
Puto esse ego illi milia aut decem aut plura
Perscripta, nec sic, ut fit, in palimpsesto

11. ah me me: an exclamation of commiseration for Juventius. — discet: Aurelius is pater esuritionum (v. 1), and the boy will of course be taught bad habits by him; i.e. if the affection of Juventius is won away from Catullus so that the boy will not return to him, but prefers to live as the protégé of Aurelius, he will perforce have to share the privations that exist in the house of Aurelius. It sounds as if the poem were meant to toll back Juventius as much as to score Aurelius.

22. On Suffenus, a conceited and voluminous poetaster, though a good fellow in other relations. — Metre, choliambic.

1. Suffenus. mentioned as a bad poet in 14. 19, but otherwise unknown. — Vare: probably Quintilius Varus of Cremona, mentioned also in 10. 1; cf. Intr. 66. — probe nosti: apparently a colloquialism; cf. Ter. Heaut. 180 hunc Menedemum nostin? Probe; Cic. De Or. III. 50. 194 Antipater, quem tu probe meministi.

2. uenustus, dicax, urbanus: see Quintilian's definition of these three qualities in VI. 3. 17, 18, 21; and cf. Sen. Const. Sap. 17. 3.

3. idem, at the same time, notwithstanding this; to point an unexpected contrast; cf. v. 15; 25. 4; 30. 9; 62. 43; 103. 4. — longe plurimos, i.e. an absolutely unprecedented number; longe is rare in the sense of multo before Cicero, but occurs frequently in his writings, and in later prose and poetry; cf. Caes. B. G. I. 2 apud Heluetios longe nobilissimus fuit et ditissimus Orgetorix; Hor. Sat. I. 5. 2 Heliodorus, Graecorum longe doctissimus.

4. milia: cf. 9. 2 n. — aut . . . aut: when correlatives, usually introducing mutually exclusive alternatives, as in 12. 10–11; 64. 102; 69. 9–10; 103. 1–3; while only a single aut is used in the sense of 'or even,' as in 29. 14; and this is apparently the only instance where the latter aut of two correlatives has that meaning.

5. sic: with a strongly demonstrative force, pointing to what precedes, 'such being the case,' 'though the verses are so many'; cf. Liv. I. 5. 4 crimini maxime dabant in Numitoris agros ab iis impetum fieri: sic ad supplicium Numitori

Relata : chartae regiae, noui libri,
Noui umbilici, lora, rubra membrana,
Derecta plumbo et pumice omnia aequata.

Remus deditur. — ut fit, as commonly; for mere scribbling, notes, and first drafts, wax tablets were generally used, or, especially when the writing was considerable in amount, parchment, on account of the facility with which writing on these substances could be erased. Surely the enormous amount of the verses of Suffenus must indicate that they are but a first draft, to be greatly reduced by revision, and therefore calling for the use of cheap materials. But, behold, he actually publishes them all just as they stand, and regardless of expense. — palimpsesto : writing-fabric from which previous writing has been erased, from a motive of economy, to make room for later. Parchment lent itself most readily to such erasure by washing, or erosion of the surface, though palimpsests of papyrus were certainly not unknown (cf. Marquardt Privatleben der Römer[2] p. 815; Birt Antike Buchwesen pp. 57, 58, 63) ; but it is by no means certain that they are referred to here.

6. relata : with especial reference to the form, as perscripta (v. 5) to the fact, of the writing. Referre commonly takes in this meaning the accusative with in ; but for the ablative with in see Cic. N. D. I. 12. 29 Democritus imagines earumque circuitus in deorum numero refert ; Rosc. Com. 2. 5 nomen in codice accepti et expensi relatum (edd. in codicem) ; and the ablative may be justified by the fact that here relata does not refer to technical entry in a book, but simply to writing in general. — chartae regiae : the best quality of paper appears to have been originally so called, and later to have received successively the names hieratica and Augusta (Marquardt,[2] p. 810 ; Birt, p. 247). — noui libri : i.e. no cheap palimpsest, but the best of paper, and that brand-new, 'new books of royal paper'; and the emphasis effected by the parathetic construction is supported by the asyndeton preserved throughout the following two verses.

7. umbilici : the rods, tipped sometimes with bosses, on which the rolls were wound (cf. the rollers with bosses at the lower edge of modern wall-maps) ; the name came originally from the central position of the tip of the rod at the end of the roll. — lora : probably the soft and elaborately decorated straps used instead of common cords to fasten the roll in shape when properly wound on the umbilicus. — rubra membrana : the cover of brightly colored parchment in which the completed roll was enclosed for greater protection ; cf. Ov. Trist. I. 1. 5 nec te [librum] purpureo uelent uaccinia fuco ; Tib. III. [Lygd.] 1. 9 lutea sed niueum inuoluat membrana libellum ; Mart. III. 2. 10 te [libellum] purpura delicata uelet ; X. 93. 4 carmina purpurea culta toga.

8. derecta plumbo : for securing greater regularity, a thin, circular plate of lead guided by a ruler was used to draw lines for the writing, and to mark off the space reserved for margins. derecta, like aequata, modifies omnia, and is written rather than directa because motion in a single, fixed direction is indicated ; cf. 63. 56 derigere aciem. — pumice omnia aequata : the poet enumerates in detail and in

Haec cum legas tu, bellus ille et urbanus
Suffenus unus caprimulgus aut fossor
Rursus uidetur : tantum abhorret ac mutat.
Hoc quid putemus esse ? Qui modo scurra
Aut si quid hac re tritius uidebatur,
Idem infaceto est infacetior rure
Simul poemata attigit, neque idem unquam
Aeque est beatus ac poema cum scribit :
Tam gaudet in se tamque se ipse miratur.

logical order (chartae . . . membrana), as if with the author's own delight, the materials of this édition de luxe, and then sums up the particular operations upon them by mentioning the first and the last ; 'the whole thing ruled with the lead and smoothed off with the pumice.' On the last operation cf. 1. 2 n.; Hor. Ep. I. 20. 2 [liber] pumice mundus ; Prop. III. 1. 8 exactus tenui pumice uersus eat ; Tib. III. (Lygd.) 1. 10 pumicet et canas tondeat comas [libelli] ; Ov. Trist. I. 1. 11 nec fragili geminae poliantur pumice frontes ; Mart. I. 66. 10–12 pumicata fronte si quis est non dum, nec umbilicis cultus atque membrana, mercare (and I. 117. 16; IV. 10. 1; VIII. 72. 1).

9. legas : subjunctive of general statement (tu being unemphatic), as in Plautus and Cicero, and less commonly in other writers. — bellus : apparently here with no uncomplimentary meaning ; but cf. the satirical definition of a bellus homo in Mart. III. 63.

10. unus, a mere ; cf. Cic. Att. IX. 10. 2 me haec res torquet quod non Pompeium tanquam unus manipularis secutus sim ; from this use developed the indefinite article of the Romance languages.

11. rursus, on the contrary ; cf. 67. 5. — abhorret ac mutat : sc. a se ; with the absolute use cf. Cic. De Or. II. 20. 85 sin plane abhorrebit et erit absurdus ; Or. 31. 109 an ego tragicis concederem ut crebro mutarent ?

12. modo : on the lengthening of the final syllable, see Intr. 86 g. — scurra, a wit, in the older English sense of a polished town gentleman as distinct from a country booby; cf. Plaut. Most. 14 tu, urbanus uero scurra, deliciae popli, rus mihi tu obiectas ?

13. aut si quid : cf. 13. 10 n. — tritius : if the emendation be correct, the meaning must be 'more polished,' 'more fastidious in taste'; cf. Cic. Fam. IX. 16. 4 ut Seruius facile diceret 'hic uersus Plauti non est ; hic est' quod tritas aures haberet consuetudine legendi.

14. infaceto rure, the stupid country, as contrasted with the urbanitas of the city ; cf. 36. 19 ; Plaut. Most. l.c.; Hor. Ep. II. 1. 158–160 graue uirus munditiae pepulare, sed . . . hodie manent uestigia ruris. With the collocation infaceto infacetior cf. 27. 4 ebrioso ebriosioris ; 39. 16 inepto ineptior ; 99. 2 dulci dulcius ; 99. 14 tristi tristius.

15. simul : for simul ac, as in 51. 6; 63. 27, 45; 64. 31, 366; 99. 7; and often in poetry.

16. aeque est, etc. : with the sentiment cf. Hor. Ep. II. 2. 106

Nimirum idem omnes fallimur, neque est quisquam
Quem non in aliqua re uidere Suffenum
Possis. Suus cuique attributus est error,
Sed non uidemus manticae quod in tergo est.

23.

Furi, cui neque seruus est neque arca
Nec cimex neque araneus neque ignis,
Verum est et pater et nouerca, quorum ridentur mala qui componunt carmina; uerum gaudent scribentes et se uenerantur.

18 ff. Catullus falls here into an unusually reflective vein, quite in the style of Horace.

20. attributus: i.e. in the act of creation. — error: i.e. some mental idiosyncrasy.

21. Cf. Hor. Sat. II. 3. 299 dixerit insanum qui me, totidem audiet atque respicere ignoto discet pendentia tergo; and Porph. on the passage, Aesopus tradit homines duas manticas habere, unam ante se, alteram retro: in priorem aliena uitia mittimus, ideo et uidemus facile; in posteriorem nostra, quae abscondimus et uidere nolumus. Hoc Catullus meminit. To this Persius refers in 4. 23 ut nemo in sese temptat descendere, nemo, sed praecedenti spectatur mantica tergo. The fable of Æsop is told in Babrius 66 and Phaedrus IV. 10.

23. An epigram of coarse irony on the poverty of Furius, with whom, as with Aurelius, Catullus was now on no friendly terms, since they had disregarded his injunctions concerning Juventius (see Intr. 37, 41). Perhaps the immediate inspiration to this poem came from the fact that Furius, being utterly bankrupt, as were many of the young men about town at that day, had become notorious among his acquaintances for fruitless attempts to negotiate a small loan, and in his despair was trying to enlarge his constituency by placating Catullus; cf. the similar attempt at a later date commemorated in 11. With the first verses cf. Mart. XI. 32. 1–4 nec toga nec focus est nec tritus cimice lectus, nec tibi de bibula sarta palude teges, nec puer aut senior, nulla est ancilla nec infans, nec sera nec clauis nec canis atque calix (and XI. 56. 3–6). — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. neque seruus: cf. 24. 5. Even a poor man could own a slave, as, for instance, Horace, who, when representing the extreme simplicity of his life, yet speaks of his dinner as served by three slaves (Sat. I. 6. 116). — neque arca: for Furius has no money to keep in it.

2. nec cimex: for there is not a bed to conceal one. — neque araneus: for there is not a roof under which he may spin his web. — neque ignis: for there is no hearth on which to build one.

3. uerum: with strongly contrasting adversation; the things Furius has are precisely those most

Dentes uel silicem comesse possunt,
Est pulchre tibi cum tuo parente
Et cum coniuge lignea parentis.
Nec mirum : bene nam ualetis omnes,
Pulchre concoquitis, nihil timetis,
Non incendia, non graues ruinas,
Non furta impia, non dolos ueneni,
Non casus alios periculorum.
Atqui corpora sicciora cornu
Aut si quid magis aridum est habetis
Sole et frigore et esuritione.
Quare non tibi sit bene ac beate ?

embarrassing to have in the absence of what he has not. — nouerca: proverbially an unpleasant relative; cf. Verg. Ecl. 3. 33 iniusta nouerca; Hor. Epod. 5. 9 quid ut nouerca me intueris ?

4. dentes, etc.: their fangs are so sharpened by perpetual hunger.

5. est pulchre tibi: cf. v. 15, and 14. 10 n.

6. lignea: the meaning is probably like that of sicca (v. 12), dry, withered, and so forbidding; cf. Lucr. IV. 1161 neruosa et lignea Dorcas.

7. nec mirum: cf. 57. 3; 62. 14; 69. 7.

9. non incendia, etc.: because there is no house to burn or collapse. On the dangers in Rome at a later date from such causes, cf. Juv. 3. 6–8, 190–202.

10. non furta impia: because there is nothing to steal: so Juvenal (14. 303–310) celebrates the happiness of those who need take no precaution against fire and thieves, while other writers mention the torments that accompany wealth; cf. Hor. Sat. I. 1. 76 ff. an uigilare metu exanimem, noctesque diesque formidare malos fures, incendia, seruos, ne te compilent fugientes, hoc iuuat ? Mart. VI. 33. 3 furta, fugae, mortes, seruorum, incendia, luctus adfligunt hominem.

11. casus alios periculorum: cf. Cic. Fam. VI. 4. 3 ad omnes casus subitorum periculorum obiecti sumus.

12. atqui: not like v. 3 uerum to introduce a counterbalancing affirmation, but to add a final particular that caps the climax; Furius and his family are happiest of all in their own bodily constitution, and not by reason of external circumstances: with this use of atqui cf. Cic. Sen. 19. 66 quae aut plane neglegenda est . . . aut etiam optanda . . . atqui tertium certe nihil inueniri potest. — sicciora: cf. v. 6 lignea; but siccitas is sometimes an agreeable quality in a woman; cf. 43. 3; Plaut. Mil. 787 [puellam] siccam et sucidam. — cornu: cf. 1. 2, where pumice-stone is mentioned as a typical dry substance.

13. aut si quid, etc.: cf. 13. 10 n.

14. frigore, etc.: cf. Mart. XII. 32. 7 frigore et fame siccus.

15. bene ac beate: cf. 14. 10 n.

A te sudor abest, abest saliua,
Mucusque et mala pituita nasi.
Hanc ad munditiem adde mundiorem,
Quod culus tibi purior salillo est,
Nec toto decies cacas in anno;
Atque id durius est faba et lapillis,
Quod tu si manibus teras fricesque,
Non unquam digitum inquinare possis.
Haec tu commoda tam beata, Furi,
Noli spernere nec putare parui,
Et sestertia quae soles precari
Centum desine : nam satis beatu's.

24.

O qui flosculus es Iuuentiorum,
Non horum modo, sed quot aut fuerunt
Aut posthac aliis erunt in annis,
Mallem diuitias Midae dedisses

25. nec: the negative is repeated as if noli spernere were ne sperne; cf. Plaut. Poen. 1129 mirari noli neque me contemplarier, and elsewhere. — putare parui: cf. 5. 3 n.

26. sestertia centum: somewhat less than $5000, no great sum for a young man at that time to borrow, when one remembers the fabulous amounts owed by such men as Caelius, Curio, and Caesar. — precari: construed ἀπὸ κοινοῦ with soles and desine.

27. satis beatu's (for beatus es): cf. Hor. Carm. II. 18. 14 satis beatus unicis Sabinis. See Crit. App.

24. To Juventius, a remonstrance on his intimacy with Furius; cf. Intr. 37. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. flosculus: cf. 17. 14 n. — Iuuentiorum: perhaps with a play upon the apparent etymology, as if the word were equivalent to iuuenum.

2. quot, etc.: cf. 21. 2 n.

4. Not that Juventius was rich, nor that Furius had also tried to borrow money from him, but simply that the wealth of a Midas was to the mind of Catullus small in comparison with what Furius asked. — Midae: Midas shared with Croesus among the more ancient worthies, and Attalus among the more modern, the honor of standing as the typical possessor of boundless wealth: cf. 115. 3 diuitiis Croesum superare; Mart. VI. 86. 4 heres diuitis esse Midae; Ov. Ex Pont. IV. 37 diuitis audita est

Isti cui neque seruus est neque arca,
Quam sic te sineres ab illo amari.
'Quid? Non est homo bellus?' inquies. Est:
Sed bello huic neque seruus est neque arca.
Hoc tu quam libet abice eleuaque:
Nec seruum tamen ille habet neque arcam.

Cinaede Thalle, mollior cuniculi capillo
Vel anseris medullula uel imula auricilla

cui non opulentia Croesi? Hor. Carm. I. 1. 12 Attalicis condicionibus nunquam dimoueas.

5. isti cui, etc.: i.e. Furius; cf. 23. 1.

7. quid: this familiar expression of surprise occurs also in 67. 37, and in slightly varied form in 62. 37 quid tum? 52. 1, 4 quid est? — homo bellus: cf. 22. 9 n. — est: bellus often refers to mere superficial attractiveness, and the sarcastic echo bello huic (v. 8) precludes the idea that Catullus was acknowledging in earnest any real excellence of Furius (cf. also note above); he means 'Yes, he is a fine fellow, forsooth, this starveling beggar.'

9. hoc tu, etc.: i.e. excuse and extenuate the thing as you please, the ugly fact remains, and you, as well as he, must acknowledge it; and Catullus in the last verse rehearses the charge again to give it due effect.

25. On the thievery of a certain Thallus: cf. 12 on a similar subject. — Metre, iambic tetrameter catalectic.

1. Thalle: nothing further is known of him, though unsatisfactory attempts have been made to identify him with Asinius Marrucinus of 12, by reason of the similar charge against him, and even with Juventius, by reason of the characterization in vv. 1–2. His thieving may have been carried on at the baths (cf. the Vibennius of 33), but to judge from the articles taken, he more probably, like Asinius and Hermogenes, found his opportunity at a dinner where he was a guest. — mollior: the traditional adjective to characterize the peculiar unmanliness here charged upon Thallus; cf. also 16. 4; Tac. Ann. XI. 2 Suillio postremum mollitiam corporis obiectante. — cuniculi: the Spanish rabbit described by Martial in XIII. 60; cf. also Varr. R. R. III. 12. 6 tertii generis est, quod in Hispania nascitur, similis nostro lepori ex quadam parte, sed humilis, quem cuniculum appellant. . . . cuniculi dicti ab eo, quod sub terra cuniculos ipsi facere solent, ubi lateant in agris; Plin. N. H. VIII. 217. Catullus had doubtless been instructed in Spanish matters by Veranius (cf. 9. 6–7).

2. anseris medullula: the delicate inner feathers of the goose; cf. Priap. 64. 1 quidam mollior anseris medulla. — imula auricilla: the lobe of the ear; cf. Cic. Q. Fr.

Vel pene languido senis situque araneoso,
Idemque Thalle turbida rapacior procella,
Cum † diua mulier aries ostendit oscitantes,
Remitte pallium mihi meum quod inuolasti
Sudariumque Saetabum catagraphosque Thynos,
Inepte, quae palam soles habere tanquam auita.

II. 13. 4 auricula infima molliorem (written in June, 54 B.C.); Bücheler conjectures that Cicero copied the expression from the liber Catulli, which must, therefore, have been published before the middle of the year 54 B.C. But the comparison is of precisely the homely sort that might be proverbial; cf. for example Amm. Marc. XIX. 12. 5 ima quod aiunt auricula mollior, where it is unsafe to judge that quod aiunt points to a proverbial comparison that spread from a mere invention of Catullus. auricilla is a diminutive from auricula, itself a diminutive, as ocellus (3. 18, etc.) from oculus. With the diminutive forms of noun and adjective in the same phrase cf. 3. 18 turgiduli ocelli; 64. 316 aridulis labellis.

4. idem: cf. 22. 3 n. — rapacior: indicating bold robbery; cf. Cic. Pis. 27. 66 olim furunculus, nunc uero etiam rapax.

5. diua, etc.: the verse is unintelligible, and no satisfactory emendation has yet been suggested. The general meaning seems to be that Thallus does his thieving boldly, — because there is nothing to fear, since he chooses an occasion when no one watches against thieves. If oscitantes be the correct reading, it must mean off their guard, rather than half-asleep, as the thefts were probably committed at dinners (see v. 1 n.).

6. pallium: a Greek garment, resembling somewhat the Roman toga, but square-cornered, freer in the arrangement of its folds, and often brightly colored. — inuolasti, pounced upon, when the wine went round, and the pallium had been thrown back from the shoulders of the wearer; cf. Mart. VIII. 59. 9–10 lapsa nec a cubito subducere pallia nescit, et tectus laenis saepe duabus abit.

7. sudarium Saetabum: cf. 12. 3 n., 14 n.; perhaps this was one of the set there mentioned. — catagraphos Thynos: the former word is so little used as to make impossible its sure interpretation here; nor is it certain even which of the two words is noun and which is adjective. But as catagraphi is used of outline drawings (in Plin. N. H. XXXV. 56), and as tablets were commonly made of box (Prop. IV. 23. 8 uulgari buxo sordida cera fuit), a Bithynian wood (cf. 4. 13 n.), it is quite possible that the objects referred to here were pugillares, carved or otherwise decorated on the outside, and so more valuable and tempting to a thief than was the ordinary kind. Perhaps they were a memento of the journey of Catullus himself to Bithynia. It would not be strange for the poet to bring his tablets to some dinner parties (cf. 50. 1–6). — Thynos: cf. 31. 5 n.

8. inepte, stupid, in expecting to be able to escape detection while flaunting his spoils openly: by the same word Asinius is addressed in 12. 4, but with a slightly different application.

Quae nunc tuis ab unguibus reglutina et remitte,
Ne laneum latusculum manusque mollicellas
Inusta turpiter tibi flagella conscribillent,
Et insolenter aestues uelut minuta magno
Deprensa nauis in mari uesaniente uento.

26.

Furi, uillula uestra non ad Austri
Flatus opposita est neque ad Fauoni

9. reglutina: as if whatever was touched by a thief's fingers stuck to them; cf. Lucil. XXVIII. 58–59 M. omnia uescatis manibus leget, omnia sumet, crede mihi; presse ut dicam, res auferet omnis.

10. laneum: a figure derived from the softness of wool; the meaning is doubtless the same as that of mollicellas, with a sneer at the unnatural mollitia of Thallus (v. 1–2), to which the sarcastic diminutives lend effect. — manus: as he tries with them to cover his back from the blows.

11. inusta: so Horace speaks of the burning of the lash in Epod. 4. 3 Hibericis peruste funibus latus; Ep. I. 16. 47 habes pretium, loris non ureris. — turpiter: i.e. with the punishment of a slave. — conscribillent: perhaps with a play upon the word, in that the lashes threatened are really those of satiric verse (cf. 12. 10–11; 42. 1–6; and the figure in Hor. Carm. III. 12. 4 patruae uerbera linguae), and not those at the hands of the law; cf. Plaut. Pseud. 544–545 quasi quom in libro scribuntur calamo litterae, stilis me totum usque ulmeis conscribito. On conscribillo beside scribo see Lachmann on Lucr. I. 360.

12. aestues: i.e. bend into all sorts of shapes, like a school-boy flinching from the lash. — uelut etc.: the poem, like several others in Catullus, ends with a comparison. — minuta nauis: so Cic. Att. XVI. 1. 3 minuta nauigia.

13. deprensa in mari: i.e. unable to make harbor before the storm breaks; cf. Verg. Aen. V. 52 Argolico mari deprensus; Hor. Carm. II. 16. 1 in patenti prensus Aegaeo. — uesaniente uento: observe the effect of alliteration and final consonance.

26. By itself this poem might well be taken as a mere jest at a friend's expense, or, if, with G, nostra be read in v. 1, at the expense of Catullus himself. But all other references to Furius are distinctly hostile in tone (cf. 11; 16; 23; 24), and there is no reason for premising a period of friendship in which Catullus might jest with Furius. Vestra should therefore be read, and the poem grouped with 23 and 24 as satirizing the extreme poverty into which Furius had doubtless brought himself. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. Furi: see Intr. 37. — uestra: i.e. of Furius and the two unpresentable members of his family whom Catullus does not mean to have him forget, his father and step-mother; cf. 23. 5–6.

2. opposita: with a play upon

Nec saeui Boreae aut Apeliotae,
Verum ad milia quindecim et ducentos.
O uentum horribilem atque pestilentem!

27.

Minister uetuli puer Falerni
Inger mi calices amariores,
Vt lex Postumiae iubet magistrae,
Ebrioso acino ebriosioris.

the meaning of 'to mortgage'; cf. Plaut. Pseud. 87 uix hercle opino [me posse mutuam drachumam unam dare], etsi me opponam pignori; Ter. Phor. 661 ager oppositust pignori decem ob minas.

3. Apeliotae: cf. Plin. N. H. II. 119 ab oriente aequinoctiali subsolanus . . . illum Apelioten Graeci uocant.

4. milia, etc.: the sum was no great one, when 10,000 sesterces was a reasonable rent for merely a house in Rome (cf. Cic. Cael. 7. 17); but as Furius was at the bottom of his pocket, it is probable that he had mortgaged his house for all that he could raise on it. Catullus is scornfully indicating, therefore, the meanness of the house itself.

5. o uentum, etc., O awful, fatal draft.

27. A drinking-song: the only, and a very admirable, poem of Catullus in the vein afterward so successfully worked by Horace. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. minister: so Horace (Carm. I. 38. 6) calls the puer (I. 38. 1) who serves him with wine. — Falerni: generally esteemed by the ancients as one of the best of the Italian wines; cf. Hor. Carm. II. 3. 8 interiore nota Falerni.

2. inger: for ingere; the only instance of the shortened imperative form of this verb (unless conger be right in Mart. VIII. 44. 9), though fer is the regular form both in the simple verb and in composition; cf. also dic, duc, fac. Ellis quotes other drinkers' abbreviations from Meineke Anal. Alex. p. 131, πῖν for πίνειν and πῶ for πῶθι. — amariores, more pungent, i.e. with no longer any admixture of water; so at the feast of Hor. Carm. I. 27 the drinking came at last to pure wine (cf. I. 27. 9 seueri Falerni) apparently by decree of the master of the feast: cf. a similar figure for unmixed wine in Hor. Carm. II. 11. 19 pocula ardentis Falerni.

3. lex magistrae: a ruler of the feast was chosen (usually by lot), and his decrees were absolute concerning the proportion of water to wine in the mixing, and the proposal and drinking of toasts; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 4. 18 nec regna uini sortiere talis. Here, in the unwonted abandon of the occasion, a woman was ruler.

4. ebrioso, etc.: i.e. fuller of grape-juice than the grape itself is; so Damalis (Hor. Carm. I. 36. 13) was multi meri. With the collocation ebrioso ebriosioris cf. 22. 14 n.

At uos quo libet hinc abite, lymphae,
Vini pernicies, et ad seueros
Migrate: hic merus est Thyonianus.

28.

Pisonis comites, cohors inanis
Aptis sarcinulis et expeditis,
Verani optime tuque mi Fabulle,
Quid rerum geritis? Satisne cum isto
Vappa frigoraque et famem tulistis?

5. at: introducing an imprecation; cf. 3. 13 n.; 28. 14; 36. 18. — quo libet hinc abite: cf. Plaut. Mil. 974 quin tu illam iube abs te abire quo libet. Baehrens suggests that quo libet is but politeness for in malam rem; cf. 14. 21 ff. With the sentiment cf. Petron. 52 aquam foras, uinum intro! — lymphae: cf. the plural also in 64. 162.

6. uini pernicies: i.e. water but ruins the wine. — seueros, the sober; cf. Hor. Ep. I. 19. 8 forum putealque Libonis mandabo siccis, adimam cantare seueris.

7. hic: with the word he raises his cup on high. — Thyonianus: Bacchus was called Thyoneus from his mother, the Theban Semele or Thyone. The adjective, being from a Greek proper name, is in the masculine form, perhaps after the analogy of οἶνος.

28. An address of sympathy to Veranius and Fabullus on their return in poverty from an absence in Macedonia on the staff of Piso, the governor. This absence of theirs is not to be confounded with their earlier trip to Spain mentioned in 9 and elsewhere (cf. Intr. 68 ff.). — Date, about 55 B.C. Metre, Phalaccean.

1. Pisonis: i.e. L. Calpurnius Piso Caesonianus, on whom see Intr. 70. — comites: i.e. members of the cohors, or staff, of a provincial governor; cf. 11. 1; 46. 9. — inanis: penniless, for Piso cared only to enrich himself, and Cicero scores him for his avarice in Pis. 35. 86; cf. 64. 288 uacuus.

2. aptis: i.e. accommodated to the circumstances of their bearers, as definitely explained by inanis; the idea is carried out by the addition of expeditis, here in the meaning of 'light,' but suggesting, from its commoner use, the idea of soldiers in light marching order.

3. The same careful recognition of equality in esteem that has been already noted (Intr. 68; 12. 13 n.) is kept up here by calling Veranius optime and Fabullus mi.

4. quid rerum geritis: a colloquial form of greeting; cf. Plaut. Aul. 117 rogitant me ut ualeam, quid agam, quid rerum geram.

5. uappa: wine that has become flat; hence a colloquialism for a good-for-nothing, and sometimes for a totally depraved fellow; cf. Hor. Sat. I. 1. 104 uappam ac nebulonem.

Ecquidnam in tabulis patet lucelli
Expensum, ut mihi, qui meum secutus
Praetorem refero datum lucello,
'O Memmi, bene me ac diu supinum
Tota ista trabe lentus irrumasti.'
Sed, quantum uideo, pari fuistis
Casu: nam nihilo minore uerpa
Farti estis. Pete nobiles amicos.
At uobis mala multa di deaeque
Dent, opprobria Romuli Remique.

29.

Quis hoc potest uidere, quis potest pati,
Nisi impudicus et uorax et aleo,

6. ecquidnam: cf. 10. 8 n. — tabulis, account-books. — lucelli: modifying ecquidnam.

7. expensum: the word expected, if there was actually aliquid lucelli, is acceptum (cf. Plaut. Most. 297 ratio accepti atque expensi; Cic. Rosc. Com. 1. 4 in codice accepti et expensi), but Catullus means to indicate his presumption that all accumulation was that of debt.

8. praetorem: i.e. provincial governor, as in 10. 10, 13. — refero datum lucello, set down to my credit; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 9. 14 lucro adpone.

9. Memmi: see Intr. 71. — bene me, etc.: i.e. you have most scurvily abused me and betrayed my hopes. See 16. 1 n.

11. pari: sc. mecum.

13. pete nobiles amicos: ironically spoken in self-apostrophe: the suppressed conclusion is something like sic irrumatus fueris. Neither the Pisones nor the Memmii were new families; the former claimed descent from Numa (Hor. A. P. 292 uos [Pisones] o Pompilius sanguis), and the latter from Mnestheus, the comrade of Aeneas (Verg. Aen. V. 117 Mnestheus, genus a quo nomine Memmi).

14. at uobis mala: cf. 3. 13 n.; 27. 5; 36. 18. — uobis: i.e. Piso and Memmius. — mala, etc.: cf. 14. 6 n.

15. opprobria: i.e. you disgrace to the noble origin of your nation; cf. 34. 22; 49. 1; 58. 5.

29. A sharp attack upon Julius Caesar for his patronage of Mamurra, with a snap at the end of the lash for Pompey, whose conduct of affairs in the city was alienating the optimates; cf. Intr. 38. The poem was written after the first invasion of Britain (cf. vv. 4, 12, 20), which took place in 55 B.C., and during the lifetime of Julia, Caesar's daughter and Pompey's wife (v. 24), whose death, in the fall of the year 54, weakened the bond between the two leaders. — Metre, pure iambic trimeter (but see note on v. 3).

1–2. The writer has before his mind the characteristics he believes

Mamurram habere quod comata Gallia
Habebat ante et ultima Britannia?
Cinaede Romule, haec uidebis et feres?
Et ille nunc superbus et superfluens
Perambulabit omnium cubilia
Vt albulus columbus aut Adoneus?
Cinaede Romule, haec uidebis et feres?
Es impudicus et uorax et aleo.

Caesar to possess, as v. 10 indicates: but cf. 16. 1 n. — quis potest pati: cf. 42. 5 si pati potestis.

3. Mamurram: perhaps with the first syllable long, as in 57. 2; Hor. Sat. I. 5. 37; Mart. IX. 59. 1; X. 4. 11; and in several derivatives from the same stem; though this would then be the only irrational foot in this poem, if vv. 20 and 23 be emended so as to introduce none but iambic feet. On the person see Intr. 73, 74. — quod, etc.: i.e. Mamurra has already absorbed and squandered all the proceeds of former conquests of Caesar (cf. vv. 18 and 19), and now shall the present conquests go the same road? — comata Gallia: i.e. Gallia transalpina, so called from the barbarian custom there prevailing of men wearing long hair; cf. Diod. V. 28; Cic. Phil. VIII. 9. 27 Galliam togatam remitto, comatam postulo; Plin. N. H. IV. 105 Gallia omnis comata uno nomine appellata; Suet. Iul. 22 initio quidem Galliam cisalpinam . . . accepit . . . mox . . . comatam quoque.

4. ultima Britannia: cf. v. 12; 11. 11 n. Caesar took command in Gaul in 58 B.C., and the first entry into Britain was made in the summer of 55 (cf. Caes. B. G. IV. 20 ff.). On the lengthening of the final syllable before initial br, see Intr. 86 g.

5. cinaede: here probably used simply as a word of general abuse (cf. Intr. 32), though Catullus may have in mind such reports about Caesar as those set down by Suetonius in Iul. 49. — Romule: Caesar is apparently so termed because of his posing as the chief man of the state domi et militiae.

6. et ille, etc.: i.e. shall he come back to Italy newly enriched from the conquests in Gaul and Britain, and carry on more insolently than ever his life of debauchery? — superbus et superfluens: both adjectives refer to his wealth.

7. perambulabit: the word is selected to suit the comparison in columbus (v. 8).

8. columbus, etc.: i.e. a favorite of Aphrodite, and so an irresistible suitor. Doves were sacred to the goddess, and drew her chariot, and Adoneus is but another form for Adonis; cf. Plaut. Men. 144 ubi Venus [raperet] Adoneum; Auson. Ep. 30. 6 Arabica gens [me existimant] Adoneum.

9. The appeal is repeated from v. 5, because in vv. 3–4 the reference was only to the ill-gotten wealth of Mamurra, while in vv. 6–8 it was to the expected revival of his licentious career.

10. The verse embodies the stinging conclusion following upon the major premise implied in vv. 1–4, with 6–8, and the minor in vv. 5 and 9. — impudicus has a technical reference to cinaede. — uorax doubtless refers to gluttony and

Eone nomine, imperator unice,
Fuisti in ultima occidentis insula,
Vt ista uestra diffututa mentula
Ducenties comesset aut trecenties?
Quid est alid sinistra liberalitas?
Parum expatrauit an parum elluatus est?
Paterna prima lancinata sunt bona;
Secunda praeda Pontica; inde tertia

wine-bibbing, and is not used in the sense of 33. 4 and 57. 8, nor in that of 80. 6 and 88. 8; yet Suetonius (Iul. 53) reports that Caesar was abstemious in regard to food and drink. — aleo: gambling had grown to be such a passion among the young Romans that it was deemed a serious vice and restrained by law; cf. Cic. Phil. XIII. 11. 24 in lustris, popinis, alea, uino tempus aetatis omne consumpsisses; Cat. II. 10. 23 in his gregibus omnes aleatores, omnes adulteri, omnes impuri impudicique uersantur.

11. eo nomine, on this account, one of the most frequent of the phrases borrowed from book-keeping. The demonstrative refers onward to the ut-clause in v. 13. — imperator unice: in ironical praise; repeated in 54. 7.

12. ultima, etc.: cf. v. 4 n. — Wildest rumors had long been afloat about the vast wealth to be found in the interior of Britain, and many young Roman spendthrifts had desired to join Caesar's expedition thither. He actually secured nothing of value, but evidently the true news had not yet spread through Italy.

13. ista uestra mentula: of a debauchee, as 17. 21 iste meus stupor, of a dull fellow. Mamurra is of course the man referred to (cf. 94, 105, 114, 115, and Intr. 73). The possessive points to Pompey as sharing blame with Caesar in the matter; cf. also vv. 21-24.

14. ducenties aut trecenties: sc. centena milia sestertium, as regularly with numeral adverbs in the expression of sums of money. Ducenti as well as trecenti (on which cf. 9. 2 n.) is used of indefinitely large number; cf. 37. 7; Hor. Sat. I. 10. 60 amet scripsisse ducentos ante cibum uersus. — comesset: cf. the same figure for squandering in v. 22 deuorare.

15. alid: for aliud, as 66. 28 alis for alius; so Plautus, Lucretius, and others. Cf. 34. 8 n. — sinistra liberalitas: since the giving was made possible by robbery (cf. 12. 1 n.); see Cato's strictures (on Caesar ?) in Sall. Cat. 52. 11 ff. quia bona aliena largiri liberalitas . . . uocatur etc. The question in this verse touches upon the fitness of giving such gifts; that in the next verse upon Mamurra's fitness to receive them.

17. Cf. 41. 4; 43. 5.

18. praeda Pontica: probably not that brought back by Pompey in 62 B.C. from the conquest of Mithradates, but that from the capture of Mitylene in 79 B.C., when Caesar was an officer in the army of the governor of Pontus and Bithynia. Thus early was the patrimony of Mamurra already squandered, and thus early, when gains were but small, did Caesar begin to lavish wealth upon him.

Hibera, quam scit amnis aurifer Tagus.
Nunc Galliae timetur et Britanniae.
Quid hunc malum fouetis? aut quid hic potest
Nisi uncta deuorare patrimonia?
Eone nomine † urbis opulentissime
Socer generque, perdidistis omnia?

19. Hibera: sc. praeda; when Caesar, in 61–60 B.C., governed Further Spain as propraetor. — scit, is witness to; cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 258 scelerum poenas expendimus omnes; . . . scit triste Mineruae sidus; Ov. Met. XII. 439 ast ego . . . scit tuus hoc genitor — gladium spoliantis in ima ilia demisi. — aurifer Tagus: the Tagus had a reputation like that of the Pactolus; cf. Ov. Am. I. 15. 34 auriferi ripa benigna Tagi; Mart. X. 16. 4 aurea diuitis unda Tagi; X. 96. 3 auriferum Tagum.

20. nunc: carrying on the series of prima . . . secunda . . . inde tertia; reports have just arrived of the completed conquest of Gaul and of the invasion of Britain, and the same fate now threatens them that befell former conquests, — to be devoured by Mamurra. — Galliae timetur et Britanniae: sc. ab incolis; cf. Sen. Med. 893 iam domus tota occidit, urbi timetur.

21. hunc malum, this rascal; cf. 64. 175 malus hic; Plaut. Merc. 974 ut dissimulat malus; Hor. Sat. I. 4. 3 siquis erat dignus describi, quod malus ac fur. — fouetis: sc. Caesar and Pompey. — quid hic potest nisi, etc., what is he good for except, etc.; i.e. it cannot be that you favor him because of his efficient services [Mamurra was praefectus fabrum under Caesar], for he is utterly useless except to swallow up money.

22. uncta: cf. 10. 11 n. — deuorare: cf. v. 14 comesset; Cic. Phil. II. 27. 67 non modo unius patrimonium sed urbes et regna deuorare potuisset; Vulg. Marc. 12. 40 qui deuorant (Matt. 23. 14 qui comeditis) domos uiduarum. — patrimonia: of the wealth that replaced the paterna bona (v. 17) first squandered.

23. eone nomine, etc.: i.e. was it for the sake of Mamurra's pockets that this last deal for the final ruin of Rome was made and cemented by a marriage? With this final appeal cf. 9. 10 n. — urbis, etc.: see Crit. App.

24. socer generque: perhaps with a sneer at the political interests that dictated the marriage of Caesar's daughter to a man over twenty years her senior, who had lately divorced his wife on suspicion of adultery with Caesar himself. Yet the marriage had actually proved a very happy one on both sides. — perdidistis omnia: the familiar cry of the optimates at this time, when they had become more estranged from their former idol, Pompey, by events following upon the famous council of the so-called triumvirs at Luca in 56 B.C., in accordance with which Pompey and Crassus were this year consuls, with the government of Spain and Syria respectively to follow, while Caesar had just had his command in Gaul extended for five years.

Alfene immemor atque unanimis false sodalibus,
Iam te nil miseret, dure, tui dulcis amiculi?
Iam me prodere, iam non dubitas fallere, perfide?
Nec facta impia fallacum hominum caelicolis placent;
Quae tu neglegis, ac me miserum deseris in malis.
Eheu, quid faciant, dic, homines, cuiue habeant fidem?
Certe tute iubebas animam tradere, inique, me
Inducens in amorem, quasi tuta omnia mi forent.
Idem nunc retrahis te ac tua dicta omnia factaque
Ventos irrita ferre ac nebulas aerias sinis.

30. A remonstrance addressed to Alfenus, on the ground that he had forsaken the poet in time of trouble. Attempts have been made by a forced interpretation of vv. 7–8 etc. to connect this poem with the Lesbia episode, proceeding on the theory that Alfenus had led Catullus into his intimacy with Lesbia, but refused assistance upon the arising of some difficulty in connection with the affair. But more probably these verses are but the morbidly exaggerated utterances of a distempered mind in, perhaps, a sick body, fancying itself deserted by former friends. Cf. 38, which is on a similar theme, and perhaps was written on the same occasion, though with a slight difference of tone; and see Intr. 56. — Date, probably 54 B.C. Metre, Asclepiadean major.

1. immemor: used absolutely, as in 64. 58. — unanimis: cf. 9. 4 n.

2. dulcis amiculi: perhaps adopting the phrase formerly used by Alfenus of Catullus.

3. With the arrangement of me and non dubitas, each joined with one of the two phrases with which they both belong, cf. 64. 336 adest . . . concordia; 68. 68 domum . . . dedit; Verg. Aen. IX. 12 nunc tempus equos, nunc poscere currus.

4. nec: by Plautus and other early writers nec is frequently used with no copulative force (= non), and perhaps is so used here; yet the idea may be 'you are injuring both me (vv. 2–3) and the gods (v. 4).'

5. quae: sc. facta impia. — neglegis, make light of, i.e. lightly commit; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 28. 30 neglegis fraudem committere? — me miserum; etc.: cf. Ter. Heaut. 258 me in his deseruisti malis.

6. fidem: with the thought cf. 64. 143; Ter. And. 425 nullane in re esse quoiquam homini fidem.

7. certe: sc. however so little you now remember it; cf. 64. 149. — animam tradere: sc. tibi; i.e. to surrender my whole being; cf. Cic. Rosc. Am. 50. 146 omnia sua praeter animam tradidit. — me inducens in amorem, drawing my affections to yourself.

8. quasi, etc.: i.e. assuring me I should never regret it.

9. idem: cf. 22. 3 n.

10. uentos: with the figure cf. 64. 59, 142; 65. 17; 70. 4 n.;

Si tu oblitus es, at di meminerunt, meminit Fides,
Quae te ut paeniteat postmodo facti faciet tui.

Paene insularum, Sirmio, insularumque
Ocelle, quascumque in liquentibus stagnis
Marique uasto fert uterque Neptunus,
Quam te libenter quamque laetus inuiso,

Hom. Od. VIII. 408 ἔπος δ' εἴ πέρ τι βέβακται δεινὸν, ἄφαρ τὸ φέροιεν ἀναρπάξασαι ἄελλαι; Theocr. 22. 167 τὰ δ' εἰς ὑγρὸν ὤχετο κῦμα πνοιὴ ἔχοισ' ἀνέμοιο (with which cf. Hor. Carm. I. 26. 2 tradam proteruis in mare Creticum portare uentis); Verg. Aen. IX. 312 aurae omnia discerpunt et nubibus irrita donant; Ov. Trist. I. 8. 35 cunctane in aequoreos abierunt irrita uentos? Tib. I. 4. 21 Veneris periuria uenti irrita per terras et freta longa ferunt; Stat. Ach. I. 960 irrita uentosae rapiebant uerba procellae.

11. Cf. Verg. Aen. I. 542–3 si genus humanum et mortalia temnitis arma, at sperate deos memores fandi atque nefandi.

31. On the delight of homecoming. The poem is a most unartificial and joyous pouring out of the poet's warmth of feeling at reaching Sirmio after his year of absence with Memmius in Bithynia (v. 5), and forms a perfect conclusion to 46, while it is itself supplemented by the quieter reminiscent strains of 4. With this and 101 cf. Tennyson Frater Ave atque Vale. — Date, summer of 56 B.C. Metre, choliambic.

1. paene: used adjectivally, in Greek fashion; cf. Cic. Rep. VI. 11 nunc uenis paene miles; Ov. Her. 15. 357 paene puer. Livy (XXVI. 42. 8) appears to be the first to write paeninsula. — Sirmio, the modern Sermione, is a long and narrow peninsula running out into the southern end of the Lago di Garda (Lacus Benacus). The ruins referred to by Tennyson (l.c.) are of the age of Constantine, but are called by the natives the Villa of Catullus, in accordance with the mediæval identification.

2. ocelle, the gem; cf. in this sense Aesch. Eum. 1025 ὄμμα πάσης χθόνος; Pind. Ol. 2. 5 Σικελίας τ' ἔσαν ὀφθαλμός; Plaut. Trin. 245 o ocelle mi (as a pet name); Cic. Att. XVI. 6. 2 ocellos Italiae, uillulas meas. — liquentibus: with the same meaning as liquidas in 64. 2 and limpidum in 4. 24.

3. uterque: as god of stagna and of mare; so Mart. Spect. 13. 5 numen utriusque Dianae (as goddess both of the hunt and of birth; cf. 34. 9–14)

4. libenter . . . laetus: a not infrequent collocation; cf. Plaut. Trin. 821 laetus lubens laudes ago (the speaker here also has just returned from a foreign shore); and at the end of dedicatory inscriptions; e.g. C. I. L. VI. 533 . . . POSVIT · L · L (i.e. laetus lubens). — inuiso: in the sense of (poetical) uideo, a rare use; cf. however 64. 233; Cic. N. D. II. 43. 110 et natos Geminos inuises sub caput Arcti.

Vix mi ipse credens Thyniam atque Bithynos
Liquisse campos et uidere te in tuto!
O quid solutis est beatius curis,
Cum mens onus reponit, ac peregrino
Labore fessi uenimus larem ad nostrum
Desideratoque adquiescimus lecto?
Hoc est quod unum est pro laboribus tantis.
Salue, o uenusta Sirmio, atque ero gaude;
Gaudete uosque, o Lydiae lacus undae;
Ridete, quidquid est domi cachinnorum.

5. Thyniam: the Thyni, a people from Thrace, are said to have settled that portion of Bithynia which lay close to the Thracian Bosphorus and was sometimes said to be divided from Bithynia proper by the river Psilis; but the two names, long before the time of Catullus, had ceased to express any actual distinction.

6. liquisse: for reliquisse, as not infrequently in Catullus (cf. e.g. 46. 4); but in 35. 3 and elsewhere relinquere occurs.

7. quid est beatius: cf. 9. 11. — solutis curis: cf. Hor. Carm. I. 22. 11 curis expeditis.

8. peregrino labore fessi: cf. Hor. Carm. II. 6. 7 lasso maris et uiarum militiaeque.

9. larem: the guardian deity of the household, worshipped with the penates at the hearth. The plural occurs but once in Plautus (Rud. 1206 ut rem diuinam faciam laribus familiaribus), and the word not at all in Terence; but from this time down the plural is common as a designation for the home, especially in connection with penates, with which divinities the lares came to be practically identified.

11. hoc est quod unum est, this is of itself reward enough.

12. ero gaude: probably an imitation of the familiar χαῖρέ μοι.

13. Lydiae: if the reading be correct, the lacus Benacus was so called from the well-known Etruscan settlements in the Po region. The Etruscans were traditionally of Lydian origin, and are often called Lydians by the poets; cf. Verg. Aen. II. 781 Lydius arua inter opima uirum leni fluit agmine Thybris; Hor. Sat. I. 6. 1 Lydorum quidquid Etruscos incoluit fines. With the transfer of epithet from lacus to undae cf. Verg. l.c. quidquid and 17. 19 n.

14. quidquid est, etc.: cf. 1. 8 n. quidquid hoc libelli. The whole clause is to be taken as a vocative.

32.

Meae deliciae, mei lepores,
Iube ad te ueniam meridiatum.
Et si iusseris illud, adiuuato,
Ne quis liminis obseret tabellam,
Neu tibi libeat foras abire;
Sed domi maneas paresque nobis
Nouem continuas fututiones.
Verum, si quid ages, statim iubeto:
Nam pransus iaceo et satur supinus
Pertundo tunicamque palliumque.

33.

O furum optime balneariorum
Vibenni pater, et cinaede fili,
(Nam dextra pater inquinatiore, Culo filius est uoraciore)

32. Contents, execrable. Date, undeterminable. Metre, Phalaecean.

1. amabo: thus alone, and with te, often used in comedy and other colloquial writings with imperatives; the complete form is perhaps sic amabo te, as if in the expression of a conditioned wish; cf. 17. 5 n.

2. mei lepores: plural, like deliciae and amores (21. 4, etc.); cf. Plaut. Cas. 217 respice, o mi lepos.

3. ueniam: the subjunctive with iubere is not common, but occurs occasionally from Terence down. — meridiatum: for the mid-day siesta; cf. 61. 118; 80. 3.

33. A bit of taunting advice to a notorious father and son, otherwise unknown, to go to the deuce. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. furum balneariorum: thieves of clothing at the baths were troublesome even in early Rome (cf. Plaut. Rud. 382 ff.), and the trouble continued into later times; cf. Petr. 30 subducta sibi uestimenta dispensatoris in balneo. — optime: i.e. most successful; with the ironical use cf. 36. 6 electissima pessimi poetae scripta; 37. 14 boni beatique.

3. dextra: the left hand is the one traditionally appropriated to stealing (cf. 12. 1 n.), but here Catullus means simply the hand, and

Cur non exsilium malasque in oras
Itis, quandoquidem patris rapinae
Notae sunt populo, et natis pilosas,
Fili, non potes asse uenditare?

34.

Dianae sumus in fide
Puellae et pueri integri;
Dianam pueri integri
Puellaeque canamus.

O Latonia, maxim[i]
Magna progenies Iouis,

not the right as distinguished from the left.

5. cur non itis: an impatient exhortation; cf. Ter. Eun. 465 quid stamus? quor non imus hinc? Hor. Carm. III. 19. 18 cur Berecyntiae cessant flamina tibiae? — exsilium: perhaps the preposition with oras answers for both nouns, as in Hor. Carm. III. 25. 2 quae nemora aut quos agor in specus: but cf. Acc. 599 R. proficisci exsilium. — malas in oras: with a play between the idea of actual banishment (cf. Ter. Phor. 978 publicitus hinc asportarier in solas terras) and that of the familiar in malam rem.

8. asse: i.e. the most insignificant sum; cf. 5. 3 n.

34. A festival hymn to Diana, written, as usual, as if to be sung by a chorus of girls and boys, but whether responsively or not it is impossible to determine. If so, however, vv. 1–4 and 21–24 were doubtless sung by the united chorus, vv. 5–8 and 13–16 by the girls alone, and vv. 9–12 and 17–20 by the boys alone. The composition was perhaps suggested by the annual festival to the Diana of the famous temple on the Aventine, held at the time of full moon (i.e. the Ides) in the month of August. To be compared with this are three odes of Horace: Carm. I. 21, IV. 6, and the Carmen Saeculare, — in all of which, however, Apollo is celebrated with Diana. — On the metre see Intr. 82 b.

1. in fide: cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 6. 33 Deliae tutela deae.

2. integri: modifying both nouns; so also in v. 3. Cf. 61. 36 integrae uirgines; 62. 45 uirgo intacta; Hor. C. S. 6 uirgines lectas puerosque castos.

5. Latonia: Latona is often honored in hymns to her children; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 21. 3–4 [dicite] Latonam supremo dilectam penitus Ioui; IV. 6. 37 rite Latonae puerum canentes.

Quam mater prope Deliam
Deposiuit oliuam,

Montium domina ut fores
Siluarumque uirentium
Saltuumque reconditorum
Amniumque sonantum;

Tu Lucina dolentibus
Iuno dicta puerperis,
Tu potens Triuia et notho es
Dicta lumine Luna.

7. Deliam, etc.: for the story see Ov. Met. VI. 333 ff. (also XIII. 634–5).

8. deposiuit: one of the few archaic forms in Catullus; cf. 36. 16 face; 61. 42 n. citarier; 63. 47, 52; 66. 35 tetuli; 44. 19 recepso; 66. 28 alis; 29. 15 alid; 66. 37 coetu; 17. 17 uni; 51. 10 suopte.

9–12. montium domina, etc.: cf. Hor. Carm. I. 21. 5–8 (which verses, however, these of Catullus far excel); III. 22. 1 montium custos nemorumque uirgo; IV. 6. 33–34; C. S. 1 siluarumque potens Diana; 69 quaeque Auentinum tenet Algidumque.

13. Lucina, etc.: cf. Hor. C. S. 13–16 rite maturos aperire partus lenis, Ilithyia, tuere matres, siue tu Lucina probas uocari seu Genitalis; Carm. III. 22. 2–4.

14. Iuno: as the feminine counterpart of the Diespiter (Iuppiter Lucetius), who was worshipped in the mid-months, Juno was regarded as the deity who brought back the moonlight after its monthly eclipse, and so was worshipped on the Kalends as Lucina, the light-bringing. From this office she came to be regarded as a goddess of birth. The etymological connection of Juno and Diana suggests how naturally the latter, herself the moon-goddess, became identified with the former in other aspects also.

15. potens Triuia: cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 247 Hecaten caeloque Ereboque potentem; Val. Flac. III. 321 Triuiae potentis occidit arcana genetrix absumpta sagitta. — It is not strange to find Diana, as the moon-goddess, identified with Ἑκάτη Τριοδῖτις, the night-goddess (Lat. Triuia), as was also Proserpina, the goddess of the dark underworld. — notho es dicta lumine Luna: i.e. she is called Luna from lumen, even though the light is not her own; cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 6. 38 crescentem face Noctilucam; C. S. 35 siderum regina bicornis, audi, Luna, puellas; Lucr. V. 575 luna notho fertur loca lumine lustrans. So Diana as the huntress and birth-helper, as Luna, and as Triuia (= Proserpina), is the threefold goddess; cf. Hor. Carm. III. 22. 4 diua triformis; Verg. Aen. IV. 511 tergeminam Hecaten, tria uirginis ora Dianae.

Tu cursu, dea, menstruo
Metiens iter annuum
Rustica agricolae bonis
Tecta frugibus exples.

Sis quocumque tibi placet
Sancta nomine, Romulique,
Antique ut solita es, bona
Sospites ope gentem.

35.

Poetae tenero, meo sodali
Velim Caecilio, papyre, dicas,
Veronam ueniat, Noui relinquens

17. cursu menstruo, etc.: cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 6. 39–40 prosperam frugum celeremque pronos uoluere menses.

21. quocumque . . . nomine: cf. Hor. C. S. 15–16 (quoted on v. 13).

22. Romuli, etc.: cf. Hor. C. S. 47–48 Romulae genti date remque prolemque et decus omne. With the hypermeter cf. 64. 298; 115. 5; and Hor. l.c.

35. An invitation to an otherwise unknown poet, Caecilius of Como, to visit Catullus at Verona, with incidentally a little pleasantry about a love-affair of Caecilius, and a neat compliment about his forthcoming poem. This address could not have been written before 59 B.C. (cf. v. 4 n.), and was written while Catullus was at Verona. Two occasions only are surely known on which he was at his ancestral home after 59, — once immediately on his return from Bithynia in the summer of 56, and again somewhat more than a year later, a few months before his death. The poem may well date from one or the other of these periods. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. tenero: as a writer of love-poetry; cf. Ov. (with whom it is a favorite word) Art. Am. III. 333 teneri carmen Properti; Rem. Am. 757 teneros ne tange poetas; Mart. IV. 14. 13 tener Catullus; VII. 14. 3 teneri amica Catulli. — sodali: implying warm intimacy; cf. 10. 29; 12. 13; 30. 1; 47. 6.

2. Caecilio: possibly an ancestor of C. Plinius Caecilius Secundus (circ. 62–113 A.D.), whose home was in Novum Comum, where inscriptions show that the Caecilii flourished. — papyre: apostrophe to his book by the author is not uncommon, especially in Ovid (e.g. Trist. I. 1) and Martial (e.g. VII. 84, also sent to a Caecilius).

3. relinquens: cf. 31. 6 n. liquisse.

Comi moenia Lariumque litus:
Nam quasdam uolo cogitationes
Amici accipiat sui meique.
Quare, si sapiet, uiam uorabit,
Quamuis candida milies puella
Euntem reuocet manusque collo
Ambas iniciens roget morari,
Quae nunc, si mihi uera nuntiantur,
Illum deperit impotente amore:
Nam quo tempore legit incohatam
Dindymi dominam, ex eo misellae

4. Comi: in the year 59 B.C., in accordance with the Vatinian law, Julius Caesar settled 5000 colonists at Comum, a town already established under Cn. Pompeius Strabo, and called the place Nouum Comum. Como, the modern town, lies at the southern end of the western arm of Lacus Larius (Lago di Como), about thirty miles north of Mediolanum (Milan).

5. cogitationes: Catullus desires to entice his friend to visit him, and so speaks with playful vagueness of certain weighty matters that can be communicated only by word of mouth. The whole tone of the poem is opposed to any serious interpretation of the phrase.

6. amici sui meique: the same playful mysteriousness of expression is kept up here, but Caecilius undoubtedly interpreted it correctly to mean that the friend was the writer himself. So Catullus speaks of himself to Alfenus in 30. 2 as tui amiculi.

7. uiam uorabit: an unusual, but perfectly intelligible phrase, perhaps favored by the alliteration, and augmenting by its exaggerated character the playfulness of the urgency.

8. candida: cf. 13. 4 n.

10. roget morari: for the more usual construction of rogare with ut see 13. 14.

12. illum deperit, is dying for him; cf. 100. 2; Plaut. Cas. 449 hic ipsus Casinam deperit; Nem. Bucol. 2. 70 rusticus Alcon te peream; and in 45. 5 perire used absolutely. — impotente, violent; cf. 4. 18 n.

13. quo tempore: denoting the starting-point of a continued action, as indicated by v. 14 ex eo; cf. 68. 15 tempore quo with 68. 20, where the continuance of activity from the initial period is clearly indicated. — legit: sc. illa; she read the opening verses lent her by the author; cf. 42, where Catullus was unable to recover his tablets lent, perhaps, under similar circumstances. The custom of public recitation by the author himself was introduced later by Asinius Pollio (cf. 12. 6).

14. Dindymi dominam: i.e. a poem, or play, based on the story of Cybele; cf. 63. 13, 91, and introductory note to that poem. — misellae: she is pitied only as suffering love's pleasing pain; cf. 45. 21; 50. 9; 51. 5.

15 Ignes interiorem edunt medullam.
Ignosco tibi, Sapphica puella
Musa doctior: est enim uenuste
Magna Caecilio incohata Mater.

Annales Volusi, cacata charta,
Votum soluite pro mea puella:
Nam sanctae Veneri Cupidinique
Vouit, si sibi restitutus essem

15. ignes: of the flames of love; cf. 2. 8 n. ardor; Verg. Aen. IV. 66 est mollis flamma medullas; Ov. Am. III. 10. 27 tenerae flammam rapuere medullae. — interiorem: cf. 64. 93 imis medullis; 64. 196 extremis medullis; 66. 23 penitus exedit medullas. — medullam: the word occurs only here in Catullus in the singular, but seven times in the plural in the same sense; cf. 25. 2 medullula.

16. ignosco tibi: sc. for falling deeply in love with Caecilius, and therefore seeking to detain him. — Sapphica musa: i.e. than the inspired Sappho herself; perhaps with a reminiscence of the frequency with which, in the Palatine Anthology, Sappho is ranked among the Muses.

17. doctior: an epithet commonly applied to poets, especially of this school, which disdained the rude simplicity of its predecessors, and sought inspiration among the polished Alexandrians (Catullus is styled doctus by Ovid in Am. III. 9. 62, by Lygdamus in Tib. III. 6. 41, and by Martial in VII. 99. 7 and XIV. 152. 1); Catullus means that a girl so appreciative of the best poetry must have within herself the attributes of a poet; so Propertius calls Cynthia docta (III. 13. 11), and in Catullus 65. 2 the Muses are doctae uirgines.

18. magna Mater: i.e. Cybele; cf. 63. 9 n. — incohata: there is no reason to suppose, as some have done, any playful implication that Caecilius had been unwarrantably long in getting beyond the beginning of his work.

36. Catullus calls upon the Annals of Volusius to aid him in the discharge of a vow made by Lesbia, invokes Venus to recognize the payment, and with the word throws the Annals into the fire. — The poem was evidently written about 59 or 58 B.C., in the short period of reconciliation after the temporary coolness marked by 8; cf. Intr. 19, 20. Metre, Phalaecean.

1. annales: probably chronicles in verse, after the fashion of the famous Annals of Ennius. — Volusi: cf. Intr. 75. — cacata charta, defiled sheets; the verses were so wretched that they but spoiled good paper.

2. mea puella: i.e. Lesbia; cf. 3. 3 n.

3. sanctae, divine; cf. 68. 5 sancta Venus; 64. 95 sancte puer [Cupido]; 64. 298 pater diuum

Desissemque truces uibrare iambos,
Electissima pessimi poetae

Et hoc pessima se puella uidit
Iocose lepide uouere diuis.
Nunc, o caeruleo creata ponto,
Quae sanctum Idalium Vriosque apertos, sancta cum coniuge; 64. 268 sanctis diuis. — Veneri Cupidinique: ct. 3. 1 n.

5. truces iambos: the traditional weapons of satire since the time of Archilochus; cf. 12. 10 n.; Hor. Carm. I. 16. 22 me quoque pectoris feruor in celeres iambos misit furentem; A. P. 79 Archilochum proprio rabies armauit iambo: the poems here meant are 8 and, perhaps, 37, possibly with others not included in the final liber Catulli.

6. electissima, choicest from their badness, the worst; with the irony of meaning cf. 33. 1 optime; 37. 14 boni beatique. — pessimi poetae: so Lesbia had in a pet called Catullus, in that he made her uncomfortable by his truces iambi; and she would, of course, dedicate to Vulcan not the bad poetry of some undetermined poetaster, but the particular verses that had stung her, which would naturally be destroyed after a reconciliation as painful memorials (cf. Hor. Carm. I. 16 on a similar occasion). Catullus now playfully ignores the real meaning of her words, and pitches upon Volusius as the pessimus poeta of his acquaintance, whose works are therefore due to Vulcan.

7. tardipedi deo: i.e. Vulcan, who was lamed by the fall from heaven to Lemnos (Hom. Il. I. 586 ff.); cf. Tib. I. 9. 49 illa uelim rapida Volcanus carmina flamma torreat; Quint. VIII. 6. 24 Vulcanum pro igne uulgo audimus.

8. infelicibus lignis: cf. Macrob. III. 20. 3 arbores quae inferum deorum auertentiumque in tutela sunt, eas infelices nominant . . . quibus portenta prodigiaque mala comburi iubere oportet; Legg. Regg. ap. Liv. I. 26 infelici arbori reste suspendito [perduellionem].

9. hoc: sc. uotum. — pessima puella: spoken jestingly (cf. 55. 10), but in reminiscence of the same term applied by her to him (v. 6), which he now attempts to pass on to the unfortunate Volusius.

10. iocose lepide: Catullus asserts (of course without foundation) that the vow was made sportively in the sense in which he has just interpreted it.

11. nunc: the moment of consummation of the vow has come, and the poet as officiating priest stands ready with the offering, and begins the final prayer. — caeruleo creata ponto: by early tradition Aphrodite was born of the sea-foam: cf. Hes. Theog. 195; Anacr. 54, etc. Note the solemn effect of the manifold address, with which cf. the prayer of Chryses to Phoebus, Hom. Il. I. 37 ff., etc.

12. Idalium: a town and wooded mountain of Cyprus, whereon stood a renowned temple of Aphrodite;

Quaeque Ancona Cnidumque harundinosam
Colis, quaeque Amathunta, quaeque Golgos,
Quaeque Durrachium Hadriae tabernam,
Acceptum face redditumque uotum,
Si non inlepidum neque inuenustum est.
At uos interea uenite in ignem,
Pleni ruris et inficetiarum
Annales Volusi, cacata charta.

cf. 61. 17; 64. 96; Verg. Aen. I. 680 hunc super alta Cythera aut super Idalium recondam; 692 in altos Idaliae lucos. — Vrios: apparently an otherwise unknown parallel form for Vrium (Ptol. III. 1. 17; Strab. VI. 3. 9), the name of a town which lay at the foot of Mons Garganus in Apulia, on the bay of Urias (Mela II. 4. 66). Its connection with the worship of Venus is unknown, though Ellis ascribes it to the association of this district with Diomedes (Verg. Aen. VIII. 9), who founded cities (e.g. Venusia) and temples in honor of Aphrodite (Serv. on Verg. Aen. XI. 246). — apertos, storm-beaten; Mela says the bay was pleraque asper accessu.

13. Ancona (from the Greek form Ἀγκών): this well-known city of Picenum contained a temple of Venus Marina; cf. Juv. 4. 40 domum Veneris, quam Dorica sustinet Ancon. — Cnidum: in this famous city at the extremity of the Cnidian Chersonese in Caria were several temples of Aphrodite, and the renowned statue of the goddess by Praxiteles. — harundinosam: the reeds of Cnidus were a great article of export on account of their excellence for manufacture into paper; cf. Plin. N. H. XVI. 157; Aus. Ep. 7. 49 nec iam fissipedis per calami uias grassetur Cnidiae sulcus harundinis.

14. Amathunta: a seaport town of southern Cyprus, where the Adonis-cult was especially carried on; cf. 68. 51 duplex Amathusia (of Venus). — Golgos: this town of Cyprus held, according to Pausanias VIII. 5. 2, the oldest shrine of Aphrodite; cf. Theocr. 15. 100 δέσποιν' ἃ Γολγώς τε καὶ Ἰδάλιον ἐφίλασας.

15. Durrachium: formerly called Epidamnus, a seaport in southern Illyria, and the common port of arrival and departure for the passenger traffic between Italy and the East; hence Hadriae tabernam.

16. acceptum face: i.e. discharge the account, now that the vow is to be paid; cf. the commercial term in Cic. Rosc. Com. 1. 4. in codice accepti. On face see 34. 8 n.

17. si, etc.: cf. 6. 2 and 10. 4; if Catullus had not departed from the strict form of the vow by offering a witty equivalent for the forfeited pledge, there would be no point to the si-clause. With si in this sense, putting deferentially a fact that must be generally conceded (= si quidem), cf. 76. 19.

18. at: turning from the previous thought and beginning the final malediction, as in 3. 13; 27. 5; 28. 14. — interea: cf. 14. 21 n.

19. pleni ruris, etc.: cf. 22. 14 n.

20. annales, etc.: with the repetition of the opening verse cf. 16, 52, and 57.

37.

Salax taberna uosque contubernales,
A pilleatis nona fratribus pila,
Solis putatis esse mentulas uobis,
Solis licere quidquid est puellarum
Confutuere et putare ceteros hircos?
An, continenter quod sedetis insulsi
Centum an ducenti, non putatis ausurum
Me una ducentos irrumare sessores?
Atqui putate: namque totius uobis
Frontem tabernae sopionibus scribam.

37. Catullus abuses and threatens Egnatius and his companions, who aspire to be lovers of his puella. The expression concerning the puella in v. 11, and the repetition of v. 12 almost verbatim from 8. 5, make it fairly certain that Lesbia is meant, and that these verses were therefore written in the period of temporary estrangement (cf. 8, 107, 36, and Intr. 18, 19). It will be noted that, as in 8, there is no distinct censure of Lesbia on the ground of unfaithfulness with others. — Date, about 59 B.C. Metre, choliambic.

1. taberna: here probably a cook-shop with a bad reputation.

2. pilleatis fratribus: i.e. Castor and Pollux, who are often represented in ancient art wearing the pilleus. Their temple, usually called that of Castor alone (Suet. Iul. 10), stood on the southern side of the Forum, near its eastern end. From its restoration in 6 A.D., three Corinthian columns still stand with the ancient podium. — pila: the pillar at the door of each taberna, or shop, that served as a sign-post for advertisement of the goods within; cf. Hor. Sat. I. 4. 71 nulla taberna meos habeat neque pila libellos; Mart. I. 117. 10 contra Caesaris est forum taberna scriptis postibus hinc et inde totis. Rows of tabernae stood even in the Forum from early times, while the streets of the vicinity abounded with them.

4. quidquid est puellarum: cf. 1. 8 n. quidquid hoc libelli.

5. The first foot of the verse is probably a dactyl; but cf. Intr. 79. — hircos: i.e. creatures detestable to all women; cf. 69 and 71.

7. an: with ellipsis of the verb, the complete idea being nescio centum sitis an ducenti, i.e. 'a hundred of you, or, for all I care, two hundred'; cf. Cic. Fam. XIII. 29. 4 non plus duobus an [i.e. 'or possibly it was'] tribus mensibus. But cf. 29. 14 ducenties aut trecenties. — ducenti: cf. 29. 14 n.

10. sopionibus scribam: i.e. he will scrawl insulting pictures or inscriptions over the house-front, advertising to passers-by the disorderly character of the house, as some dwellings in Pompeii seem to have been treated. sopio is apparently a colloquial word for penis.

Puella nam mi, quae meo sinu fugit,
Amata tantum quantum amabitur nulla,
Pro qua mihi sunt magna bella pugnata,
Consedit istic. Hanc boni beatique
Omnes amatis, et quidem, quod indignum est,
Omnes pusilli et semitarii moechi:
Tu praeter omnes une de capillatis,

Egnati, opaca quem bonum facit barba
Et dens Hibera defricatus urina.

38.

Male est, Cornifici, tuo Catullo,
Male est me hercule ei et laboriose,

11. mi: ethical dative. — meo sinu fugit: but cf. 44. 14 in tuum sinum fugi.

12. amata, etc.: cf. 8. 5, and introductory note to this poem.

13. magna bella: probably referring only in general to the great difficulties accompanying a successful liaison with a married woman, and one of Lesbia's social position.

14. boni beatique: ironical; cf. 33. 1 optime; 36. 6 electissima. The alliterative coupling is common; cf. 14. 10 n.

15. quod indignum est: with the form of clause cf. 38. 4.

16. semitarii: cf. 58. 4.

17. une: with a specializing force; cf. 10. 17 unum. — capillatis: contrary to the old Roman custom, young city fops of the day affected long hair elegantly dressed as well as beards (v. 19); cf. Cic. Cat. II. 10. 22 pexo capillo nitidos aut imberbis aut bene barbatos.

18. cuniculosae: as the home of a particular species of rabbit; cf. 25. 1. Perhaps there is an oblique reference to the effeminacy of Egnatius in the choice of the adjective.

19. Egnati: cf. 39, directed against him expressly. Nothing further is known of him. — bonum, pretty; said sneeringly; cf. Cic. l.c., bene barbatos. — barba: cf. v. 17 n.

20. dens: collective, as in 39. 20. — Hibera, after the Spanish fashion, with a transfer of epithet to urina from defricatus; cf. 17. 19 n. — defricatus: cf. 39. 17 ff.

38. An appeal to Cornificius for the consolation of some verses from him. Catullus was apparently ill, perhaps with his last illness, and, with the exaggerated fancies of a sick man, thinks himself deserted by his friends; cf. c. 30, and Intr. 42 and 56. — Date, probably 54 B.C. Metre, Phalaecean.

other hand, Cic. Fam. XVI. 5. 1 cum meliuscule tibi esset (to Tiro, left ill at Patrae). — Cornifici: see Intr. 61.

2. laboriose: used of physical suffering; cf. Cic. Phil. XI. 4. 8 dolores maiores quos laboriosos solemus dicere.

3. magis magis: cf. the same phrase in 64. 274, and Verg. Geor. IV. 311; but more commonly as in 68. 48. — in dies et horas: cf. Bell. Afr. 1. 2 omnes in dies horasque parati.

4. quod minimum, etc.: with the form of the clause cf. 37. 15 quod indignum est.

6. meos amores: not of a person (cf. 6. 16 n.), but of the affection itself: 'is it thus you treat my love for you?' Cf. 64. 27 n. With the ellipsis of the verb in a question of surprise cf. Cic. Att. XIII. 24 nihil igitur ne ei quidem litterarum?

7. paulum quid libet, just one little word (Ellis); with the ellipsis of the imperative cf. 55. 10 (sc. redite); Ter. And. 204 bona uerba, quaeso (sc. dicas).

8. maestius, and let it be sadder, — for Catullus is so disconsolate that he has ceased to desire encouragement, and yearns only for what is in accordance with his own mood. — lacrimis Simonideis: Simonides (556–467 B.C.), the celebrated poet of Ceos, excelled especially in plaintive themes, and so won even from Aeschylus the prize offered for an elegy upon the Athenians who fell at Marathon.

39. Egnatius, who was singled out for especial attack in 37. 17–20, is again satirized in the vein there indicated. Cf. also Martial's satire on the continual grin of Canius Rufus (III. 20). The poem was doubtless written at about the same time as 37, and the metres are identical.

1. candidos habet dentes: cf. 37. 19–20.

2. rei subsellium, the defendant's bench; cf. Cael. ap. Cic. Fam. VIII. 8. 1 inuocatus ad subsellia rei occurro. Egnatius was one of the friends gathered (aduocati) to lend the defendant their support at the trial, and ought to have assumed the expression of countenance that would have accorded with the pathetic character of the counsel's speech and have aided in influencing the judges, — but he grins.

Subsellium, cum orator excitat fletum,
Renidet ille. Si ad pii rogum fili
Lugetur, orba cum flet unicum mater,
Renidet ille. Quidquid est, ubicumque est,
Quodcumque agit, renidet. Hunc habet morbum
Neque elegantem, ut arbitror, neque urbanum.
Quare monendum est te mihi, bone Egnati.
Si urbanus esses aut Sabinus aut Tiburs
Aut parcus Vmber aut obesus Etruscus
Aut Lanuuinus ater atque dentatus
Aut Transpadanus, ut meos quoque attingam,
Aut qui libet qui puriter lauit dentes,
Tamen renidere usque quaque te nollem ;

5. lugetur: he is one of the friends attending the funeral, and should of all men show in his face his sympathy with the bereaved mother, — but he only grins.

6. quidquid est, whatever is going on.

7. morbum: cf. 76. 25 ; Sen. Clem. II. 6. 4 morbum esse, non hilaritatem, semper adridere ridentibus et ad omnium oscitationem ipsum quoque os diducere.

8. neque elegantem, etc.: i.e. it isn't a nice habit at all.

9. monendum est te: this impersonal construction of the neuter gerundive of a transitive verb with a direct object occurs only once in comedy (Plaut. Trin. 869 mi agitandumst uigilias), but is fairly common in Lucretius and Varro, though nowhere found in Caesar. It rarely occurs in Cicero and in the Augustan and later writers. — bone: this vocative is generally used ironically, in more or less mild disparagement; cf. Ter. Andr. 616 eho dum bone uir, quid ais? uiden me consiliis tuis miserum impeditum esse? So also Plato's ὦ γαθέ.

10 ff. The meaning is: if you were, not to say a native of Rome, but even anything else than what you are, your grinning would be more decent, though yet objectionable enough ; but from a Spaniard it is utterly nauseating. The instances cited are not chosen because of any especial qualities, but as types of Italian provincials from near and far, and the descriptive adjectives are therefore but formal epithets.

11. parcus. frugal. — obesus: the monuments of the Etruscans show them to have been a short and thick-set people.

12. ater, dark-complexioned ; cf. 93. 2. — dentatus: i.e. having fine teeth; cf. Mart. I. 72. 3 dentata sibi uidetur Aegle emptis ossibus Indicoque cornu.

13. meos. my countrymen, as Verona was a Transpadane town.

14. puriter: an antique word, used also in 76. 19; cf. such forms as 63. 49 miseriter.

Nam risu inepto res ineptior nulla est.
Nunc Celtiber es : Celtiberia in terra,
Quod quisque minxit, hoc sibi solet mane
Dentem atque russam defricare gingiuam,
Vt quo iste uester expolitior dens est,
Hoc te amplius bibisse praedicet loti.

40.

Quaenam te mala mens, miselle Rauide,
Agit praecipitem in meos iambos ?
Quis deus tibi non bene aduocatus
Vecordem parat excitare rixam ?
An ut peruenias in ora uulgi ?
Quid uis ? qua libet esse notus optas ?

16. inepto ineptior: on the collocation cf. 22. 14 n.

20. uester: i.e. the teeth of Egnatius as representative of those of his countrymen. — dens: collective, as in 37. 20.

40. An unknown Ravidus is threatened with the pillory of verse for playing the rival to Catullus. — The resemblance of this poem to 15, including the use of the phrase meos amores (v. 7), suggests that it too is one of the Juventius cycle, and was written at about the same time (see Intr. 37). Metre, Phalaecean.

1. mala mens: cf. 15. 14. — miselle: in feigned commiseration. — Rauide: undoubtedly dissyllabic (cf. such forms as lautus from an apparent lauitus, audeo from an apparent auideo, eicit dissyllabic in Lucretius, etc.); there are no cases of synapheia in Phalaecean verse.

2. iambos: these very verses, though Phalaecean, are perhaps those threatened, iambics being used as a general term for all verses of personal satire; cf. 54. 6; 12. 10 n.

3. tibi: ἀπὸ κοινοῦ with aduocatus and excitare. — non bene aduocatus: pointing to the older belief that a slight mistake in the observance of the ceremonials of invocation might bring down the wrath of the deity instead of his goodwill.

4. uecordem rixam: cf. 15. 14 furor uecors.

5. peruenias in ora uulgi: cf. Ov. Trist. III. 14. 23 populi peruenit in ora ; Ennius' Epitaph uolito uiuos per ora uirum.

6. quid uis: a colloquial question of indignant expostulation, more common with tibi expressed ; cf. Ter. Heaut. 61 pro deum atque hominum fidem, quid uis tibi ? Cic. De Or. II. 67. 269 quid tibi uis, insane ? Hor. Sat. II. 6. 29 quid uis, insane ? Prop. I. 5. 3 quid tibi uis, insane ? — qua libet, in any possible way ; cf. 76. 14; but in a locative sense in 15. 11.

Cum longa uoluisti amare poena.

Ameana puella defututa
Tota milia me decem poposcit,
Ista turpiculo puella naso,
Decoctoris amica Formiani.
Propinqui, quibus est puella curae,
Amicos medicosque conuocate:
Non est sana puella, nec rogare
Qualis sit solet aes imaginosum.

7. eris: sc. notus. — meos amores: probably of Juventius (cf. 15. 1), who had been exposed to the approaches of Ravidus by his residence with Aurelius.

8. cum longa poena: cf. 77. 2 magno cum pretio atque malo. Catullus expects long life for his verses (cf. 1. 10).

41. A scornful attack upon the greed for gold, joined with lack of personal attractions, of a certain Ameana, against whom 43 is also directed. On her connection with Mamurra see Intr. 74. — Date, 60–58 B.C. (cf. introductory note to 43). Metre, Phalaecean.

2. tota: emphatic; cf. Verg. Aen. I. 272 ter centum totos annos. — milia decem: sc. sestertium (= decem sestertia); the coincidence of this sum with that mentioned in 103. 1 suggests that the two epigrams concern the same event.

4. decoctoris Formiani: i.e. Mamurra, whose native city was Formiae (cf. 57. 4; Hor. Sat. I. 5. 37), and who is scored in 29 for squandering his ancestral estates and the large gifts of his patrons. Cf. 43. 5.

5. propinqui, etc.: early legislation in Rome provided for investigation into the question of a person's sanity, and for the interests of relatives in such a case; cf. XII. Tabb. ap. Cic. Inu. II. 50. 148 si furiosus escit, adgnatum gentiliumque in eo pecuniaque eius potestas esto; Hor. Sat. II. 3. 217 interdicto huic omne adimat ius praetor et ad sanos abeat tutela propinquos.

7. nec rogare, etc.: the passage is hopelessly difficult (cf. Crit. App.), but the emendation of Froelich departs least from the MSS., and is otherwise more nearly satisfactory than any other attempt. The idea is that if the girl would only consult her mirror (cf. Mart. II. 41. 8 si speculo mihique credis), she would herself be convinced of the folly of expecting ten sestertia. With aes (= speculum) cf. χαλκός in Aesch. Frag. 384 κάτοπτρον εἴδους χαλκός ἐστ', οἶνος δὲ νοῦ.

8. imaginosum: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον, but it must be used of the mirror because it pictures (imagines red-

42. An unknown woman, apparently a courtezan with whom Catullus has quarrelled, refuses to return to him his tablets, and hence these verses are marshalled to enforce the demand. The woman was certainly not Lesbia, for on no occasion does Catullus speak of her or to her in a tone of careless brutality, without any trace of former regard. Some critics, especially comparing v. 9 with 43. 3, 6, have thought her to be Ameana, but the position of 42 between two others concerning her is perhaps an indication that such was not the opinion of the original editor of the liber Catulli; see Intr. 48. Metre, Phalaecean.

1. hendecasyllabi: as the vehicle of satire; cf. 12. 10 n. — quot estis, etc.: i.e. every single one of you, no matter how many ye are.

3. iocum, her laughing-stock; in the sense of ludibrium; cf. Prop. III. 24. 16 me fallaci dominae iam pudet esse iocum; Petron. 57 spero me sic uiuere ut nemini iocus sim.

4. uestra: since they contained verses. With the close conjunction of mihi uestra note the repeated identification throughout of the poet with his own verses.

5. pugillaria: perhaps a colloquialism for the more commonly occurring pugillares; cf. also Gell. XVII. 9. 17 pugillaria noua, nondum etiam cera illita. The tablets in question may have contained the first sketch of a poem lent the woman for perusal before the quarrel intervened (cf. 35. 13 n.), or may have been used by Catullus for extempore composition at an entertainment at her house (cf. 25. 7; 50. 1–6), and kept by her. — si pati potestis: i.e. only imagine it, if you can; cf. 29. 1 quis potest pati.

6. reflagitemus: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

8. turpe incedere: even her gait betrays her wanton character; so Cicero speaks of Clodia (Cael. 20. 49), si denique ita sese gereret non incessu solum sed ornatu . . . ut meretrix uideatur; and Vergil of a different character (Aen. I. 405), uera incessu patuit dea; cf. Prop. II. 2. 6 incedit uel Ioue digna soror. — mimice ac moleste ridentem: i.e. wearing the sickening grin of a mime; and the characterization is still more offensively pushed by comparison with the unjoyous grin of a dog (cf. also v. 17). With

Si quid proficere amplius potestis, moleste in this sense cf. 10. 33. Note the alliteration.

9. Gallicani: perhaps used because the woman was of Gallia prouincia, though the adjective may be only a chance one, since Gallic dogs were a breed approved in Italy.

13. assis facis: cf. 5. 3 n. — lutum: cf. the similar use as a term of abuse in Plaut. Pers. 413 possum te facere ut argentum accipias, lutum? Cic. Pis. 26. 62 o tenebrae, o lutum, o sordes!

14. aut si, etc.: with the form of expression cf. 13. 10 n.

15. sed non, etc.: i.e. we are evidently accomplishing nothing by simply calling her bad names ; let us shout more loudly, that for very shame of public scandal, she may comply with our demand.

16. potest: sc. fieri ; for similar easy ellipses with posse see 72. 7; 76. 16, 24.

17. ferreo, brazen, showing none of the mobility of sensitiveness ; cf. Cic. Pis. 26. 63 os tuum ferreum senatus conuicio uerberari noluisti. — canis ore: cf. the Homeric epithet κυνώπης ; and among other nations the dog has been the type of shamelessness.

22. mutanda, etc.: i.e. perhaps success is impossible, but if there is any chance, it lies in a complete change of front.

24. Cf. the similar irony in the address to Canidia, Hor. Epod. 17. 38 ff.

43. Another uncomplimentary address to the Ameana of 41 (cf. vv. 1 and 5 of 43 with 3 and 4 of 41). It seems to have been composed while Catullus was still on good terms with Lesbia (hence in 60–58 B.C.), for it is well-nigh impossible that he should defend her, even as a paragon of beauty only, after the settled bitterness of their final separation. — Metre, Phalaecean.

2. nigris ocellis: cf. Hor. Carm. I. 32. 11 Lycum nigris oculis nigroque crine decorum; A. P. 37 spectandum nigris oculis nigroque capillo.

3. longis digitis: cf. Prop. II. 2. 5 fulua coma est longaeque manus, et maxima toto corpore, et incedit uel Ioue digna soror. Even the absurdly long fingers pictured in the older vase-paintings may indicate the partiality of the ancients for this mark of beauty.

4. nec nimis elegante, none too refined; cf. the similar use of nimis and nimium in 56. 4; 60. 5; 64. 22; 93. 1; and on the litotes also Mart. IX. 81. 3 non nimium curo. — lingua: after mentioning details that appeal to the eye, Catullus passes to that which offends the ear, — for elegans is apparently not used of the shape of features. The slobbering lips (v. 3) were naturally accompanied by a thick and awkward tongue that disfigured the speech.

5. Cf. 41. 4.

6. prouincia: i.e. Gallia Cisalpina, commonly called simply Prouincia.

7. comparatur: it may be that the city-man Mamurra himself had inflamed the vanity of the provincial Ameana by comparing her with the popular beauty of the capital. It is not likely that the relations between Catullus and Lesbia were discussed in the Province.

44. Sestius, following the custom of interchange of literary productions among friends (cf. 14), had sent Catullus a copy of his newly-composed oration, and had accompanied it with an invitation to a dinner, from which the poet was unexpectedly detained by a sudden attack of influenza. After his recovery he sends Sestius these verses in excuse for his absence, humorously attributing his illness to the frigid quality of the oration, which he had felt forced to read in expectation of being called upon for his opinion concerning it. — Metre, choliambic.

3. cordi: cf. 64. 158; 81. 5; 95. 9. — laedere: for Tibur was a fashionable place of summer abode, while Sabinum was noted only as the country of frugal peasant life.

4. pignore contendunt: cf. Verg. Ecl. 3. 31 tu dic, mecum quo pignore certes.

6. tua: since the villa was a part of the fundus. — suburbana: Tibur (now Tivoli) was but 18 miles from Rome, and indeed, being placed on the abrupt edge of the Sabine hills as they descend to the plain, was visible from the city itself.

7. malam, wretched; cf. Hor. A. P. 453 mala scabies. — expuli: cf. Hor. Ep. II. 2. 137 expulit elleboro morbum.

8. uenter: the stomach inflicted a penalty for contemplated gluttony, instead of lending itself to the expected gratification.

10. Sestianus: referring probably to P. Sestius, a man especially helpful to Cicero at the time of his exile, and defended by him in a speech still extant when prosecuted in 56 B.C. on a charge of uis. He was apparently a man of irritable temper and vigorous tongue; with v. 12 cf. Cic. Quint. Fr. II. 4. 1, etc. — dum uolo, etc.: i.e. I joyfully planned to accept the invitation, and under the circumstances dared not postpone the reading of the oration sent by my prospective host.

11. Antium: otherwise unknown. — petitorem: probably (as in Hor. Carm. III. 1. 10 hic generosior descendat in campum petitor) of a candidate for public office; but the occasion of the attack cannot be determined.

12. plenam, etc.: with a jesting double meaning; the speech was full of uenenum and pestilentia for the reader as well as for the unfor-

Et me recuraui otioque et urtica.
Quare refectus maximas tibi grates
Ago, meum quod non es ulta peccatum.
Nec deprecor iam, si nefaria scripta
Sesti recepso, quin grauedinem et tussim
Non mi, sed ipsi Sestio ferat frigus,
Qui tunc uocat me cum malum librum legi.

45.

Acmen Septimius suos amores
Tenens in gremio 'Mea' inquit, 'Acme,
Ni te perdite amo atque amare porro
Omnes sum adsidue paratus annos

tunate Antius; cf. 14. 19 (where uenena is used of wretched verses), and the collocation of uenenum and pestis in 77. 5–6.

15. urtica: nettles were a light article of vegetarian diet (cf. Hor. Ep. I. 12. 7 abstemius herbis uiuis et urtica), and thus well fitted for a patient with influenza; cf. concerning them Plin. N. H. XXII. 35 utilissimam cibis coctam conditamue arteriae tussi cum tisana pectus purgare.

16. tibi: i.e. the villa (cf. v. 17 ulta), to which the address turns from the fundus.

17. ulta: sc. by refusing to grant me relief from the punishment which the uenter had inflicted.

18. nefaria scripta: on the lengthening of the final short syllable in thesis see Intr. 86 g.

19. recepso: a sigmatic aorist form, which came to be used like the ordinary future-perfect, which was itself of similar origin. Cf. 34. 8 n.

20. non mi, sed ipsi Sestio: a παρὰ προσδοκίαν. — frigus: of a cold also in Hor. Sat. I. 1. 80 tentatum frigore corpus.

21. uocat: sc. ad cenam; cf. 47. 7 uocationes; Plaut. Capt. 76 quos nunquam quisquam uocat.

45. A love-idyl, marked by a most charming simplicity and abandon of sentiment and expression. It is impossible to determine whether the poem is purely ideal, or was written in honor of the love of some actual friend (cf. 6. 16–17). With it cf. the less intensity of Hor. Carm. III. 9. — Date, 55 B.C. (cf. v. 22 n.). Metre, Phalaecean.

1. Acmen: the Greek name suggests a libertina, while Septimius is the nomen of an honored Roman family. — amores: cf. 6. 16 n.

2. tenens in gremio: he was reclining on a couch, and she sitting on its edge close to him, and resting back in his arms; cf. the well-known illustrations of symposia.

3. perdite amo: cf. 104. 3; Ter. Phor. 82 hanc amare coepit perdite. — porro, in time to come; cf. 68. 45.

Quantum qui pote plurimum perire,
Solus in Libya Indiaque tosta
Caesio ueniam obuius leoni.'
Hoc ut dixit, Amor, sinistra ut ante,
Dextra sternuit adprobationem.
At Acme leuiter caput reflectens
Et dulcis pueri ebrios ocellos
Illo purpureo ore sauiata
'Sic' inquit, 'mea uita, Septimille,

5. pote: for potest; cf. 17. 24 n. — perire: usually with the person loved as direct object; cf. Plaut. Poen. 1095 earum hic alteram efflictim perit (cf. deperire in 35. 12; 100. 2); or as instrumental ablative, a construction common in the Augustan poets.

6. solus, etc.: cf. Hor. Carm. III. 27. 51 utinam inter errem nuda leones. — Libya: i.e. Africa; on its lions cf. Hor. Carm. I. 22. 15 Iubae tellus, leonum arida nutrix; Plin. N. H. VI. 195. — India tosta: cf. Verg. Geor. IV. 425 rapidus [rabidus?] torrens sitientis Sirius Indos ardebat caelo; Tib. II. 3. 55 comites fusci, quos India torret.

7. caesio leoni: cf. Hom. Il. XX. 172 [λέων] γλαυκιόων δ' ἰθὺς φέρεται μένει; Ellis quotes Plin. N. H. VIII. 54 leonum omnis uis constat in oculis.

8–9 (= 17–18). The reading seems correct as it stands here, so far as the contrast of sinistra and dextra is concerned, but a satisfactory interpretation of sinistra ut ante is impossible. Sneezing was apparently a good omen, however occurring, and there is no indication that Amor had sneezed before at all, or that he had ever been unpropitious (sinister) toward the lovers. ut ante may be corrupt, but none of the emendations proposed (see Crit. App.) are at all satisfactory. Bonnet suggests that the difficulty may lie in our lack of detailed knowledge of the interpretation of this omen among the ancients.

9. sternuit adprobationem: sneezing was early regarded as a good omen; cf. Hom. Od. XVII. 541 ff.; Xen. Anab. III. 2. 9 πτάρνυταί τις· ἀκούσαντες δ' οἱ στρατιῶται πάντες μιᾷ ὁρμῇ προσεκύνησαν τὸν θεόν; Ov. Epist. 18. 152 sternuit, et nobis prospera signa dedit; Prop. II. 3. 24 candidus argutum sternuit omen Amor.

10. caput reflectens: i.e. bending backward so as to turn her face upward toward that of Septimius.

11. pueri: cf. 12. 9 n. puer. — ebrios: i.e. swimming with passion, drunk with love; so Dido 'drank' love (Verg. Aen. I. 749 longum bibebat amorem). — ocellos: on the kissing of the eyes cf. 9. 9 n.

12. purpureo: = roseo (64. 49 tincta roseo purpura fuco); cf. 63. 74; 80. 1 rosea labella (as a mark of youthful and almost feminine beauty); Verg. Aen. II. 593 roseo haec insuper addidit ore; Ov. Am. III. 14. 23 purpureis condatur lingua labellis; Apul. Apol. 9 oris sauia purpurei.

13. mea uita: cf. 68. 155; 104. 1; 109. 1, and many instances in colloquial and amatory writers.

Huic uni domino usque seruiamus,
Vt multo mihi maior acriorque
Ignis mollibus ardet in medullis.'
Hoc ut dixit, Amor, sinistra ut ante,
Dextra sternuit adprobationem.
Nunc ab auspicio bono profecti
Mutuis animis amant amantur.
Vnam Septimius misellus Acmen
Mauult quam Syrias Britanniasque:
Vno in Septimio fidelis Acme
Facit delicias libidinesque.
Quis ullos homines beatiores
Vidit, quis Venerem auspicatiorem?

14. huic domino: i.e. Amori. — usque: i.e. from now on forever; cf. 48. 2. — seruiamus: cf. 61. 134 seruire Talasio.

16. medullis: cf. 35. 15 n.

17–18 (= 8–9). Amor declines to decide which loves the more ardently, and impartially sneezes his approbation of the professions of each.

20. amant amantur: for similar collocations of active and passive see Cic. Cat. II. 10. 23 amare et amari; Phaedr. II. 2. 2 ament amentur; Tac. Germ. 38 ut ament amenturue.

21. misellus: cf. 35. 14; 51. 5.

22. Syrias Britanniasque: the allusion suggests that the poem was composed in 55 B.C., for in that year Caesar invaded Britain and Crassus took command in Syria. Syria was proverbially a country of great wealth, and Britain was supposed to be so till the expedition of Caesar proved it otherwise (cf. Cic. Fam. VII. 7. 1 in Britannia nihil esse audio neque auri neque argenti (to Trebatius after the expedition); Att. IV. 16. 7 Britannici belli exitus exspectatur; . . . etiam illud iam cognitum est, neque argenti scripulum esse ullum in illa insula neque ullam spem praedae nisi ex mancipiis). The plural is used to indicate, not the several parts of the countries themselves, but such rich countries as Syria and Britain; cf. Prop. III. 16. 10 alias Illyrias.

24. facit, etc.: i.e. centres all her affections. — delicias: see 2. 1 n., and cf. 68. 26; 74. 2; Cic. Cael. 19. 44 amores autem et hae deliciae, quae uocantur.

25. quis, etc.: with a similar triumphant appeal close 9 and 107, and with an indignant appeal, 29, 47, 52, and 60.

26. auspicatiorem: cf. v. 19.

46.

Iam uer egelidos refert tepores,
Iam caeli furor aequinoctialis
Iucundis Zephyri silescit auris.
Linquantur Phrygii, Catulle, campi
Nicaeaeque ager uber aestuosae :
Ad claras Asiae uolemus urbes.
Iam mens praetrepidans auet uagari,
Iam laeti studio pedes uigescunt.
O dulces comitum ualete coetus,

46. Farewell to Bithynia! An unmatched expression of pure joy at the prospect of home-coming. Written in the spring of 56 B.C., when Catullus was concluding his year of absence in Bithynia with Memmius (see Intr. 29 ff.). The other poems of this little cycle are 31 and 4. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. egelidos: the prefix here has the privative meaning, as in Colum. X. 282 nunc uer egelidum, nunc est mollissimus annus; but the prefix is intensive in Verg. Aen. 8. 610 procul egelido secretum flumine uidit.

2. furor aequinoctialis: the ancients had long noted that the period of the autumnal and vernal equinoxes were accompanied by storms; cf. Plin. N. H. XVIII. 221.

3. Zephyri: the spring-wind of the Romans; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 4. 1 soluitur acris hiems grata uice ueris et Fauoni; Verg. Geor. II. 330 (uere) Zephyri tepentibus auris laxant arua sinus.

4. Phrygii campi: cf. 31. 5 Bithynos campos.

5. Nicaeae: Strabo (XII. 564) says of Nicaea, the capital of Bithynia, περικεῖται δὲ κύκλῳ πεδίον μέγα (cf. Phrygii campi) καὶ σφόδρα εὔδαιμον (cf. ager uber) οὐ πάνυ δὲ ὑγιεινὸν τοῦ θέρους (cf. aestuosae). Homer mentions the fertility of the region in Il. XIII. 793 ἐξ Ἀσκανίης ἐριβώλακος. — aestuosae: cf. 7. 5 n. The unhealthy character of the region as summer came on rendered departure even more agreeable.

6. claras Asiae urbes: i.e. the famous Greek cities on the Aegean coast of Asia proper. — uolemus: the figure of flying for sailing is prompted by the eagerness of the desire to be gone; cf. 4. 5 of the same voyage.

7. praetrepidans: tremulous with eager anticipation; cf. 63. 43 trepidante sinu.

8. pedes: not that Catullus was contemplating, as some have thought, a land journey, but the passionate eagerness for departure is most unaffectedly pictured by its influence upon the physical feelings.

9. dulces: the social intercourse among the comites had been pleasant, but far outweighing the pain of separation was the delight of home-coming. — comitum: i.e. the other members of the governor's cohors; cf. 11. 1; 28. 1.

Longe quos simul a domo profectos
Diuersae uariae uiae reportant.

47.

Porci et Socration, duae sinistrae
Pisonis, scabies famesque mundi,
Vos Veraniolo meo et Fabullo
Verpus praeposuit Priapus ille?
Vos conuiuia lauta sumptuose
De die facitis? mei sodales
Quaerunt in triuio uocationes?

10. longe: modifying profectos; the companionship had been endeared by their very distance from home.

11. diuersae: contrasted with simul profectos. — uariae: the homeward paths were not only pursued separately, but were varied in character, Catullus, for instance, making a detour to visit the clarae Asiae urbes.

47. An expression of indignation that two unworthy men should have enriched themselves as members of the cohors of Piso in Macedonia (cf. 28), while Veranius and Fabullus came back poor. With the interrogative form throughout cf. 60, and see 9. 10 n. — Date, about 55 B.C. (see Intr. 68). Metre, Phalaecean.

1. Porci et Socration: otherwise unknown, though the good Roman name of the former may indicate that he was a man of some social position, while the latter, being a Greek, was perhaps one of the favorites mentioned by Cicero, Pis. 27. 67 Graeci stipati quini in lectis, saepe plures. — sinistrae: i.e. accomplished assistants in plundering rascality; cf. 12. 1 n., and the familiar English expression 'his right-hand men.'

2. Pisonis: see Intr. 70. — scabies: referring to their generally dissolute character. — fames: referring to their greed for whatever they could lay hands on. — mundi: i.e. they are the pre-eminent types of rascally greed; cf. expressions of similar character in 14. 23; 21. 1. If mundus is here used, as seems probable, in the sense of orbis terrarum rather than of κόσμος, this is its first appearance with that meaning.

3. Veraniolo et Fabullo: cf. Intr. 68, 69; on the affectionate diminutive cf. 12. 17.

4. uerpus Priapus: Cicero (Pis. 28. 69) calls Piso an admissarius. — praeposuit: i.e. favored them above the others by giving them a chance to enrich themselves.

6. de die: to begin a feast during the working part of the day for the sake of spending a longer time at it was a mark of most excessive luxury; cf. Plaut. Asin. 825 aa amicam de die potare; Ter. Ad. 965 adparare de die conuiuium; Hor. Sat. II. 8. 3 de medio potare die; Liv. XXIII. 8. 6 epulari coeperunt de die . . . ut in domo diti ac luxuriosa.

7. quaerunt, etc.: i.e. compelled to play the parasite like Ergasilus

48.

Mellitos oculos tuos, Iuuenti,
Siquis me sinat usque basiare,
Vsque ad milia basiem trecenta,
Nec unquam uidear satur futurus,
Non si densior aridis aristis
Sit nostrae seges osculationis.

49.

Disertissime Romuli nepotum,
Quot sunt quotque fuere, Marce Tulli,
Quotque post aliis erunt in annis, in Plaut. Capt. 461 ff., in order to get a mouthful of food. — in triuio: as a general lounging place, where men rich enough to furnish a dinner might be found; cf. 58. 4 quadriuiis. — uocationes: not found elsewhere in the sense of 'invitations to dinner,' though this interpretation is justified by the use of the nouns uocatus and uocator, and of the verb uocare (cf. 44. 21), and by the point of the contrast thus drawn between the lots of the two pairs of friends.

48. One of the earliest poems of the Juventius cycle; cf. introductory note to 15, and with the theme the address to Lesbia, 7. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. mellitos: the same epithet is applied to Juventius in 99. 1. — oculos: cf. 9. 9 n.

2. usque, continually; cf. 45. 14.

3. milia trecenta: of indefinite multitude; cf. 9. 2 n.

5. non si: following a negation, as in 69. 3; 70. 2; 88. 8. — aridis aristis: cf. Aug. Ciu. Dei IV. 8 quamdiu seges ab initiis herbidis usque ad aridas aristas peruenireț.

49. An expression of thanks to M. Tullius Cicero on some unknown occasion. It is, however, mistakenly (see notes below) understood by many critics to be ironical in tone. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. disertissime: Cicero himself often uses this epithet, and always as one of high praise. — Romuli nepotum: cf. 28. 15; 34. 22; 58. 5. In none of these passages do the words themselves convey any tone of disparagement (see 58. 5 n.); cf. also Hor. Carm. Saec. 47 Romulae genti date decus omne; Carm. IV. 5. 1 Romulae custos gentis; Epod. 7. 19 Remi sacer nepotibus cruor.

2. quot sunt, etc.: cf. 21. 2–3; 24. 2–3; in the latter instance the expression is connected with high praise. — Marce Tulli: the formal address suits the formal expression of thanks to a patronus; cf. Cic. Att. VII. 7. 7 ad summam 'dic, M. Tulli': adsentior Cn. Pompeio, id est T. Pomponio; Cat. I. 11. 27 si res publica loquatur 'M. Tulli, quid agis?'

Gratias tibi maximas Catullus
Agit pessimus omnium poeta,
Tanto pessimus omnium poeta
Quanto tu optimus omnium patronus.

50.

Hesterno, Licini, die otiosi
Multum lusimus in meis tabellis,
Vt conuenerat esse delicatos.
Scribens uersiculos uterque nostrum
Ludebat numero modo hoc modo illoc,
Reddens mutua per iocum atque uinum.
Atque illinc abii tuo lepore

4. gratias: apparently, from v. 1 disertissime and v. 7 patronus, for some legal assistance or oratorical effort, though it is impossible to say what.

5. pessimus omnium poeta: the self-depreciation heightens the praise of v. 7; Catullus also speaks of himself with excessive modesty in addressing his patron Nepos in 1.

6. With the epanalepsis cf. that in 3. 3–4.

7. optimus omnium patronus: the construction of omnium with pessimus in v. 5 makes it impossible to suppose a double meaning here by construing omnium with both optimus and patronus.

50. At a banquet (v. 6), perhaps at the house of Calvus, perhaps at that of some friend (v. 7), Catullus and Calvus had engaged in a contest of improvisation, in which Catullus was so newly charmed with his friend's genius that he begs for a speedy repetition of the enjoyment. — Date uncertain, but perhaps not far removed from that of 14. Metre, Phalaecean.

1. Licini: i.e. Calvus, on whom see Intr. 60.

2. lusimus: of lyric, especially amatory, verse composition; cf. 61. 232; 68. 17; Hor. Carm. I. 32. 1 si quid uacui sub umbra lusimus tecum, barbite; Verg. Ecl. I. 10 ludere quae uellem calamo agresti; Aus. Epist. 7. 1 ut rescriberes ad ea quae ioculariter luseram. — tabellis: i.e. pugillaribus; cf. 42. 5 n.; 25. 7 n.

3. conuenerat, we had agreed. — esse delicatos: i.e. to compose amatory verse; cf. Cic. N. D. I. 40. 111 seiunctum a delicatis et obscenis uoluptatibus; Pis. 29. 70 ut omnes libidines . . . delicatissimis uersibus expresserit.

5. ludebat numero: cf. Verg. Ecl. 6. 1 ludere uersu. — modo hoc modo illoc: cf. the close of 3. 9.

6. reddens mutua: probably each improvising on a theme suggested by the other's verses. — per iocum atque uinum: cf. 12. 2.

7. illinc: perhaps meaning only 'from the contest,' though more

Incensus, Licini, facetiisque,
Vt nec me miserum cibus iuuaret,
Nec somnus tegeret quiete ocellos,
Sed toto indomitus furore lecto
Versarer cupiens uidere lucem,
Vt tecum loquerer simulque ut essem.
At defessa labore membra postquam
Semimortua lectulo iacebant,
Hoc, iucunde, tibi poema feci,
Ex quo perspiceres meum dolorem.
Nunc audax caue sis, precesque nostras,
Oramus, caue despuas, ocelle,
Ne poenas Nemesis reposcat a te.
Est uehemens dea : laedere hanc caueto.

likely indicating that the banquet was not at the house of Catullus. — lepore facetiisque: cf. 12. 8; 16. 7.

9. miserum: cf. 35. 14 n. misellae.

10. somnus, etc.: cf. 63. 37 piger oculos sopor operit; Verg. Geor. IV. 414 incepto tegeret cum lumina somno.

11. toto: modifying lecto; cf. Juv. 13. 218 toto uersata toro iam membra quiescunt. — indomitus furore: i.e. unable to quiet my feelings; but cf. 64. 54 indomitos furores.

13. simul: cf. 21. 5.

14. postquam: found only here in Catullus with the imperfect, though he uses it with the perfect six times, and with the pluperfect subjunctive in indirect discourse once (84. 11). In the comedians it occurs only once with the imperfect (Plaut. Most. 640), but this use becomes more frequent with Cicero, Sallust, and Livy.

16. iucunde: cf. 14. 2 n. iucundissime Calue.

17. dolorem: of longing passion; cf. 2. 7 n.

18. audax: with the meaning of superbus. — caue: cf. the same quantity in v. 19 and 61. 152, and frequently in the comedians and later. The verb occurs in Catullus but four times, and yet with three different constructions dependent upon it; the simple subjunctive in this and the following verses, the present infinitive in v. 21, and the subjunctive with ne in 61. 152. — preces: as expressed in v. 13.

19. ocelle: cf. 31. 2 n.

20. Nemesis: the Rhamnusia uirgo (64. 395; 66. 71; 68. 77) also appears as the avenger of slighted love in the episode of Narcissus, Ov. Met. III. 406 ff.

21. uehemens, severe, inexorable; cf. Cic. Cat. IV. 6. 12 si uehementissimi fuerimus, misericordes habebimur. The adjective is dissyllabic here, and apparently elsewhere, except in a verse of M. Aurelius to Fronto.

51.

Ille mi par esse deo uidetur,
Ille, si fas est, superare diuos
Qui sedens aduersus identidem te
Spectat et audit

Dulce ridentem, misero quod omnis
Eripit sensus mihi: nam simul te,
Lesbia, adspexi, nihil est super mi
. . . .

Lingua sed torpet, tenuis sub artus
Flamma demanat, sonitu suopte
Tintinant aures, gemina teguntur
Lumina nocte.

51. A free translation of the ode of Sappho given below, which is preserved in Longinus De Sublim. X. 2.

φαίνεταί μοι κῆνος ἴσος θέοισιν ἔμμεν ὤνηρ, ὅστις ἐναντίος τοι ἰζάνει καὶ πλασίον ἆδυ φωνεί-σας ὑπακούει

καὶ γελαίσας ἰμερόεν, τό μοι μάν καρδίαν ἐν στήθεσιν ἐπτόασεν· ὠς γὰρ εὔιδον βροχέως σε, φώνας οὐδὲν ἔτ' εἴκει.

ἀλλὰ καμμὲν γλῶσσα ἔαγε, λεπτὸν δ' αὔτικα χρῶ πῦρ ὐπαδεδρόμακεν, ὀππάτεσσι δ' οὐδὲν ὄρημ', ἐπιρρόμβεισι δ' ἀκουαι.

ἀ δέ μ' ἴδρως κακχέεται, τρόμος δὲ πᾶσαν ἄγρει, χλωροτέρα δὲ ποίας ἔμμι, τεθνάκην δ' ὀλίγω 'πιδεύης φαίνομαι ἄλλα.

It will be noticed that for the fourth stanza of Sappho Catullus substitutes one entirely his own, and that elsewhere he adds, omits, and modifies details at his pleasure. — Written at about the same time as 2 and 3, and perhaps the earliest of the poems addressed to Lesbia, and the one which first drew her regard. Metre, lesser Sapphic.

2. si fas est: a not infrequent, and peculiarly Roman, expression; cf. Cic. Tusc. V. 13. 38 humanus animus . . . cum alio nullo nisi cum ipso deo, si hoc fas est dictu, comparari potest.

5. dulce ridentem: cf. 61. 219; Hor. Carm. I. 22. 23 dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo, dulce loquentem. — misero: cf. 35. 14 n. misellae.

6. eripit sensus: cf. 66. 25 sensibus ereptis. — simul: cf. 22. 15 n. With the thought cf. Plaut. Mil. 1271 dum te optuetur, interim linguam oculi praeciderunt; Publ. Syrus 40 amor, ut lacrima, ab oculis oritur, in pectus cadit; Shaksp. Merch. Ven. III. 2 (of Fancy) it is engender'd in the eyes, With gazing fed.

8. See Crit. App.

10. suopte: cf. 34. 8 n.

11. gemina: by transfer of epithet from lumina; cf. 17. 19 n. — teguntur nocte: cf. Ernst Schulze

Otium, Catulle, tibi molestum est :
Otio exsultas nimiumque gestis.
Otium et reges prius et beatas
Perdidit urbes.

52.

Quid est, Catulle ? quid moraris emori ?
Sella in curuli struma Nonius sedet,

Aber wenn du nah gekommen, Kann ich doch dich nimmer sehn, Weil vor Freud' und Schmerz und Zagen Mir die Augen übergehn.

13–16. The prisoner of love is torn with conflicting emotions ; he rejoices in his chains and yet shrinks from the power of his own passion, which he perceives has been fostered by his lack of active occupations. With the thought cf. Ov. Rem. Am. 138 [otia] sunt iucundi causa cibusque mali, Otia si tollas, periere Cupidinis arcus. — otium : a similar emphatic repetition of otium at the beginning of closely connected verses is found in Hor. Carm. II. 16. 1, 5, 6.

13. molestum : of a disease, as in Hor. Ep. I. 1. 108 pituita molesta est.

14. exsultas . . . gestis : similar phraseology is used by Cicero, speaking of the slave to passion, in Tusc. V. 6. 16 exsultans et temere gestiens.

15–16. Probably Catullus had no especial case in mind, but Croesus and Sybaris might have served him as well-known examples of such ruined kings and cities.

52. This epigrammatic address is evidently one of the series of attacks upon the Caesarians, and was perhaps written in 55 B.C., when the excitement against Vatinius was at its height, and Catullus wrote 29 and other poems of the same general character. — Metre, iambic trimeter.

1. quid est : an appeal of impatient indignation, cf. Plaut. Amph. 556 quid est? quo modo? . . . tibi . . . linguam abscidam. — quid moraris emori : i.e. what pleasure can you take in life when such disgraceful things are possible? cf. Hor. Carm. III. 27. 58 quid mori cessas? Ov. Her. 9. 146 impia quia dubitas Deianira mori?

2. sella in curuli : apparently indicating that Nonius had just attained the first of the curule offices, — the curule aedileship, — perhaps as part of the program settled upon at the conference at Luca in 56 B.C. This would very well fit Nonius Asprenas, who was an officer of Caesar in the African War in 46 with the title of proconsul (Bell. Afr. 80. 4 ; Bell. Hisp. 10. 2), and perhaps not so well M. Nonius Sufenas, who so late as 56 was only tribunus plebis. — struma : a scrofulous tumor, used here as an uncomplimentary nickname, from the manner in which rascals were attaching themselves to the high offices of the state; cf. Cic. Sest. 65. 135 strumam ciuitatis ; Plin. N. H. XXXVII. 81 Nonius senator, filius

Per consulatum perierat Vatinius:
Quid est, Catulle? quid moraris emori?

53.

Risi nescio quem modo e corona,
Qui, cum mirifice Vatiniana
Meus crimina Caluus explicasset,

'strumae Noni' eius quem Catullus poeta in sella curuli uisum indigne tulit, where the reproduction of the order of the words in Catullus seems to indicate that Pliny understood struma to be an epithet and not a true cognomen.

3. perierat: παρὰ προσδοκίαν, for iurat. — Vatinius: in the year 55 the Caesarians succeeded in electing Vatinius praetor over Cato. Already in 56 Cicero had charged him with impudent assurance regarding a future consulship, and to the same characteristic Catullus refers here. But the coveted advancement was doubtless promised by Caesar at Luca, and this promotion to the praetorship was regarded but as a step thereto by Vatinius and by Catullus as well, whose indignation was all the more fired by it.

4. The first verse is identical with the last also in 16 and 36.

53. An anecdotal jesting compliment to the oratorical power of Calvus, as 50 was a compliment to his poetical talent. Tacitus (Dial. 21) speaks of the orations of Calvus against Vatinius as still read, praecipua secunda ex iis oratio, as if there were at least three of them. He also says (Dial. 34) that Calvus was not much more than 22 years old when he attacked Vatinius iis orationibus quas hodie quoque cum admiratione legimus. This remark may well apply to the prosecution mentioned by Cicero (Vat. 14) as occurring in 58 B.C., when Calvus was 24 years old. No records exist of any further prosecution of Vatinius by Calvus until that of August, 54 B.C., when Cicero appeared for the defence. But when Cicero in 56 B.C. cross-examined Vatinius (see In Vatinium) while conducting the defence of Sestius, Calvus promised to indict Vatinius, apparently at once (Cic. Quint. Fr. II. 4. 1), and the trial may well have come off speedily, though doubtless an acquittal was secured by the same influences that immediately gave Vatinius the praetorship for 55 B.C., and hurried him into office (Cic. Quint. Fr. II. 7. 3) to escape further prosecution. At this unrecorded trial in 56 B.C. the famous second speech of Calvus was probably delivered, and to it Catullus doubtless refers here. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. corona: a circle of auditors, especially at a trial; cf. Cic. Flac. 28. 69 a iudicibus oratio auertitur, uox in coronam turbamque effunditur; Hor. Ep. I. 18. 53 scis quo clamore coronae proelia sustineas campestria.

2. Vatiniana: the adjective is here equivalent to an objective genitive, while in 14. 3 it is subjective.

Admirans ait haec manusque tollens
'Di magni, salaputium disertum!'

54.

Othonis caput oppido est pusillum,
Et eri rustica semilauta crura,
Subtile et leue peditum Libonis,
Si non omnia, displicere uellem
Tibi et Fuficio, seni recocto
Irascere iterum meis iambis
Immerentibus, unice imperator.

4. manus tollens: the instinctive gesture of amazement; cf. Cic. Acad. II. 19. 63 uehementer admirans . . . ut etiam manus saepe tolleret.

5. di magni: cf. 14. 12 n. — salaputium: apparently a comical slang word, referring to the short stature of Calvus; cf. Ov. Trist. II. 431 exigui licentia Calvi; Sen. Contr. VII. 4 erat enim [Caluus] paruulus statura, propter quod etiam Catullus in hendecasyllabis uocat illum 'salaputtium disertum.' Except in these two places the word nowhere occurs, though Salaputis is found as a man's name in an African inscription (C. I. L. VIII. 10570). The etymology is uncertain.

54. Apparently an attack upon Caesar, but exhibiting, in spite of attempts at emendation, an extremely un-Catullian blindness and awkwardness, which fact, together with the repetition in the MSS. of 50. 16–17 after v. 1, makes it altogether probable that the tradition of the text is incurably defective. The persons mentioned by name are all unknown. — Date, 55 B.C. (cf. v. 7). Metre, Phalaecean.

1. oppido: colloquial for ualde; especially frequent in Terence. — pusillum: the insinuation is probably like that of our proverb, 'Little head, little wit.'

2. et eri: unmetrical and unintelligible, the latter possibly because of a lacuna between vv. 1 and 2, as indicated by the repetition there of 50. 16–17; but perhaps a proper name lies hid under the words. — rustica: cf. the references to the country in uncomplimentary characterizations in 22. 14; 36. 19.

5. tibi: probably referring to the person addressed below as unice imperator. — recocto: i.e. rejuvenated, an old man with all the vices of a young one; cf. the story of Medea, Aeson, and Pelias in Ov. Met. VII. 159 ff.; Hor. Sat. II. 5. 55 recoctus scriba ex quinqueuiro Petron. frag. 21 B. anus recocta uino trementibus labellis.

6. iambis: perhaps in general of satirical verses in whatever metre; cf. 40. 2 n.; 12. 10 n.

7. immerentibus: since they

55.

Oramus, si forte non molestum est,
Demonstres ubi sint tuae tenebrae.
Te campo quaesiuimus minore,
Te in circo, te in omnibus libellis,
Te in templo summi Iouis sacrato.

tell nothing but the plain truth. — unice imperator: comparison with 29. 11 imperator unice and v. 6 iterum suggests forcibly that Julius Caesar is meant, and that 54 followed soon after 29 in composition, and here refers to it.

55. An appeal to an otherwise unknown Camerius to disclose his whereabouts to his friend, who has been searching through Rome for him. Similar descriptions of an anxious search for a friend through the city are not wanting in the comedians; cf. Plaut. Amph. 1009 ff.; Epid. 196 ff.; Ter. Ad. 713 ff. The poem appears to be an unfinished experiment in a not very pleasant modification of the Phalaecean verse, and was perhaps, with the accompanying fragment, 58^b, found among the papers of Catullus after his death and published by the original editor of the Liber. The odd verses (and also v. 8) through v. 13, and from that point the even verses, have a spondee in the second place. In 58^b, however, only vv. 1 and 9 have a spondee in the second place. — Date, 55 B.C. (cf. v. 6 n.).

1. si forte, etc.: a bit of colloquial politeness; cf. Ter. Ad. 806 ausculta paucis, nisi molestumst, Demea; Cic. Cluent. 60. 168 tu autem, nisi molestum est, paulisper exsurge; Mart. I. 96. 1 si non molestum est teque non piget . . . dicas.

2. tenebrae, lurking-place; cf. Prop. IV. 15. 17 saepe illam immundis passa est habitare tenebris.

3. campo minore: probably so called to distinguish it from the great campus Martius; and Paulus (Fest. p. 131) mentions a campus Martialis on the Caelian, where horse-races were held when the Tiber overflowed the campus Martius (cf. also Ov. Fast. III. 519–522). This is possibly the place meant, as the search passed from it through the Circus Maximus, by the shops near the Forum (cf. 37. 2 n.), over the Capitoline, to Pompey's portico in the Campus Martius. There were yet other campi; cf. Prop. III. 23. 6 campo quo mouet illa pedes? Not. et Cur. App. I. Campi VIII., etc. On the ablative without in cf. Ov. and Prop. ll.cc.; Liv. XXI. 8. 7 iustae acies uelut patenti campo constiterant.

4. circo: i.e. the Circus Maximus, a haunt of idlers; cf. Hor. Sat. I. 6. 113 ff. — tĕ: not elided, for no trochee stands in the second place; while the hiatus with systole is supported by that in 10. 27; 97. 1; 114. 6; cf. Intr. 86 d. — libellis, book-shops, as perhaps in Mart. V. 20. 8 libelli, campus, porticus . . . haec essent loca semper.

5. templo summi Iouis: the triple Etruscan temple of Jupiter Capitolinus with Juno and Minerva, ascribed to Tarquinius Priscus, was burned in 83 B.C. Sulla began, and Q. Lutatius Catulus in 69 B.C. completed, the new temple, which was itself burned in 69 A.D. under Vitellius (cf. Tac. Hist. III. 72).

In Magni simul ambulatione
Femellas omnes, amice, prendi,
Quas uultu uidi tamen serenas.
† A uelte sic ipse flagitabam :
'Camerium mihi, pessimae puellae!'
Quaedam inquit nudum † reduc . .
'En hic in roseis latet papillis.'
Sed te iam ferre Herculi labos est :
Tanto ten fastu negas, amice?
Dic nobis ubi sis futurus, ede
Audacter, committe, crede luci.
Nunc te lacteolae tenent puellae?
Si linguam clauso tenes in ore,

6. Magni ambulatione: in the summer of 55 B.C., the year of his second consulship, Pompey threw open to the public his stone theatre on the Campus Martius, with a magnificent porticus adjoining it in the rear of the stage. He is frequently mentioned by his contemporaries under the title Magnus, conferred by Sulla in 81 for his African victories.

7. femellas: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον. — prendi, hailed; cf. Ter. Phor. 620 prendo hominem solum; 'quor non' inquam, 'Phormio,' etc.

8. uultu serenas: i.e. showing no guilty confusion.

10. Camerium: the first foot is an iambus, with the second syllable long by position of its vowel before r followed by consonantal i; for a resolution of the normal trochee in a tribrach in this metre would be unique. With the construction (sc. reddite?) cf. 38. 7. — pessimae puellae, you naughty girls (Munro); cf. the jesting sense of pessima in 36. 9.

11. The general character of the gesture is clear, despite the difficulty of emendation. See Crit. App.

13. te ferre: i.e. to endure with patience your conduct. — Herculi labos est: with the figure cf. Prop. III. 23. 7 ubi pertuleris, quos dicit fama, labores Herculis. The genitive in -i from Greek proper names in -es is not infrequent in the earlier period and in Cicero.

15. ubi sis futurus, where you are to be (found), that I may come thither at an appointed time and meet you.

16. crede luci: in contrast with v. 2 tenebrae.

17. The sportive manner of the girl (vv. 11–12) has awakened the poet's suspicions, and he is anxious to learn the truth from his friend's own lips. — lacteolae: apparently not occurring again till Aus. Epist. 7. 2. 46 carnem lacteoli uisceris (of an oyster), where it plainly = candidi (cf. 64. 65 lactentis papillas; Hor. Carm. I. 13. 2 lactea Telephi bracchia); see, then, 13. 4 n. candida puella. — tenent: cf. 11. 18 n.

18–20. With the sentiment cf. 6. 1–3. — tenes: this repetition with

Fructus proicies amoris omnes :
Verbosa gaudet Venus loquella.
Vel si uis, licet obseres palatum,
Dum ueri sis particeps amoris.

56.

O rem ridiculam, Cato, et iocosam
Dignamque auribus et tuo cachinno.
Ride, quidquid amas, Cato, Catullum :
Res est ridicula et nimis iocosa.
Deprendi modo pupulum puellae
Trusantem : hunc ego, si placet Dionae,
Pro telo rigida mea cecidi.

different meaning immediately after tenent of the preceding verse is but another mark of the unfinished character of the poem.

21–22. The poet declares himself, however, more interested in the true happiness of his friend than in the satisfaction of his own curiosity. — palatum: not as the organ of taste, but of the voice ; cf. Hor. Sat. II. 3. 274 balba feris annoso uerba palato ; Ov. Am. II. 6. 47 ignauo stupuerunt uerba palato. — ueri amoris: i.e. sincerely requited love ; cf. Mart. XI. 26. 5 Veneris gaudia uera.

56. On the Cato to whom these coarse verses are addressed see Intr. 62. — Metre, Phalaecean.

2. tuo: modifying both nouns, though agreeing with the second.

3. quidquid amas Catullum: i.e. in proportion to the love you bear Catullus; a variation on the colloquial phrase si me amas in exhortations; cf. Plaut. Trin. 244 da mihi hoc, mel meum, si me amas, si audes ; Ter. Heaut. 1031 caue posthac, si me amas, unquam istuc uerbum ex te audiam ; Cic. Att. V. 17. 5 si quicquam me amas, hunc locum muni.

4. nimis: cf. 43. 4 n.

6. si placet Dionae : a variation on the phrase si dis placet, sometimes used in the sense of dis iuuantibus of completed actions ; cf. Plaut. Capt. 454 expediui ex seruitute filium, si dis placet. Dione is mentioned in Hom. Il. V. 370 as the mother of Aphrodite, but Catullus apparently has in mind Venus herself ; cf. Bion 1. 93 ; Theocr. 7. 116 ; Plaut. Mil. 1414 ; and the Augustan and later poets often, as Verg. Ecl. 9. 47 ecce Dionaei processit Caesaris astrum ; Hor. Carm. II. 1. 39 Dionaeo sub antro.

57.

Pulchre conuenit improbis cinaedis,
Mamurrae pathicoque Caesarique.
Nec mirum : maculae pares utrisque,
Vrbana altera et illa Formiana,
Impressae resident nec eluentur :
Morbosi pariter gemelli utrique,
Vno in lecticulo erudituli ambo,
Non hic quam ille magis uorax adulter,
Riuales socii puellularum :
Pulchre conuenit improbis cinaedis.

57. Like 29, an attack upon Julius Caesar and his favorite Mamurra, and apparently written at about the same time with that poem, i.e. in late 55 B.C. With the sentiment cf. Mart. VIII. 35 cum sitis similes paresque uita, uxor pessima, pessimus maritus, miror non bene conuenire uobis. — Metre, Phalaecean.

2. Mamurrae: see Intr. 73, 74.

3. nec mirum: cf. 23. 7 n. — utrisque: found in Catullus in the plural only here and in v. 6; and in general the plural is much more common in prose than in poetry.

4. urbana: i.e. Romana ; cf. 29. 23 urbis (= Romae). — Formiana: cf. 41. 4 n.

6. morbosi: probably merely a translation of παθικοί ; cf. gloss. Labb. p. 116ª morbosus παθικός. — gemelli: sneeringly, of their similarity in character ; cf. Hor. Ep. I. 10. 3 cetera paene gemelli fraternis animis, where, however, there is no irony.

7. lecticulo, study-couch ; ἅπαξ λεγόμενον, but the feminine lecticula occurs in this sense in Suet. Aug. 78, and the masculine is not strange by analogy with lectulus (cf. Plin. Ep. V. 5. 5). — erudituli: Caesar was not only a historian, but a grammarian (Suet. Iul. 56; Cic. Brut. 72. 253) and a poet (Suet. l.c.; Tac. Dial. 21; Plin. Ep. V. 3. 5). On Mamurra's attempts at poetry see 105.

9. riuales socii: here it appears better to take riuales in its original implication of not unfriendly rivalry, the two friends vying with each other in the number of their mistresses ; v. 9 thus completes v. 8; cf. Tac. Hist. I. 13 [Otho erat] gratus Neroni aemulatione luxus.

10. The first and last verses are identical also in 16, 36, and 52.

Caeli, Lesbia nostra, Lesbia illa,
Illa Lesbia, quam Catullus unam
Plus quam se atque suos amauit omnes,
Nunc in quadriuiis et angiportis
Glubit magnanimi Remi nepotes.

58b.

Non custos si fingar ille Cretum,
Non si Pegaseo ferar uolatu,
Non Ladas ego pinnipesue Perseus,

58. To Caelius, on the debasement of Lesbia; see Intr. 41. — Date, probably 55 B.C. Metre, Phalaecean.

1. Caeli: see Intr. 59. — nostra: for mea, as it is absurd to suppose, with some critics, that Catullus recognizes in Caelius an equal interest with himself in Lesbia.

3. plus quam se, etc.: cf. 8. 5; 3. 5 n.

4. quadriuiis: cf. 47. 7 n. triuio. — angiportis, alley-ways; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 25. 9 inuicem moechos anus adrogantes flebis in solo leuis angiportu.

5. magnanimi Remi nepotes: i.e. the descendants of the Romans of a noble day have fallen thus low. There is indignation but not sarcasm in the phrase; cf. 49. 1 n.

58b. These few verses on the same theme as 55 are evidently a fragment, and were inserted here by the original editor of the liber Catulli quite in accordance with his usual habit of separating poems on similar themes by two or three others of a different character. See Intr. 48, and introductory note to 55. — Metre, Phalaecean.

1. custos ille Cretum: i.e. the bronze giant Talus, devised by Daedalus and made by Hephaestus for King Minos, who strode from headland to headland, making the circuit of the island thrice daily; cf. Apoll. Rh. IV. 1638 ff.; Apollod. I. 9. 26. 3 ff. — fingar, be molded into; cf. 66. 50 ferri fingere duritiem.

2. Pegaseo uolatu: for the story of the winged horse, Pegasus, who sprang from the blood of Medusa as her head was severed by Perseus, see Apollod. II. 4. 2. 9; 3. 2. 1.

3. Ladas: Pausanias mentions by this name two victors in the Olympic foot-races, one of Sparta, and the other, less famous, an Achaean (Paus. III. 21. 1; X. 23. 14); cf. Mart. X. 100. 5 habeas licebit alterum pedem Ladae; Juv. 13. 96 pauper locupletem optare podagram nec dubitet Ladas. There is a manifest anacoluthon; the idea of v. 1 si fingar is the one in mind. — pinnipes Perseus: in order to attack Medusa in safety, Perseus had borrowed of the Nymphs the winged shoes like those of Hermes, as well as Pluto's

Non Rhesi niueae citaeque bigae:
Adde huc plumipedes uolatilesque,
Ventorumque simul require cursum,
Quos uinctos, Cameri, mihi dicares:
Defessus tamen omnibus medullis
Et multis langoribus peresus
Essem te mihi, amice, quaeritando.

59.

Bononiensis Rufa Rufulum fellat,
Vxor Meneni, saepe quam in sepulcretis helmet of invisibility and the magic wallet; see Apollod. II. 4. 2. Cf. Prop. III. 30. 3 non si Pegaseo uecteris in aere dorso, nec tibi si Persei mouerit ala pedes. pinnipes is ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

4. Rhesi: Rhesus was the king of Thrace whose famous horses Ulysses and Diomed stole on the night of his arrival to help the Trojans; cf. Hom. Il. X. 438 ff.; Ov. Met. XIII. 249 ff. There is a similar anacoluthon to that in v. 3; si ferar fills out the idea.

5. plumipedes: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον; the reference is clearly not to flying men like Daedalus and the sons of Boreas (for Perseus in v. 3 is a type of such swiftness), but to birds, thus interposed between horses and winds. — uolatiles: carrying further the picture in the preceding adjective; feather-footed (Ben Jonson) and flying fowl.

7. uinctos: with reference to the story of Aeolus and Ulysses (cf. Hom. Od. X. 17 ff.); the idea being only that if he were by their master put in possession of the winds to rule them at his pleasure, their unwearied swiftness would not suffice him. — dicares = dares, as in Verg. Aen. I. 73 propriam dicabo.

8. defessus omnibus medullis: cf. Plaut. Stich. 340 at ego perii, quoi medullam lassitudo perbibit. With defessus . . . quaeritando cf. Plaut. Amph. 1014 sum defessus quaeritando, nusquam inuenio Naucratem.

9. langoribus peresus: cf. Serenus Samm. 62 languore peresus.

10. essem: with this sequence after v. 1 fingar and v. 2 ferar cf. 6. 2 n.

59. A skit upon a certain woman named Rufa, who, from the fact that she is especially mentioned as a Bolognese, must have been living elsewhere, probably at either Verona or Rome. The persons mentioned are otherwise unknown, though some suppose that Rufulus is M. Caelius Rufus (Intr. 59). — Metre, choliambic.

1. Rufa Rufulum: perhaps the similarity in name denotes some relationship (cf. Lesbius and Lesbia in 79), the diminutive being used sneeringly.

2. sepulcretis: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον; apparently used of common and

Vidistis ipso rapere de rogo cenam,
Cum deuolutum ex igne prosequens panem
Ab semiraso tunderetur ustore.

60.

Num te leaena montibus Libystinis
Aut Scylla latrans infima inguinum parte
Tam mente dura procreauit ac taetra,
Vt supplicis uocem in nouissimo casu
Contemptam haberes, ah nimis fero corde?

cheap places of burial; with the form cf. arboretum, rosetum, busticetum, etc.

3. rapere, etc.: i.e. pilfer the food placed on the funeral pyre to be burned with the body (cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 224 congesta cremantur turea dona, dapes, fuso crateres oliuo). On such bustirapi (Plaut. Pseud. 361) cf. Ter. Eun. 491 e flamma petere te cibum posse arbitror; Ov. Ib. 20 hic praedam medio raptor ab igne petit; Mart. XI. 54. So poverty and hunger are satirized in 21 and 23.

4. prosequens: i.e. stooping down to grasp it.

5. semiraso: i.e. careless about shaving, and hence 'squalid'; cf. 54. 2 semilauta; Luc. Phar. VIII. 738 sordidus ustor. — tunderetur: caught in the act and beaten by the ustor, commonly a slave of low degree belonging to the libitinarii who attended to the burning of bodies.

60. This brief complaint over the want of sympathy of some friend in the poet's extremity is apparently a bit of incomplete verse, but in tone is very like 30, while its language suggests the complaint of Ariadne in 64. 154 ff. Perhaps it was the last verse penned by Catullus as his strength failed him and death came on. — Date, 54 B.C. (?). Metre, choliambic..

1. leaena: perhaps the first occurrence in Latin of the Greek word for the early leo femina (Plaut.) and lea (Varro). — Libystinis: rare form of the adjective; cf. 7. 3 Libyssae.

2. latrans, etc.: Catullus, like most, if not all, of the Latin poets that mention her, evidently thinks of Scylla with a woman's body ending below in a group of fierce dogs; but Homer (Od. XII. 85 ff.), as might be expected in an earlier conception, describes her as a monster entirely without human form.

4. in nouissimo casu, at his supreme trial; the phrase may well imply apprehended death; cf. Tac. Ann. XII. 33 nouissimum casum experitur (i.e. tries the forlorn hope).

5. contemptam haberes: cf 17. 2 n. — nimis: cf. 43. 4 n.

61.

Collis o Heliconii
Cultor, Vraniae genus,
Qui rapis teneram ad uirum
Virginem, o Hymenaee Hymen,
O Hymen Hymenaee,

61. With 61 begins the group of longer poems of Catullus which extends through 68. Of these 61, 62, and (after the interposition, as commonly, of a poem on a different subject) 64 are on marriage themes, and in certain MSS. as well as by earlier editors are called Epithalamia. 61 is written in honor of the marriage of Manlius Torquatus and Vinia Aurunculeia (cf. v. 16 n.), but is in no sense a true epithalamium, sung by a chorus outside the marriage chamber. The poet himself, on the contrary, speaks throughout, acting as a sort of choragus, and, yielding fully to the joyous enthusiasm of the occasion, in a tone of purest inspiration joins in each part of the ceremonial. The poem is, then, a graceful combination of lyric reminiscences of the ceremonies attending a Roman marriage, rather than a precise dramatic representation of any of them. Hence the poet allows himself certain liberties with the rites, omitting all reference to some, altering others, and introducing a Greek flavor, especially by the invocation to Hymen, and by the singing of a true epithalamium at the end. — For a description of Roman marriage-rites see Becker Gallus (English translation[5]) p. 160 ff.; Marquardt Privatleben der Römer[2] p. 42 ff. — Date uncertain, though it hardly seems possible that Catullus could have sung another's love with so clear a note after his love for Lesbia had ended in such bitter disappointment. Metre, Glyconic (Intr. 82 b).

1–35. Invocation to Hymen. The poet speaks as if standing before the bride's home, awaiting her coming forth for the procession to the house of the bridegroom.

1. collis Heliconii: Mt. Helicon in Boeotia was from most ancient times known as the seat of the Muses (cf. Hes. The. 1 Μουσάων Ἑλικωνιάδων), of one of whom Hymen was the son.

2. cultor: for incola; cf. 64. 300 cultricem montibus Idri; 63. 72 siluicultrix. — Vraniae: by other writers Hymen is called the son of Calliope, or of Terpsichore, or even of Bacchus and Venus (cf. Serv. on Verg. Aen. IV. 127). — genus: for filius; cf. 64. 23.

3. rapis: cf. the same traditional sentiment in 62. 20 ff. And though perhaps not directly referred to here, the prehistoric marriage by capture is traceable in the Roman custom of taking the bride from her mother's arms with a show of force, and of carrying her over the threshold of her new home (cf. 166–167). — teneram: in contrast with the idea of violence in rapis. — uirum uirginem: with the favorite alliterative contrast; cf. Verg. Aen. I. 493 audet uiris concurrere uirgo.

4. Hymen: the Greek god of marriage addressed under the double name Ὑμὴν Ὑμέναιε (or in reverse order); cf. Eur. Tro. 311; Arist. Pax 1335; Theocr. 18. 58;

Cinge tempora floribus

Namque Vinia Manlio,
Qualis Idalium colens

Plaut. Cas. 752 io Hymen Hymenaee; Ov. Her. 14. 27 Hymen Hymenaee; and also 62. 5, etc.

6–10. The attributes of Hymen are those of marriage; here, the wreath, veil, and slippers of the bride; in v. 15, the torch.

6. floribus: cf. Paul. Fest. p. 63 corollam noua nupta de floribus, uerbenis, herbisque a se lectis sub amiculo ferebat; Ov. Her. 6. 43 pronuba Iuno adfuit et sertis tempora uinctus Hymen.

7. suaue olentis amaraci, sweet marjoram (Gr. σάμψυχον); cf. Verg. Aen. I. 693 mollis amaracus illum floribus et dulci adspirans complectitur umbra.

8. flammeum: the long mantle (= palla?) drawn up to serve as a head-covering; in the case of brides and of the wife of the flamen it was of a brownish-yellow color (luteum); cf. Luc. Phar. II. 361 lutea demissos uelarunt flammea uultus. — cape, don; cf. v. 9 gerens. — huc: cf. 64. 195.

9. niueo: to contrast with v. 10 luteum.

10. soccum: unlaced slippers, used commonly for house-wear, and so especially by women. In the apparel of the bride in the Aldobrandini marriage scene they are yellow in color.

12. concinens: of a single voice also in 65. 13; but v. 123 concinite in modum.

13. tinnula: of a clear, high-pitched tone like the ring of a resounding bar of metal; cf. 64. 262; Pomponius ap. Macrob. VI. 4. 13 uocem reddam tenuem et tinnulam.

14. pelle humum pedibus: of dancing, as in Lucr. V. 1402 duro terram pede pellere; Hor. Carm. I. 37. 1 pede libero pulsanda tellus; III. 18. 15 pepulisse ter pede terram.

15. pineam quate taedam: on torches in the marriage procession cf. Verg. Aen. VII. 397 ipsa flagrantem feruida pinum sustinet ac canit hymenaeos; Ciris 439 pronuba nec castos accendet pinus honores; Ov. Fast. II. 561 conde tuas, Hymenaee, facis.

16. Vinia Manlio: the bride is called Aurunculeia in v. 86, a fact which Scaliger rightly explained as due to an adoption, Vinia being the present legal name corresponding to the formal nomen gentile of the bridegroom, in immediate connection with which it stands, while Aurunculeia was the name before adoption. Both names are common enough, but the personality of the bride can be no further determined. On Manlius Torquatus (cf. vv. 216 and 222) see Intr. 67.

17. qualis: the comparison extends only to the all-conquering beauty of the bride. — Idalium colens: cf. 36. 12 n.

18. Phrygium iudicem: i.e. Paris, whose decision in giving the golden apple as the prize of beauty to Aphrodite rather than to Hera or Pallas brought in its train all the woes of the Trojan War; cf. Hom. Il. XXIV. 28 ff.; Hor. Carm. III. 3. 18 Ilion, Ilion fatalis incestusque iudex et mulier peregrina uertit in puluerem.

19. bona uirgo: the thought turns from beauty to character; cf. v. 186 bonae feminae; v. 226 a bona matre. — cum bona alite: of the ominous flight of birds; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 15. 5 mala ducis aui domum; Cic. Diuin. I. 16. 28 nam ut nunc extis, sic tum auibus, magnae res impetriri solent.

22. myrtus Asia: the myrtle flourished in damp places, and the thought here is probably of the famous fertile region about the Cayster in Lydia; cf. Hom. Il. II. 461 Ἀσίῳ ἐν λειμῶνι Καϋστρίου ἀμφὶ ῥέεθρα; Verg. Geor. I. 383 uolucres quae Asia circum dulcibus in stagnis rimantur prata Caystri. The myrtle bore white blossoms (Arist. An. 1099 ἡρινὰ παρθένια λευκότροφα μύρτα), and was sacred to Venus (Phaedr. III. 17. 3 myrtus Veneri placuit); similarly Ariadne is compared to a myrtle-branch in 64. 89, and Vinia herself in v. 91 ff. to the hyacinth, and in v. 193 ff. to the white parthenice and the flame-red poppy.

23. hamadryades deae: i.e. tree-nymphs; cf. Serv. on Verg. Ecl. 10. 62 quae una cum arboribus nascuntur et pereunt; Apol. Rhod. II. 479 ff.

24. rosido: for the later rorido (Prop. III. 30. 26) or roscido (Plin. N. H. IX. 10. 38 roscido umore).

25. The place of the cyclic dactyl is in this verse taken by an irrational spondee (Intr. 82 b); cf. the similar substitutions in the experimental metre of 55 and 58 b.

26. quare age: cf. v. 38; 64. 372. — aditum ferens: cf. v. 43;

Rupis Aonios specus,
Nympha quos super irrigat
Frigerans Aganippe,

Ac domum dominam uoca
Coniugis cupidam noui,
Mentem amore reuinciens

Dicite 'O Hymenaee Hymen,
O Hymen Hymenaee,'

Vt libentius, audiens
Se citarier ad suum

63. 47 reditum tetulit; 63. 79 reditum ferat.

27. Thespiae rupis: the town of Thespiae lay at the foot of Helicon.

28. Aonios specus: Aonia was the name of the district about Helicon, whence the Muses were called Aonides (Ov. Met. V. 333; Juv. 7 59). On caves as quiet retreats of the Muses cf. Hor. Carm. III. 4. 40; Juv. l.c.

29. nympha Aganippe: her fountain is described by Paus. IX. 29. 3. — super: for desuper; cf. Verg. Aen. IX. 168 haec super e uallo prospectant Troes; Tib. III. 2. 10 ossa super nigra fauilla teget.

31. dominam: for the Roman wife was domina wherever her husband was dominus, according to the marriage formula ubi tu Gaius ego Gaia.

32. coniugis cupidam noui: the bride displays proper maidenly reluctance (cf. vv. 83–85), yet feels the drawings of love (cf. vv. 176–178).

34. hedera, etc.: cf. the similar familiar figure in v. 106 ff. — huc et huc: cf. Hor. Epod. 4. 9 huc et huc euntium.

36–45. Exhortation of the choragus to the waiting maidens to join in singing the praises of Hymen.

36. integrae: cf. 34. 2 n.

37. aduenit, is close at hand, while the future would mean 'will sometime come.'

38. par dies: i.e. their own wedding-day. — agite: expletive, as in v. 26 age; v. 123 ite; cf. 63. 12; 64. 372. — in modum: i.e. in the unison of prescribed rhythm; cf. v. 123; Hor. Carm. IV. 6. 43 docilis modorum uatis Horati.

42. citarier: with this earlier infinitive form cf. v. 65, etc. comparier; v. 68 nitier; 68. 141 componier, and see 34. 8 n. — suum munus: explained by vv. 44–45.

Munus, huc aditum ferat
Dux bonae Veneris, boni
Coniugator amoris.

Quis deus magis anxiis
Est petendus amantibus?
Quem colent homines magis

O Hymen Hymenaee.

Zonula soluunt sinus,
Te timens cupida nouus
Captat aure maritus.

Tu fero iuueni in manus
Floridam ipse puellulam
Dedis a gremio suae

43. aditum ferat: cf. v. 26 n.

44. dux: as the presiding deity of marriage. — bonae Veneris, honorable love; cf. vv. 61–63; v. 202 bona Venus.

45. coniugator: ἄπαξ λεγόμενον; with the figure cf. 68. 118 n.

46–75. The choragus leads the maidens in singing the praises of Hymen.

46. anxiis: i.e. fretting with eager passion; cf. Stat. Silu. I. 2. 81 quantos iuuenis premat anxius ignes.

51. te parens inuocat: the aged parent desires to see his daughters established under the protection of husbands before his death; cf. 62. 58; 66. 15–16. — tremulus: sc. with the palsy of age; cf. 17. 13 n.

53. zonula, etc.: i.e. maidens willingly submit to thy sway; with the figure cf. 2. 13 n. — soluunt: on the diaeresis see Intr. 86 b.

54. timens: contrasted with the following word, cupida; the bridegroom's eagerness is so great as to be somewhat allied to fear, almost like that of the traditional bride; so he trembles even while he listens anxiously to catch the music of the bridal procession.

55. captat aure: cf. Verg. Aen. III. 514 auribus aera captat.

56. in manus: perhaps with a reminiscence of the legal conuentio in manum.

57. floridam: cf. 17. 14 n.; the idea is of the bride's tender, youthful bloom, and contrasts with that in v. 56 fero.

58. a gremio suae matris: of the guarded peacefulness of the bride's former life; cf. v. 3 n. rapis; 62. 21–22; 64. 87–88.

Matris, o Hymenaee Hymen,
O Hymen Hymenaee.

61. nil commodi capere: cf. Ter. Eun. 971 hoc capio commodi.

65. compararier: on the form see v. 42 n. citarier.

67. liberos: by the formula that embodied the strict Roman reverence for the family, a wife was taken liberorum quaerendorum gratia, and Gaius remarks (I. 64), si quis nefarias atque incestas nuptias contraxerit, neque uxorem habere uidetur, neque liberos.

68. stirpe nitier: with the figure cf. Plin. Ep. IV. 21. 3 unus ex tribus liberis superest domumque pluribus adminiculis paulo ante fundatam desolatus fulcit ac sustinet.

71. careat: the change with this stanza from direct to hypothetical statement corresponds to the absence of probability that an entire land would be without marriage-rites.

72. dare praesides: in the older days only Roman citizens could serve in the legions, and no man could be born a Roman citizen save within the strictly guarded marriage-laws.

76–120. The hymn to Hymen finished, the bride is now urged to come forth and take her place in the procession to the bridegroom's house, and to dry her tears (v. 85) by thoughts of her own conquering beauty (vv. 86–100), which the poet skilfully extols by prophesying her entire and lasting influence over her husband (vv. 101 ff.).

77. uiden ut, etc.: addressed to the bride, who may look out through the now opened doors and see the procession ready to escort her on her way to her new home. The phrase is used in Catullus, as regularly in early Latin, in the sense of quo modo, without affecting the mood of the verb (cf. v. 98; 62. 8), the ut being more exclamatory than interrogative. In 62. 8 it is addressed to more than one person. In later writers the subjunctive becomes the rule; cf. also v. 171 ff. aspice ut immineat.

79–82. The two concluding verses of the first defective stanza doubtless contained an exhortation to the bride to come forth, vv. 79–80 perhaps being ne moreris, abit dies: prodeas noua nupta (cf. v. 94 and the urgent repetitions in vv. 95, 96, 100, 110, 120), while vv. 81–82 referred to her evident reluctance, for which vv. 83–85 assign the reason.

83. ingenuus pudor: i.e. the natural modesty of a maiden gently-bred; cf. Plin. N. H. Praef. 21 est plenum ingenui pudoris fateri per quos profeceris; Prop. I. 4. 13 ingenuus calor et multis decus artibus; Plin. Ep. I. 14. 8 ingenua totius corporis pulchritudo et quidam senatorius decor.

84. tamen: referring to ingenuus; it is a becoming modesty, but is indulged too far. — magis: sc. quam nostra uerba. — audiens, minding; cf. Verg. Geor. I. 514 neque audit currus habenas; Hor. Carm. I. 13. 13 si me satis audias.

85. flet: on the genuineness of the bride's tears cf. 66. 15–18.

89. diem: i.e. the morrow's day.

93. flos hyacinthinus: cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 69 florem languentis hyacinthi; not our hyacinth, but the blue iris or the larkspur. On the comparison with a flower cf. v. 22 n.

98. uide: perhaps with more impatience than v. 77 uiden.

99. aureas: of fire also in Lucr. VI. 205 liquidi color aureus ignis; cf. Pind. Ol. 1. 1 ὁ δὲ χρυσὸς αἰθόμενον πῦρ.

103. probra turpia: cf. 91. 4 a turpi probro.

106. quin, nay rather. — uelut, etc.: with the comparison cf. Hor. Carm. I. 36. 20 lasciuis hederis ambitiosior; Epod. 15. 5 artius atque hedera procera adstringitur ilex, lentis adhaerens bracchiis; Gall. Epithal. 3 (Anth. Lat. 232 Mey.) bracchia nec hederae uincant.

108. implicabitur: as of the middle voice.

111. cubile, etc.: the Epithalamium of Ticidas evidently contained a similar address of congratulation to the lectus genialis; cf. the quotation by Priscian (1. 189) felix lectule.

112–114. These verses perhaps stood in the archetype at the bottom or top of a page, with vv. 79–82 standing in a corresponding position on the other side of the leaf, and were lost by the same mutilation that destroyed vv. 79–82.

115. candido pede lecti: the feet of the bed were frequently of ivory; cf. 64. 45, 48; Hor. Sat. II. 6. 103 tincta super lectos canderet uestis eburnos; Plat. Com. κλίνη ἐλεφαντόπους.

117. gaudia gaudeat: with the figura etymologica cf. 7. 9 n. — uaga, fleeting (Ellis); of the elusiveness of the constant onward movement of time; cf. 64. 271 n. uagi solis.

118. medio die: of the mid-day siesta; cf. 32. 3; 80. 3.

121–125. The bride yields to the persuasion and comes forth, and the procession begins to move.

121. tollite faces: in preparation for departure.

122. flammeum: the bright-tinted mantle catches the eye first as the bride comes forth.

123. ite: expletive; cf. v. 38 n.; Prop. IV. 4. 7 ite agite, date lintea. — concinite: cf. v. 12 n.; Spenser Epithal. The boys run up and down the street, Crying aloud with strong confused noise, As if it were one voice, Hymen! io Hymen! Hymen! they do shout. — in modum: cf. v. 38 n.

124. io: as in the familiar cry io Triumphe.

126–155. The uersus Fescennini, sung on the way to the bridegroom's house, which are addressed successively to the (perhaps imaginary) former slave-favorite of the bridegroom, to the bridegroom himself, and to the bride. Antiquarian accuracy is not observed, for the bridegroom (according to v. 171 ff.) is with his friends awaiting at his own home the arrival of the bride, and therefore not present to hear the verses addressed to him; while in place of the bridegroom (v. 128 n.) the concubinus is present and scatters the nuts.

127. Fescennina iocatio: cf. Paul. Fest. 85 Fescennini uersus, qui canebantur in nuptiis, ex urbe Fescennina dicuntur allati, siue ideo dicti quia fascinum putabantur arcere (cf. 5. 12 n.); Hor. Ep. II. 1. 145 Fescennina licentia uersibus alternis opprobria rustica fudit; Sen. Rh. p. 223 B. inter nuptiales Fescenninos in crucem generi nostri iocabantur. Similar licentious catches directed against the general were sung by his soldiers in the triumphal procession (cf. Suet. Iul. 49 and 51).

128. nuces pueris: as a part of the marriage ceremonies the bridegroom scattered nuts among the crowd of bystanders; cf. Verg. Ecl. 8. 29 tibi ducitur uxor; sparge, marite, nuces, and the comments thereupon by Servius, who gives several explanations of the custom.

129. desertum, etc.: i.e. perceiving that his love for his master is now slighted.

130. concubinus: the puer delicatus to whom the (traditionally libellous) fescennines represent the bridegroom as having been devoted.

131. iners: the favorite has thus far enjoyed a life of idleness; cf. Cic. N. D. I. 36. 102 Epicurus quasi pueri delicati nihil cessatione melius existimat.

132. satis diu: i.e. you have long enough by favor of your master enjoyed a child's free life (cf. Servius l.c.); now scatter nuts to show that the life of irresponsibility is over for you.

134. seruire: contrasted with lusisti; you have thus far played; now your master chooses the service of Talasius, and sport is over. — Talasio: for the traditional origin of this distinctively Roman marriage-cry that corresponded to the Greek cry of Hymen, see Liv. I. 9. 12.

136. sordebant, etc.: i.e. at your master's country-seat even the wives of the bailiffs, so much above common slaves like yourself, were but mean in your eyes.

137. hodie atque heri, but yesterday; cf. Gr. χθὲς καὶ πρώην and ἐχθὲς καὶ σήμερον (Ep. Heb. 13. 8).

O Hymen Hymenaee io,
O Hymen Hymenaee.

138. cinerarius: the slave who acted as hair-dresser; cf. Varr. L. L. V. 129 calamistrum quod his calefactis in cinere capillus ornatur. Qui ea ministrabat a cinere cinerarius est appellatus.

139. tondet os: i.e. the days of your childhood, and with them the charm of your young beauty, and your life of idle luxury are past; cf. Mart. XI. 78. 3 flammea texuntur sponsae, iam uirgo paratur ; tondebit pueros iam noua nupta tuos. — miser ah miser: cf. 63. 61.

141. The verses are now directed to the bridegroom. — male: modifying abstinere, with the meaning of aegre, as in Verg. Geor. I. 360 iam sibi tum curuis male temperat unda carinis. — te abstinere: with the verb in this reflexive construction cf. Ter. Hec. 139 sese illa abstinere ut potuerit?

142. unguentate: as frequently, with an idea of excessive and effeminate luxury. — glabris: i.e. pueris delicatis, plural as though, forsooth, the bridegroom had kept many concubinos.

146. licent, etc.: the sentiment intimated concerning the license allowed by society to an unmarried man is true to ancient life.

151. The chorus now turns to the bride with equally, though less brutally, plain words.

En tibi domus ut potens
Et beata uiri tui:
Quae tibi sine seruiat
(O Hymen Hymenaee io,
O Hymen Hymenaee)

Vsque dum tremulum mouens
Cana tempus anilitas

O Hymen Hymenaee io,
O Hymen Hymenaee.

Limen aureolos pedes,

156–235. The procession reaches the bridegroom's house (–165), the bride is assisted over the threshold without stumbling (–170), and finds the bridegroom awaiting her (–180). She is then duly conducted to the lectus genialis (–190), the bridegroom allowed to enter the apartment (–205), and outside the door the chorus sings its congratulations and prophecies of present and future happiness (–235). Many small details of the usual marriage ceremonies are untouched by the poet.

156. ut: modifying potens (sc. est). — potens: cf. Hor. Carm. I. 35. 23 potentis domos.

157. beata: cf. 51. 15 beatas urbes.

158. sine seruiat: for you come to be domina, and the house offers its lasting allegiance for your acceptance.

161. tremulum: cf. v. 51 n.

162: cana anilitas: cf. 108. 1 cana senectus. — tempus: for caput, as in Prop. V. 8. 15 iacuit pulsus tria tempora ramo Cacus. The singular rarely occurs in the sense of 'one of the temples' except when so modified as to distinguish between them; but cf. Auct. ad Herenn. IV. 55 dubitanti Graccho percutit tempus.

163. omnia omnibus adnuit: i.e. by the constant palsied motion of the head.

166. transfer: apparently addressed to the bride, who here steps over (not upon) the threshold, instead of being lifted across it; cf. Plaut. Cas. 767 ff. i, sensim superattolle limen pedes, noua nupta; sospes iter incipe hoc, ut uiro tuo semper sis superstes, ut potior sis pollentia, uictrixque sis, superetque tuum imperium. — omine cum bono: the custom of lifting the bride across the threshold is doubtless traceable to the original marriage by capture, as certain even of the ancients suggested, but its origin had been almost lost sight of, and the Romans explained it generally as due to fear that the bride might stumble, and so offend Vesta, to whom the threshold was sacred (Varro ap. Serv. on Verg. Ecl. 8. 29), or begin her new life under an evil omen (Plaut. Cas. l.c.; Ov. Met. X. 452 ter pedis offensi signo est reuocata).

167. aureolos: perhaps only of the color of the shoes (cf. v. 10 luteum soccum with 2. 12 aureolum malum); but cf. ἀργυρόπεζα of Thetis (Hom.) and Aphrodite (Pind.), χρυσοπέδιλος of Hera (Hom.), χρυσέη Ἀφροδίτη (Hom.), etc.

168. rasilem forem, the polished doorway.

171. adspice: the bride now stands within the dwelling at the entrance to the atrium, where the bridegroom has been celebrating with his friends the cena nuptialis; cf. Plaut. Curc. 728 tu, miles, apud me cenabis; hodie fient nuptiae: Cic. Quint. Fr. II. 3. 7 eo die apud Pomponium in eius nuptiis eram cenaturus. — unus: the bridegroom is the one object upon which her eyes rest, while he in turn has eyes for her alone (v. 173). — accubans: sc. in lecto tricliniari, in connection with which accubare is especially used.

172. Tyrio in toro: i.e. a couch with crimson draperies; cf. 64. 49, 163; Hor. Sat. II. 6. 103 (cf. v. 115 n.); Tib. I. 2. 75 Tyrio recubare toro.

173. totus, with his whole being; cf. 64. 93. — immineat, is intent upon; cf. Ov. Met. I. 146 imminet exitio uir coniugis.

177. uritur: rare, if not unique, in the passive with such a subject as flamma; but cf. the not infrequent use in Greek of δαίεσθαι in similar constructions.

178. penite, secretly; he shows no sign of his passion to curious eyes; cf. Tib. IV. 5. 17 optat idem iuuenis quod nos, sed tectius optat, but for the contrary view Ov. Art. Am. I. 276 uir male dissimulat; tectius illa cupit. The adverb is ἅπαξ λεγόμενον from the adjective penitus of Plautus and late Latin.

Mitte bracchiolum teres,

O Hymen Hymenaee io,
O Hymen Hymenaee.

O Hymen Hymenaee io,
O Hymen Hymenaee.

Iam licet uenias, marite:
Vxor in thalamo tibi est
Ore floridulo nitens
Alba parthenice uelut
Luteumue papauer.

182. praetextate: the poet speaks unprecisely of but one boy leading the bride to the door of the thalamus, and giving her into the hands of the pronubae; but cf. Fest. 245[a] patrimi et matrimi pueri tres nubentem deducunt, unus qui facem praefert ex spina alba, quia noctu nubebant, duo qui tenent nubentem.

186. bonae feminae; cf. v. 19 bona uirgo; Aug. Nupt. I. 9 progrediente autem genere humano iunctae sunt quibusdam bonis uiris bonae feminae. — senibus uiris: the pronubae were wives of one husband, and of the dignity of character that comes with honored age; cf. Serv. on Verg. Aen. IV. 166 Varro pronubam dicit quae ante nupsit quaeque uni tantum nupta est, ideoque auspices deliguntur ad nuptias.

187. cognitae bene: i.e. of approved uprightness established on intimate knowledge, as in 91. 3.

188. conlocate: sc. in lecto geniali; the technical term.

193–195. So the blushing Lavinia is described in Verg. Aen. XII. 67 ff. Indum sanguineo ueluti uiolauerit ostro siquis ebur, aut mixta rubent ubi lilia multa alba rosa, talis uirgo dabat ore colores.

193. floridulo: cf. 17. 14 n.; the adjective is apparently ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

194. parthenice: perhaps a sort of feverfew or artemisia.

195. luteum papauer: but poppies are not always described as flame-colored; cf. Prop. I. 20. 38 lilia candida purpureis mixta papaueribus; Anth. Lat. 775. 12 R. luteae uiolae luteumque papauer.

196. ita me iuuent caelites: cf. 66. 18; 97. 1 n.

198. Venus: the giver of beauty as well as of love.

202. bona Venus: of authorized love; cf. v. 44 n.; v. 204 bonum amorem; vv. 61–63.

203. quoniam, etc.: since your love now has received the sanctions of law and religion, and does not need concealment.

206. pulueris, etc.: cf. 7. 3 n.

213. tam uetus nomen: the Torquati were proud of their long line of patrician ancestry; cf. Cic. Sull. 8. 24, where a Torquatus is reproved for such overweening haughtiness.

214. indidem, from the same stock, instead of being strengthened, as so many old Roman families had to be, by adoptions.

219. dulce rideat: cf. 51. 5 n.

224. pudicitiam indicet ore: i.e. by his resemblance to her husband; cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 5. 23 laudantur simili prole puerperae; Mart. VI. 27. 3 est tibi quae patria signatur imagine uultus, testis maternae nata pudicitiae.

226. talis, etc.: i.e. may the virtues of his mother be reflected in the boy, and win him such renown as came to Telemachus from the character of his mother, Penelope. The sentence is a somewhat awkwardly expressed double compliment to the mother, directly in its praise of her virtue, and indirectly in its prophecy of the future character and renown of her son.

229. manet: cf. 8. 15 n.

231. ostia: for fores (sc. thalami).

232. lusimus: here of singing amatory verses, as in 50. 2, 5 and 68. 17 of writing them.

233. bene uiuite; cf. 5. 1 n.

Vesper adest: iuuenes, consurgite: Vesper Olympo
Exspectata diu uix tandem lumina tollit.
Surgere iam tempus, iam pinguis linquere mensas;
Iam ueniet uirgo, iam dicetur hymenaeus.
Hymen o Hymenaee, Hymen ades o Hymenaee.

62. An epithalamium, but, unlike 61, apparently without reference to a particular marriage, and, like 61, without archaeological precision. The form is that of a song divided between a chorus of youths and one of maidens singing alternately, but not always in precisely equal strophes, the former the praises of Hesperus and of marriage, the latter the fears and sorrows of surrendered maidenhood. The youths sing vv. 1–5, 11–19, 26–31, 33–38 (with lost verses preceding v. 33), 49–66; and the maidens, vv. 6–10, 20–25, 32 (and lost verses following it), 39–48. The setting throughout is Greek rather than Roman, though the fragments of Sappho and the Epithalamium of Helen by Theocritus (18) furnish no ground for postulating direct imitation on the part of Catullus. On the place of action cf. vv. 1, 3, 7 nn. — Date, uncertain. Metre, dactylic hexameter.

1. Vesper: cf. Plin. N. H. II. 36 sidus appellatum Veneris . . . ante matutinum exoriens Luciferi nomen accipit . . . contra ab occasu refulgens nuncupatur Vesper; Cic. N. D. II. 20. 53 stella Veneris, quae Φωσφόρος Graece, Lucifer Latine dicitur, cum antegreditur solem, cum subsequitur autem, Ἓσπερος; Censor. Die Nat. 24. 4 eius stellae quam Plautus [Amph. 275] Vesperuginem, Ennius Vesperum, Vergilius Hesperon appellat. — consurgite: sc. a mensis; cf. v. 3 n. — Olympo lumina tollit: the appearance at twilight of the evening star, though of course in the west, is by analogy spoken of as its rising; cf. Hor. Carm. II. 9. 10 nec tibi Vespero surgente decedunt amores nec rapidum fugienti solem. Here the star stands above the Thessalian (cf. v. 7 Oetaeos) Olympus; though the poets also speak of Vesper as leaving Olympus (the dwelling of the gods) or Oeta to usher in the night; cf. Verg. Ecl. 6. 86 inuito processit Vesper Olympo; Cul. 203 piger aurata procedit Vesper ab Oeta; Cir. 350 gelida uenientem ignem ab Oeta. For the ablative with tollere without a preposition cf. Ov. Met. XV. 192 clipeus terra cum tollitur ima.

3. surgere . . . linquere mensas: cf. Verg. Aen. VIII. 109 relictis consurgunt mensis. — pinguis: here = opimas, as in Verg. Aen. III. 224 dapibusque epulamur opimis. — mensas: the feast is doubtless that spread at the house of the bride's parents. Contrary to the usual Greek custom, women were present, but were seated at tables by themselves. From the house of her parents the bridegroom at evening escorted the bride to her new home in solemn procession to the music of hymeneal songs, which were also sung outside the closed door of the bride-chamber.

4. iam ueniet uirgo: sc. from her chamber, to take her seat beside the bridegroom in the carriage in which she is to be drawn to his house. — hymenaeus, the marriage-hymn; with this meaning first in Hom. Il. XVIII. 491 ἐν τῇ μέν [πόλει] ῥα γάμοι τ' ἔσαν . . . πολὺς δ' ὑμέναιος ὀρώρει; elsewhere in Catullus of the god Hymen (61. 4; 62. 5, and often), and of marriage itself (66. 11, etc.). On the lengthening of the preceding short syllable see Intr. 86 g.

5. Cf. Theocr. 18. 58, where the dactylic hexameter opens in the same way, and 61. 4 n.

6. innuptae: for uirgines, as in 64. 78. — contra, on your side, i.e. from your position at a table opposite theirs.

7. nimirum: i.e. it must be that the youths have already caught sight of the evening star, and that is the reason for their rising. — Oetaeos: Mt. Oeta is the name of the range in the district of Oetaea, just at the head of the Maliac Gulf, between Thessaly and Aetolia. Upon it the funeral pyre of Heracles was erected. It is sometimes connected with the Thessalian Olympus; cf. v. 1 n. Olympo. — ostendit ignes: cf. Hor. Carm. III. 29. 17 iam clarus occultum Andromedae pater ostendit ignem. — Noctifer: cf. Calp. Buc. 5. 120 iam sole fugato frigidus aestiuas impellit Noctifer horas.

8. sic certe est: the explanation at first only suggested appears convincing, and is reaffirmed as sure; cf. 80. 7. — uiden ut: cf. 61. 77 n. — perniciter exsiluere: i.e. they show the eager swiftness of confidence in their ability to surpass their competitors in song.

9. non temere: i.e. not in mere bravado, nor in baseless self-confidence. — quod: direct object of uincere. The two choruses will vie with each other in responsive song, as do the swains in the bucolics of Theocritus and Vergil. — par (sc. nobis), it is our task.

11. palma: i.e. victory. — parata: cf. Petron. 15 nec uictoria mi placet parata.

12. secum meditata requirunt: i.e. they are conning verses already learned and practised, and are not depending, like us (v. 15), merely upon ability in improvisation.

13. non frustra meditantur: i.e. their study will not prove fruitless. Meditari is almost the technical word for poetic composition; cf. Verg. Ecl. 6. 82; Hor. Sat. I. 9. 2; Ep. II. 2. 76. The verse corresponds closely with v. 9.

14. nec mirum: cf. 23. 7 n. — quae laborant: but cf. the subjunctive mood in similar causal clauses in vv. 21 and 27. So Plautus and Terence apparently use the

Nos alio mentes, alio diuisimus aures :
Iure igitur uincemur : amat uictoria curam.
Quare nunc animos saltem conuertite uestros :
Dicere iam incipient, iam respondere decebit.
Hymen o Hymenaee, Hymen ades o Hymenaee.

Hespere, qui caelo fertur crudelior ignis ?
Qui natam possis complexu auellere matris,
Complexu matris retinentem auellere natam
Et iuueni ardenti castam donare puellam.
Quid faciunt hostes capta crudelius urbe ?
Hymen o Hymenaee, Hymen ades o Hymenaee.

indicative and subjunctive indiscriminately with the causal relative, and even change from one to the other, as here, while in later Latin the subjunctive becomes the rule.

15. nos: with strong emphasis upon the contrast with the absorption of the maidens in their coming task. — alio mentes, alio aures: i.e. while they have practised earnestly, following their leader tota mente (v. 14), we have attended to our leader with our ears only, while our thoughts have been far from him and from the task that lay before us ; alio . . . alio are correlative, referring to distinct directions. — diuisimus: cf. in slightly different meaning Verg. Aen. IV. 285 (and VIII. 20) atque animum nunc huc celerem nunc diuidit illuc.

17. saltem: with nunc. — conuertite: sc. ad rem ; cf. Cic. N. D. I. 27. 77 quo facilius animos imperitorum ad deorum cultum a uitae prauitate conuerterent.

20. Hespere: the same form of the name is followed in vv. 26, 32, and 35, and in 64. 329; but cf. v. 1 Vesper (and the yet different name Noctifer in v. 7). With the sentiment of the strophe cf. 61. 3–4. — caelo fertur, traverses the heavens ; Baehrens cites Germ. Progn. II. 2 per idem Cythereius ignis fertur iter. — ignis: cf. Hor. Carm. I. 12. 47 uelut inter ignes luna minores ; Germ. l.c.

21. possis: cf. v. 14 n. laborant. — complexu matris: cf. 61. 58 ; 64. 88. — auellere: not with direct reference to the show of force with which in the Roman ceremony the bride was taken from her mother's arms, but in general of the rude interruption of the peaceful simplicity of her life of maidenhood; cf. 61. 3 rapis.

22. retinentem, clinging.

23. iuueni ardenti: cf. 61. 56 fero iuueni, and observe the sequence of the contrasted epithets ardenti castam.

24. capta urbe: the comparison of great woes to those endured by a conquered city was traditional; cf. Hom. Il. IX. 592 κήδε' ὅσ' ἀνθρώποισι πέλει τῶν ἄστυ ἁλώῃ; Verg. Aen. II. 746 quid in euersa uidi crudelius urbe? Prop. V. 8. 56 spectaclum capta nec minus urbe fuit ; Ov. Met. XIV. 578 et sonus et macies et pallor et omnia captam quae deceant urbem.

Hespere, qui caelo lucet iucundior ignis?
Qui desponsa tua firmes conubia flamma,
Quae pepigere uiri, pepigerunt ante parentes,
Nec iunxere prius quam se tuus extulit ardor.
Quid datur a diuis felici optatius hora?
Hymen o Hymenaee, Hymen ades o Hymenaee.

Hesperus e nobis, aequales, abstulit unam
Namque tuo aduentu uigilat custodia semper.
Nocte latent fures, quos idem saepe reuertens,

27. desponsa: ordinarily used only of the betrothed maiden. — firmes: cf. v. 14 n. laborant.

28. uiri . . . parentes: i.e. marriage-contracts arranged by husbands on the one side and parents on the other. viri is used by anticipation as in v. 65 genero; cf. also 64. 328 maritis. With the change of form of the repeated tense for metrical reasons and for variety cf. Lucil. III. 11–12 Müll. uerum haec ludus ibi susque omnia deque fuerunt, susque haec deque fuere inquam, omnia, ludu' iocusque; Verg. Ecl. 10. 13 illum etiam lauri, etiam fleuere myricae, pinifer illum etiam sola sub rupe iacentem Maenalus et gelidi fleuerunt saxa Lycaei; Lucr. VI. 2–5 dididĕrunt, recreauĕrunt, rogarunt, dedĕrunt, genuĕre.

29. iunxere: cf. 78. 3 dulces iungit amores.

30. Cf. similar sentiments at the end of 9, 45, and 107.

32 ff. Of this strophe, sung by the maidens, only the first verse remains, but the comparison of its key-note with vv. 33 ff., sung by the youths, indicates that the two fragmentary strophes stood in immediate succession. The strophe of the maidens ended, of course, with the refrain Hymen o Hymenaee, etc.

33 ff. The maidens had complained of Hesperus for robbing them of a companion, and in general for ushering in the night, the time of fear and depredation. The youths denied in the lost verses that Hesperus is the harbinger of danger, and in vv. 33–36 support their denial by two reasons and by an argumentum ad hominem: possible danger at night is averted by ordinary watchfulness; Hesperus himself acts as thief-taker by ushering in the unexpected dawn; and finally, maidens themselves but feign fear of the darkness.

33. custodia: for custodes; cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 574 cernis custodia qualis uestibulo sedeat? Ov. Met. XIV. 371 abest custodia regi. — Neither in this nor in the two following verses is there any reference to furtiuos hominum amores (7. 8) save by merest indirection; the maidens complained, and the youths are responding to the charge, that the darkness makes possible acts of violence.

34. nocte latent fures: perhaps quoted verbatim from the song of the maidens, but neutralized as far

Hespere, mutato comprendis nomine eosdem.
At libet innuptis ficto te carpere questu.
Quid tum, si carpunt tacita quem mente requirunt?
Hymen o Hymenaee, Hymen ades o Hymenaee.

Vt flos in saeptis secretus nascitur hortis,
Ignotus pecori, nullo conuulsus aratro,
Quem mulcent aurae, firmat sol, educat imber, as it is a charge against Hesperus, by the following clause. — idem . . . mutato nomine: the poet disregards the scientific fact that the same planet is not both morning and evening star at the same season of the year. The identity of Hesperus and Lucifer (cf. Cic. l.c. on v. 1) was known about the time of Pythagoras, whether established by him or by Parmenides, and is frequently alluded to by the Romans; cf. Varr. R. R. III. 5. 17 stella Lucifer interdiu, noctu Hesperus; Cir. 350 [ignem] quem pauidae alternis fugitant optantque puellae (Hesperium uitant, optant ardescere Foum); Cinna Zmyrna (ap. Serv. on Verg. Geor. I. 288) te matutinus flentem conspexit Eous, et flentem paulo uidit post Hesperus idem: also Tennyson In Mem. 121 Sweet Hesper-Phosphor, double name For what is one. — saepe: modifying comprendis.

35. comprendis: if the thefts were furtiui amores, deprendis would be the more natural term, but the prime reference in fures is the patent one, and Hesperus acts as constable. — eosdem: to correspond to v. 34 idem.

36. ficto questu: cf. 66. 16 falsis lacrimulis.

37. requirunt: as if filled with longing for the return of what was once offered and rejected; cf. 8. 13.

39. ut flos, etc.: the comparison of blooming maidenhood to a flowering plant is a favorite one; cf. 61. 22 n. Ellis cites the fuller imitation of this passage by Ben Jonson in The Barriers, and by Rob. Browning Ring and Book III. 233 ff.

40. conuulsus: the feelings of the maidens lead them to use a word implying more than ordinary violence (cf. 64. 40), while in 11. 24, for a different reason, the lightest possible word is used of the action of the plough upon a tender plant.

41. mulcent aurae: on the generative and nourishing power of the breezes cf. 64. 90, 282; Lucr. I. 11 reserata uiget genitabilis aura Fauoni; Hor. Carm. I. 22. 17 nulla arbor aestiua recreatur aura; Prop. V. 7. 60 mulcet ubi Elysias aura beata rosas; Ov. Met. I. 107 uer erat aeternum, placidique tepentibus auris mulcebant Zephyri natos sine semine flores; Fast. V. 209 est mihi fecundus hortus . . . aura fouet. — The exact correspondence of v. 42 to v. 41 as of v. 44 to v. 43 (quem . . . illum; idem cum . . . illum), and comparison with the next strophe, where v. 53 hanc follows immediately upon vv. 49–52 ut uidua uitis . . . contingit, make it unreasonable to suppose a lacuna of one verse after v. 41, as required by a fictitious theory of precise correspondence in the number of verses

Multi illum pueri, multae optauere puellae;
Idem cum tenui carptus defloruit ungui,
Nulli illum pueri, nullae optauere puellae:
Sic uirgo, dum intacta manet, dum cara suis est;
Cum castum amisit polluto corpore florem,
Nec pueris iucunda manet nec cara puellis.
Hymen o Hymenaee, Hymen ades o Hymenaee.

Vt uidua in nudo uitis quae nascitur aruo
Nunquam se extollit, nunquam mitem educat uuam, between this and the following strophe.

42. Imitated by Ovid in Met. III. 353 multi illum iuuenes, multae cupiere puellae.

43. idem: subject of defloruit; cf. 22. 3 n. idem. — tenui carptus ungui: cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 68 uirgineo demessum pollice florem; Prop. I. 20. 39 decerpens tenero pueriliter ungui florem; Ov. Her. 4. 30 tenui primam delegere ungue rosam.

45. dum . . . dum: Quintilian explains as follows (Inst. IX. 3. 16) Catullus in Epithalamio 'dum . . . est,' cum prius dum significet quoad, sequens usque eo. In illustration of his view might be cited Plaut. Truc. 232 dum habeat dum (MSS. tum) amet; ubi nil habeat, alium quaestum coepiat (cf. Haupt Opusc. II. p. 473). But comparison with v. 56 indicates that Quintilian misunderstood the meaning of Catullus as much as did the less learned emendators of V and Y, who changed the second dum to tum. The two dum-clauses are not correlative, but coördinate, both modifying sic uirgo (sc. est), while sic is emphatic, referring to v. 42. Thus v. 45 corresponds alone to vv. 39–42, while vv. 46–47 correspond to vv. 43–44. — intacta: cf. 34. 2 n. integri. — cara suis: the maidens use the second dum-clause as a sort of definition of the first, and so indicate their belief in the dependence of family and friendly affection upon the virginity of its object. The sentiment is more definitely declared in vv. 46–47. Observe the neat way in which the youths in v. 56 repeat after the maidens the first dum-clause, but define it very differently by the second.

46. The fierce virginity of the chorus views even marriage as a compromise of chastity. — castum florem = castitatis florem; cf. Cic. Balb. 6. 15 ipsum florem dignitatis infringere; and cf. the indication of chastity as the crowning virtue in the familiar euphemism flos aetatis (Liv. XXI. 2. 3; Suet. Iul. 49).

47. iucunda: with substantially the same meaning as the following cara; cf. 14. 2 n.

49. uidua (= caelebs) unwed, i.e. not trained upon a tree; more frequently used of trees themselves; cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 5. 30 uitem uiduas ducit ad arbores; Mart. III. 58. 3 uidua platano; Juv. 8. 78 stratus humi palmes uiduas desiderat ulmos; Hor. Carm. II. 15. 4 platanus caelebs. — nudo: i.e. bare of trees; cf. Ov. Trist. III. 10. 75 aspiceres

Varro R. R. I. 31. 3 uitem, quam uocant minorem flagellum, maiorem et iam unde uuae nascuntur palmam.

53. accoluere iuuenci: of 'cultivating' between the rows of vines; cf. Varro R. R. I. 8. 5 [uineae] interualla pedamentorum qua boues iuncti arare possint.

54. ulmo: cf. v. 49 n. uidua. The elm is most frequently mentioned by the poets as the tree on which the vine is trained; cf. R.* 32 arbores facito uti bene maritae sint. Catullus apparently uses the masculine (as appositive) instead of the concordant feminine for the sake of the figure.

56. dum . . . dum: cf. v. 45 n.

57. par conubium: i.e. a marriage with one of equal station; cf. Ov. Her. 9. 32 siqua uoles apte nubere, nube pari. On the synaeresis see Intr. 86 c.

58. magis: the comparison is not with reference to her husband's love for her, but to her condition before marriage (v. 45 sic); she has gained affection instead of losing it, for a husband is better than a friend, and there is no danger of her presence becoming irksome to her father (who desires to see his daughters settled in marriage; cf. 61. 51–52; 66. 15–16).

59. et: connecting the general expression of approval of marriage with its application to this specific case.

Hymen o Hymenaee, Hymen ades o Hymenaee.

63. tertia: cf. Lucilius (on Virtus) commoda patriae prima putare, deinde parentum, tertia iam nostra.

64. noli pugnare duobus: Passerat cites the proverbial Platonic expressions from Leg. XI. 119 πρὸς δύο μάχεσθαι καὶ ἐναντία χαλεπόν; Phaedr. 89 πρὸς δύο οὐδ' Ἡρακλῆς. Catullus is the first to use pugnare with a dative, but he is followed by the later poets, who admit the same construction with other verbs of contest (cf. Gr. μάχεσθαί τινι); cf. Verg. Aen. IV. 38 placitone etiam pugnabis amori? Hor. Epod. 11. 18 desinet imparibus certare.

65. genero: used by anticipation, as v. 28 uiri; 64. 328 maritis.

63. The self-mutilation and subsequent lament of Attis, a priest of Cybele. The centre of the worship of the Phrygian Κυβέλη or Κυβήβη, was in very ancient times the town of Pessinus in Galatian Phrygia, at the foot of Mt. Dindymus, from which the goddess received the name Dindymene. Cybele had early become identified with the Cretan divinity Rhea, the Mother of the Gods, and to some extent with Demeter, the search of Cybele for Attis being compared with that of Demeter for Persephone. The especial worship of Cybele was conducted by emasculated priests called Galli (or, as in vv. 12 and 34, with reference to their physical condition, Gallae). Their name was derived by the ancients from that of the river Gallus, a tributary of the Sangarius, by drinking from which men became inspired with frenzy (cf. Ov. Fast. IV. 361 ff.). The worship was orgiastic in the extreme, and was accompanied by the sound of such frenzy-producing instruments as the tympana, cymbala, tibiae, and cornu, and culminated in scourging, self-mutilation, syncope from excitement, and even death from hemorrhage or heart-failure (cf. Lucr. II. 598 ff.; Varr. Sat. Men. 131 ff. Büch.; Ov. Fast. IV. 179 ff.). The worship of the Magna Mater, or Mater Idaea, as she was often called (perhaps from identification with Rhea of the Cretan Mt. Ida rather than from the Trojan Mt. Ida), was introduced into Rome in 205 B.C. in accordance with a Sibylline oracle which foretold that only so could 'a foreign enemy' (i.e. Hannibal) be driven from Italy. Livy (XXIX. 10, 14) gives an interesting account of the solemnities that accompanied the transfer from Pessinus to Rome of the black stone that represented the divinity, and of the establishment of the Megalensia; cf. also Ov. Fast. IV. 247 ff. The stone itself was perhaps a meteorite, and is thus described by Arnobius (Adu. Gent. VII. 46): lapis quidam non magnus, ferri manu hominis sine ulla impressione qui posset; coloris furui atque atri, angellis prominentibus inaequalis, et quem omnes hodie . . . uidemus . . . indolatum et asperum. Servius (Aen. VII. 188) speaks of it as acus Matris Deum, and as one of the seven objects on which depended the safety of Rome.

Adiitque opaca siluis redimita loca deae,
Stimulatus ibi furenti rabie, uagus animis

The early connection of Attis with the Mother of the Gods seems to point to the association of an original male element with an original female element as the parents of all things. But in the age of tradition Attis appears as a servant instead of an equal, and the subordination of the male to the female element is further emphasized by the representation of Attis, like the Galli of historic times, as an emasculated priest. Greek imagination pictured him as a beautiful youth who was beloved by the goddess, but wandered away from her and became untrue; but being sought and recalled to allegiance by her, in a passion of remorse he not only spent his life in her service, but by his own act made impossible for the future such infidelity on his part, thus setting the example followed by all the Galli after him (cf. Ov. Fast. l.c.). Catullus departs from this form of the Attis myth, and makes Attis a beautiful Greek youth who in a moment of religious frenzy sails across seas at the head of a band of companions to devote himself to the already long-established service of the goddess (vv. 1–3). On reaching the shores of Trojan Ida he consummates the irrevocable act of dedication (vv. 4–5), and with his companions rushes up the mountain to the sanctuary of the goddess (vv. 6–38). But on awaking next morning he feels the full awfulness of his act (vv. 39–47), and gazing out over the sea toward his lost home, bewails his fate (vv. 48–73), till the jealous goddess unyokes a lion from her car and sends him to drive her wavering votary back to his allegiance (vv. 74-fin.). The story is told with a nervous vigor and swing of feeling that are unequalled in Latin literature, and to it the galliambic metre (Intr. 85), the one traditionally appropriated to such themes, lends great effect. The date of composition is uncertain, but Catullus may have found his immediate inspiration in his contact with the Cybelian worship in its original home during his residence in Bithynia in 57–56 B.C. (see Intr. 29 ff.). Or it may have been found in his studies in the Alexandrian poets; for Callimachus certainly used the galliambic metre, though no distinct title of a poem by him on this theme is extant. Caecilius of Comum was also engaged on a poem based on the worship of Cybele (cf. 35. 13 ff.), and Varro and Maecenas both exercised their talents in the same direction (cf. Varr. Sat. Men. l.c.; Maec. in Baehr. Fragm. Poet. Rom. p. 339).

The poem abounds in rhetorical devices to add to its effect; such are the frequent employment of alliteration (vv. 2, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, etc.), of strange and harsh compounds (vv. 23 hederigerae, 34 properipedem, 41 sonipedibus, 51 erifu- gae, 72 nemoriuagus), and the repetition of words of agitated movement and feeling (e.g. rapidus three times, citatus four times, citus twice, rabidus three times, rabies once).

1. celeri: indicating his eagerness for arrival.

2. Phrygium nemus: that clothing the slopes not of Dindymus but of Ida (cf. vv. 30, 52). — citato cupide pede: emphasizing the eager haste of the traveller, rather than indicating a land journey after reaching the shores of Asia (cf. vv. 47, 89); the poet is not writing as a geographer. Cf. v. 30 properante pede.

3. opaca: cf. v. 32. The mad rush of the new devotees is contrasted with the silent mysteries of the abode of the goddess.

4. ibi, thereupon; cf. vv. 42, 48, 76; and 66. 33; 8. 6 n. — furenti rabie: cf. v. 38 rabidus furor. — uagus animis: the plural to indicate his divided, distorted emotions; cf. Verg. Aen. VIII. 228 ecce furens animis aderat Tirynthius.

5. ili: genitive from the stem ilio-, a rare but legitimate variant for the more frequent ili-; cf. Cels. IV. 1 iliis (dat. plur.); Gloss. Labb. ilium λαγών; Marc. Emp. 36 [ilium].

6. sine uiro: i.e. sine uirilitate.

7. terrae sola (plural, as in v. 40 sola dura): cf. Lucr. II. 592 nam multis succensa locis ardent sola terrae.

8. niueis manibus: cf. v. 10 n. teneris digitis. Adjectives descriptive of feminine beauty are employed to accord with the change of gender under which Attis is now spoken of, and himself speaks of his companions (vv. 12 Gallae, 15 exsecutae, 34 rapidae Gallae); cf. Hor. Carm. II. 4. 3 niueo colore (of Briseis); III. 27. 25 niueum latus (of Europe); Verg. Aen. VIII. 387 niueis lacertis (of Venus). — citata: Attis is from henceforth a notha mulier (v. 27), and is described by feminine adjectives; cf. vv. 11 adorta, tremebunda, 31 furibunda, 32 comitata, etc.; but when he returns to himself and thinks with sorrow and loathing upon his condition, the masculine adjective is resumed; cf. vv. 51 miser, 78 hunc, 88 tenerum, 89 ille. The emendations by which all these later masculines (except v. 78 hunc) have been transformed to feminines are based on incorrect feeling. — leue: the tympanum is probably called leue because it is cauum (v. 10). — typanum: Gr. poet. form τύπανον, metri gratia (cf. v. 21, etc. tympanum, Gr. τύμπανον); from representations in vase- and wall-paintings, an instrument like the modern tambourine, but with the rattling disks of metal suspended at intervals from its edge by short cords.

9. tubam Cybelles: as the blare of the tuba is the summons and incitement to warriors, so is the beat of the tympanum to the votaries of Cybele; the phrase is further explained by tua initia. The famous norm of Bentley (on Lucan I. 600) that when the penult is short the form Cybele should be

Quatiensque terga tauri teneris caua digitis
Canere haec suis adorta est tremebunda comitibus.
'Agite ite ad alta, Gallae, Cybeles nemora simul,
Simul ite, Dindymenae dominae uaga pecora,
Aliena quae petentes uelut exsules loca

Et corpus euirastis Veneris nimio odio,
Hilarate erae citatis erroribus animum.

written, but when it is long the form Cybebe, Cybelle being discarded altogether, is not well supported by either Greek or Latin usage. Cybelle (Gr. Κύβελλα) is found in many good MSS. — mater: Cybele was the Magna Mater Idaea of the Romans, as well as mater deorum; cf. intr. note; Hymn. Cyb. μήτερα μοι πάντων τε θεῶν, πάντων τ' ἀνθρώπων. — initia: technically used only of the mysteries of Demeter (cf. Varr. R. R. III. 1. 5 initia uocantur potissimum ea quae Cereri fiunt sacra), but here of the symbol of the secret worship of Cybele, perhaps by reason of the popular confusion of Cybele with Demeter.

10. teneris digitis: cf. v. 8 n. niueis manibus; Ov. Ib. 456 [ut Attis] quatias molli tympana rauca manu; Fast. IV. 342 feriunt molles taurea terga manus. — caua: the word tympanum also denoted a kettle-drum with a hemispherical resounding cavity and a single head of hide, and so caua, which would properly characterize it, is here used of its cognate instrument, the tambourine; cf. Ov. Fast. IV. 183 inania tympana tundent; Aus. Epist. 24. 21 caua tympana.

11. tremebunda: in the quivering of nervous excitement.

12. agite: cf. 61. 38 n. — Gallae: cf. v. 34, and intr. note. — Cybeles: Gr. Κυβέλη; cf. v. 9 n. Cybelles.

13. Dindymenae dominae: cf. v. 91; 35. 14. — uaga: of the purposeless wanderings of the crazed devotees; cf. vv. 18 erroribus; 25 uaga cohors; 31 uaga uadit. — pecora: cf. Ov. Ib. 457 pecus Magnae Parentis (of the Galli).

15. sectam meam exsecutae, under my rule; Attis acts as recruiting officer, and then (duce me) guides the new devotees to their place of service. comites implies here a certain subordination as in the case of the comites of a provincial governor; cf. 28. 1; 11. 1. Apparently exsequi is used with sectam only here, though Cicero uses sectam persequi (Verr. II. 5. 70. 181), and sectam sequi is frequently found (cf. Liv. XXIX. 27. 2 qui meam sectam secuntur, a formal expression in an invocation).

16. rapidum: of the rushing waves of the sea, as explained in truculenta pelagi; cf. 64. 358 rapido Hellesponto. — truculenta pelagi: with the construction cf. Verg. Aen. IX. 81 pelagi alta; Hor. Carm. IV. 4. 76 acuta belli; with the sentiment, Hor. Carm. I. 3. 10 truci pelago.

18. hilarate, etc.: i.e. haste to gladden the heart of the goddess by the presence of this new accession

Mora tarda mente cedat ; simul ite, sequimini
Phrygiam ad domum Cybelles, Phrygia ad nemora deae,
Vbi cymbalum sonat uox, ubi tympana reboant,
Tibicen ubi canit Phryx curuo graue calamo,

Vbi sueuit illa diuae uolitare uaga cohors, of enthusiastic votaries. — erroribus: the rabidus furor animi (v. 38) would lead the band, not directly to the temple, but in Maenad-like tortuousness of course.

21. cymbalum: cymbala were hollow hemispheres of metal a few inches in diameter, held one in each hand by the aid of small rings or thongs attached to the centre of their convex surfaces. Struck together, they gave a sharp, clanging sound that fitted well with that of the tympana and tibiae ; cf. 64. 262 tereti tenuis tinnitus aere ciebant ; Ov. Fast. IV. 184 aera tinnitus aere repulsa dabunt ; 189 sonus aeris acuti ; Aus. Epist. 24. 23 tinnitus aëni. — reboant: cf. Aus. Epist. 24. 21 tentis reboant caua tympana tergis.

22. Phryx: the tibiae were said to be a Phrygian invention ; cf. 64. 264; Lucr. II. 620 Phrygio stimulat numero caua tibia mentis ; Tib. II. 1. 86 obstrepit et Phrygio tibia curua sono ; Ov. Fast. IV. 181 inflexo Berecyntia tibia cornu. — curuo calamo: the tibia was originally made of a reed. The curved variety appears from bas-reliefs to have been shaped sometimes like the lituus, straight and of uniform diameter from the mouth-piece till near the bell, where it curved sharply back upon itself, but sometimes to have had a gentle double curve and an increasing diameter from mouth-piece to bell, like a cow-horn. The straight varieties, more commonly used, were generally played in pairs, one with each hand, being often supported in position at the player's mouth by a band admitting the two mouth-pieces and fastened at the back of the head. — graue: cf. Stat. Theb. VI. 113 signum luctus cornu graue mugit adunco tibia.

23. maenades: the poet borrows for the priests of Cybele the name appropriate to the frenzied maidens that attended upon the similar rites of Dionysus. — capita ui iaciunt: frequent wall-paintings and engraved gems show the bacchanals beating the tympana and swaying the head violently back and forth; cf. 64. 255 capita inflectentes ; Maec. frag. 4 Baehr. sonante typano quate flexibile caput ; Varr. Sat. Men. 132 Buech. semiuiri teretem comam uolantem iactant ; Ov. Met. III. 726 ululauit Agaue, collaque iactauit, mouitque per aera crinem. — hederigerae: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

24. acutis ululatibus: cf. v. 28; Maec. frag. 5 Baehr. comitum chorus ululet ; Ov. Fast. IV. 341 exululant comites ; Met. l.c.

25. illa: the demonstrative characterizes as well-known the whole statement ; in this use ille corresponds closely to our definite article. — uolitare uaga: so of Bacchus in 64. 251, 390. — cohors: i.e. comites ; cf. v. 11 and 28. 1 Pisonis comites, cohors inanis.

28. thiasus: of a band of raving devotees, as in 64. 252, and often, of the attendants of Iacchus. — trepidantibus: as v. 11 tremebunda, of the quivering of nervous excitement; cf. Verg. Aen. VII. 395 aliae tremulis ululatibus aethera complent (of the Bacchic worshippers). — ululat: cf. v. 24 n. ululatibus.

31. animam agens: to be explained from anhelans of the almost fainting condition resulting from haste, excitement, and exhaustion, gasping. It usually means 'to give up the ghost'; cf. Cic. Fam. VIII. 13. 2 Q. Hortensius, cum has litteras scripsi, animam agebat.

32. comitata: usually with an ablative of person instead of thing when, as here, it has a personal subject.

33. ueluti iuuenca, etc.: the comparison is usually employed by the poets of the yoke of love; cf. 68. 118 n.

35. domum Cybelles: apparently the shrine of the goddess on the mountain-top.

36. Cerere: cf. Cic. N. D. II. 23. 60 fruges Cererem appellamus, uinum autem Liberum; ex quo illud Terenti 'sine Cerere et Libero friget Venus' (from Ter. Eun. 732). — The fasting in this case was probably not due to a requirement of ritual, but simply to the utterly exhausted condition of the new Galli.

39. oris aurei: doubtless to be construed with Sol rather than with oculis; cf. Lucr. 40. lustrauit, surveyed, rather than 'illumined,' as the figure in oculis shows. — aethera album, etc.: the adjectives album, dura, ferum describe permanent characteristics and not those peculiar to the morning, and hence album must be understood not merely of the sky brightened by dawn, but of the bright, fiery aether; cf. Cic. N. D. I. 13. 33 caeli ardorem; II. 15. 41 in ardore caelesti qui aether uel caelum nominatur. — sola: plural, since the sun views every region of earth. — dura, solid, to distinguish the earth from the fluid aether and sea. — ferum: a traditional epithet of the sea; cf. v. 16 n. truculenta pelagi.

41. sonipedibus: first in Lucil. XV. 15. Muel. Campanus sonipes; also in Cic. De Or. III. 47. 183 paeon . . . sicut . . . sonipedes; and frequently in later poets.

42. ibi: temporal, as in v. 4 (see note). — Somnus, etc.: the morn having come, Somnus is released from duty and flies eagerly (citus) back to Pasithea, whose reciprocal eagerness of longing is indicated by v. 43 trepidante sinu. Pasithea was one of the lesser Graces, and was promised to Sleep as a wife by Hera in Hom. Il. XIV. 267 ff.

47. animo aestuante: contrasted with liquida mente; there was but a moment of clear and calm mental vision succeeded by the torture of recollection. — rusum: so sometimes in earlier Latin (including Lucretius) for later rursus. — reditum tetulit: cf. v. 79 uti reditum ferat; 61. 26 aditum ferens; 61. 43 aditum ferat. On

49. miseriter: for misere, as puriter for pure in 39. 14; 76. 19.

51. miser: while under the influence of his mad enthusiasm, Attis gloried in his emasculation, but now, in his recovered senses, he speaks of his condition only with loathing, using feminines (v. 68) to point this feeling, but of course not using a feminine adjective in this expression of passionate longing for his home.

59. genitoribus: i.e. parentibus; cf. Lucr. II. 615 ingrati genitoribus (of the Galli).

60. foro: the poet here employs the corresponding Latin word for the Greek ἀγορά.

61. miser ah miser: cf. 61. 139. — etiam atque etiam: cf. Plaut. Trin. 674 te moneo hoc etiam atque etiam; Ter. Eun. 56 etiam atque etiam cogita; and often in later writers.

62. figurae: under the word is the Greek feeling for the beauty of the human form that had made Attis the object of so much adoration; cf. Cic. N. D. I. 18. 47 ff.

Ego mulier, ego adulescens, ego ephebus, ego puer,
Ego gymnasi fui flos, ego eram decus olei:
Mihi ianuae frequentes, mihi limina tepida,
Mihi floridis corollis redimita domus erat,
Linquendum ubi esset orto mihi sole cubiculum.
Ego nunc deum ministra et Cybeles famula ferar?

63. mulier: starting with the torturing thought of his present hateful condition, he retraces the steps of his former career as the passionate admiration of a whole city. — adulescens: cf. 12. 9 n. puer; Censor. Die Nat. 14. 2 [Varro putat] usque annum XV. pueros dictos . . . ad tricensimum annum adulescentes . . . usque quinque et quadraginta annos iuuenis . . . adusque sexagensimum annum seniores . . . inde usque finem uitae senes. — ephebus: cf. Censor. Die Nat. 14. 8 de tertia autem aetate adulescentulorum tres gradus esse factos in Graecia prius quam ad uiros perueniatur, quod uocent annorum xiiii. παῖδα, μελλέφηβον autem xv., dein sedecim ἔφηβον, tunc septemdecim ἐξέφηβον.

64. gymnasi flos: with the figure cf. 17. 14 n. — olei: i.e. palaestrae, as the contestants were well rubbed with oil before the sports; cf. Cic. De Or. I. 18. 81 nitidum . . . genus uerborum . . . sed palaestrae . . . et olei.

65. ianuae frequentes: devoted admirers flocked to his doors by day. — limina tepida: finding no entrance, his lovers spent the night in complaints on his door-stone; cf. Plat. Symp. 183 A οἱ ἐρασταὶ . . . ποιούμενοι . . . κοιμήσεις ἐπὶ θύραις; Aristaenetus 2. 20 ὅτε μὲν γὰρ αὐτοὶ ποθεῖτε, ἀστρώτους καὶ χαμαιπετεῖς κοιμήσεις ἐπὶ θύραις ποιεῖσθε; Hor. Carm. III. 10. 20 non hoc semper erit liminis patiens latus; Prop. I. 16. 22 tristis et in tepido limine somnus erit; Ov. Met. XIV. 709 posuit in limine duro molle latus.

66. corollis: the door-posts and threshold were decorated with garlands by the lovers in token of their devotion; cf. Lucr. IV. 1177 at lacrimans exclusus amator limina saepe floribus et sertis operit; Ov. Met. XIV. 708 interdum madidas lacrimarum rore coronas postibus intendit; Prop. I. 16. 7 mihi non desunt turpes pendere corollae.

67. linquendum ubi, etc.: the proudly careless boy affected so completely to disregard the attentions of his lovers as to be aware of them only as he left the house in the morning for the stadium and palaestra. — esset: only one earlier instance of the subjunctive of repetition with ubi can be cited (Plaut. Bacch. 431). In the silver age the construction becomes more frequent; cf. Hor. Carm. III. 6. 41 sol ubi montium mutaret umbras.

68. deum ministra: not specifically a servant of the general pantheon, but simply a temple servant, an unknown priest instead of the beloved of a city: the needful specification follows in Cybeles famula; cf. Tac. Ann. I. 10. 5; IV. 37. 5 effigie numinum. — ministra, famula: not content with the contrast between the lord of a cityful of lovers and the slave of a mysterious divinity, Attis brands his present disgrace by using the feminine form.

Ego maenas, ego mei pars, ego uir sterilis ero ?
Ego uiridis algida Idae niue amicta loca colam ?
Ego uitam agam sub altis Phrygiae columinibus,
Vbi cerua siluicultrix, ubi aper nemoriuagus ?
Iam iam dolet quod egi, iam iamque paenitet.'
Roseis ut huic labellis sonitus citus abiit
Geminas deorum ad aures noua nuntia referens,
Ibi iuncta iuga resoluens Cybele leonibus
Laeuumque pecoris hostem stimulans ita loquitur.

69. maenas: cf. v. 23 n. maenades.

70. uiridis Idae: cf. v. 30 n.

71. altis Phrygiae columinibus: the following verse makes it clear that mountain-summits are meant, though the form appears to be used only here in that sense; but the form culmen is so used by Caesar (B. G. III. 2) and by Suetonius (Dom. 23), and perhaps columinibus is here used metri gratia.

72. siluicultrix, nemoriuagus: each adjective is ἅπ. λεγ., though Vergil (Aen. X. 551) uses siluicola, and Lucretius (II. 597) montiuagum.

73. iam iam: with the repetition cf. Cic. Phil. II. 34. 87 iam iam minime miror te otium perturbare; Verg. Aen. XII. 875 iam iam linquo acies. — iam iamque: not = et iam iam, for the passionate exclamation of sorrow demands an asyndeton; the phrase rather = iam et iam; cf. Cic. Att. VII. 20. 1 at illum ruere nuntiant et iam iamque adesse; XVI. 9 iam iamque uideo bellum: and in Catullus himself 38. 3 and 64. 274 magis magis beside 68. 48 magis atque magis.

74. roseis labellis: the youthful beauty of Attis is thus contrasted with the intensity of his suffering and the bitterness of his plaint; cf. 45. 12 n. purpureo ore.

75. geminas: cf. 51. 11 gemina teguntur lumina nocte (where, however, there is a transfer of epithet); Culex 150 geminas aures; Verg. Aen. V. 416 temporibus geminis; Ov. Fast. II. 154 geminos pedes; Stat. Silu. IV. 4. 26 geminas aures; Mart. X. 10. 10 geminas manus. — deorum aures: somewhat loosely said, as if Cybele were not alone on the summit of Ida, but in the company of the other gods. — nuntia: the neuter singular in the sense of 'news' is very unusual, and the neuter plural in the same sense is still more rare; cf. however Sedul. II. 474 grandia nuntia.

76. iuga resoluens: while unfastening the lion from the yoke she addresses him. Cybele is often depicted by the poets as riding in a chariot drawn by yoked lions; cf. Lucr. II. 600 hanc ueteres Graium docti cecinere poetae sedibus in curru biiugos agitare leones; Verg. Aen. III. 113 et iuncti currum dominae subiere leones; X. 253 biiugi ad frena leones.

77. laeuum: the 'nigh' lion; the specification is doubtless introduced for the sake of increasing the realistic effect of the lion's attack by details of word painting. — pecoris hostem: probably with reference to the Greek descriptions of the lion as ταυροβόρος (Anth. Plan. 94)

'Agedum' inquit, 'age ferox i, fac ut hunc furor agitet,
Fac uti furoris ictu reditum in nemora ferat,
Mea libere nimis qui fugere imperia cupit.
Age caede terga cauda, tua uerbera patere,
Fac cuncta mugienti fremitu loca retonent,
Rutilam ferox torosa ceruice quate iubam.'
Ait haec minax Cybelle religatque iuga manu.
Ferus ipse sese adhortans rabidum incitat animo,
Vadit, fremit, refringit uirgulta pede uago.
At ubi umida albicantis loca litoris adiit
Tenerumque uidit Attin prope marmora pelagi, ταυροκτόνος (Soph. Ph. 400), ταυρολέτωρ (Man. Chron. 252), ταυροσφάγος (Lyc. 47), ταυροφόνος (Orph. Hym. 14. 2); for pecus indicates neat cattle as well as sheep; cf. Varro R. R. II. 1. 12 de pecore maiore, in quo sunt . . . boues, asini, equi. — stimulans: probably not with a goad, but with her words.

78. agedum, age: with the repetition cf. Ter. And. 310 age age. — fac ut: with the construction cf. v. 79; 64. 231; 109. 3; but for fac and subjunctive without ut, v. 82; 68. 46.

79. reditum ferat: cf. v. 47 reditum tetulit.

81. caede terga cauda: this habit of the lion in rage is noted by Plin. N. H. VIII. 16. 49, and by Luc. Phar. I. 208 mox ubi se saeuae stimulauit uerbere caudae erexitque iubam et uasto graue murmur hiatu infremuit.

82. fac retonent: with the construction cf. 68. 46 and v. 78 n. retonent is ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

84. minax: of Cybele's attitude toward Attis. — religat iuga, frees the lion from the yoke, completing the action begun in v. 76 iuncta iuga resoluens; with this conjunction of resoluere and religare in the same meaning cf. Pallad. Rut. III. 13 prouidendum est omnibus annis uitem resolui ac religari. For religare in the other sense cf. 64. 174.

85. rabidum: Cybele's exhortation was to arouse the lion to fury rather than to haste, and that is the characteristic passion of his subsequent action; hence rapidum, the reading of V, must be an error for rabidum, as rapidos for rabidos in v. 93, where a similar collocation occurs, incitatos rabidos being like rabidum incitat.

86. pede uago: the lion rushes now here, now there, in search of his prey; otherwise in 64. 277.

87. albicantis: not of the general color of sea-sand, but of the whiteness and sparkle of a foam-wet beach, as the position and use of umida indicate. — loca litoris: cf. v. 70 Idae loca.

88. tenerum: not of the beauty, but of the present effeminate condition of Attis; cf. Juv. 1. 22 tener spado. — marmora pelagi: cf. Hom. Il. XIV. 273 ἅλα μαρμαρέην. The word seems to describe the sparkling of the sea that occurs when it is covered with ripples only, and hence to convey the idea of a calm expanse (nitens aequor).

Facit impetum : ille demens fugit in nemora fera :
Ibi semper omne uitae spatium famula fuit.

Dea magna, dea Cybelle, dea domina Dindymi,
Procul a mea tuus sit furor omnis, era, domo :
Alios age incitatos, alios age rabidos.

64.

Peliaco quondam prognatae uertice pinus
Dicuntur liquidas Neptuni nasse per undas

89. demens : sc. with present fear, not with past recollections.

90. famula : repeating the feminine used by Attis himself in v. 68, and leaving with the reader, as the final thought, the irrevocable character of the awful self-consecration with which the poem opened.

91–93. The epilogue is a brief hymn to the dread goddess herself.

91. dea magna : cf. Prop. IV. 17. 35 dea magna Cybelle. — domina Dindymi : cf. v. 13; 35. 14.

92. procul, etc. : cf. Ov. Fast. IV. 116 a nobis sit furor iste procul.

93. age : with the verb in this sense with an adjective expressing, as it were, the result of the action, cf. Ov. Met. V. 13 quae te, germane, furentem mens agit in facinus? Tac. Agr. 41 sic Agricola . . . in ipsam gloriam praeceps agebatur. — incitatos . . . rabidos ; cf. the same collocation in v. 85 rabidum incitat.

64. This poem, often called in the later MSS. and earlier editions the Epithalamium of Peleus and Thetis, is rather a brief epic, or epyllion, after the Alexandrian style, having for its basis the wedding of Peleus and Thetis, and for one of its divisions the marriage-song of the Parcae. But into this epyllion is wrought another which details the story of Theseus and Ariadne under the guise of describing the embroidered drapery of the marriage-couch of Thetis. This second epyllion is even longer than the first, covering vv. 50–266, while the entire poem contains but 408 verses. — The date of composition is uncertain, though the finish of thought and expression seem to point to maturity of development on the part of the author. Metre, dactylic hexameter.

1–30. Introductory, explaining the circumstances that led to the marriage of Peleus and Thetis.

1. Peliaco : cf. the imitation of this proem by Ovid, Am. II. 11. 1 prima malas docuit, mirantibus aequoris undis, Peliaco pinus uertice caesa uias ; Prop. IV. 22. 11 tuque tuo Colchum propellas remige Phasin, Peliacaeque trabis totum iter ipse legas. — prognatae : cf. the similar figure in Hor. Carm. I. 14. 12 [pinus] siluae filia nobilis.

2. dicuntur : the poet makes it clear that he is repeating an ancient tradition ; cf. vv. 19 fertur, 76 and 124 perhibent, 212 ferunt. — liquidas : not an otiose epithet, but indicating the unstable water as unfitted to support a heavy body ;

Phasidos ad fluctus et fines Aeeteos,
Cum lecti iuuenes, Argiuae robora pubis,
Auratam optantes Colchis auertere pellem
Ausi sunt uada salsa cita decurrere puppi,
Caerula uerrentes abiegnis aequora palmis.
Diua quibus retinens in summis urbibus arces
Ipsa leui fecit uolitantem flamine currum,
Pinea coniungens inflexae texta carinae.
Illa rudem cursu prima imbuit Amphitriten.

cf. Verg. Aen. V. 859 liquidas proiecit in undas praecipitem; Nemes. Buc. 2. 76 nec tremulum liquidis lumen splenderet in undis. — nasse: cf. 4. 3 natantis trabis; 66. 45 iuuentus per medium nauit Athon.

3. Phasidos: the chief river of Colchis, rising in the Caucasus and flowing into the Euxine Sea at its eastern end. — Aeeteos: Gr. Αἰητείους: Aeetes was king of Colchis and father of Medea.

4. lecti iuuenes: so the Argonauts are called by Ennius (Med. Exsul 209 R. Argiui delecti uiri) and Vergil (Ecl. 4. 34 altera quae uehat Argo delectos heroas); cf. also Theocr. 13. 18 πασᾶν ἐκ πολίων προλελεγμένοι (of the Argonauts).

5. auratam pellem: for the story of the Argonautic expedition see Hom. Od. XII. 69; Hes. Theog. 992; Apollod. I. 9. 16 ff.; and the poems by Pindar (Pyth. 4), Apollonius, and Valerius Flaccus. — auertere, to win; especially used of plunder; cf. Caes. B. C. III. 59. 4 praedam omnem domum auertebant; Cic. Verr. II. 3. 69. 163 innumerabilem frumenti numerum auersum ab re publica esse; Verg. Aen. VIII. 207 quattuor a stabulis tauros auertit.

6. uada salsa: cf. Verg. Aen. V. 158 longa sulcant uada salsa carina. — cito decurrere puppi: cf. Ov. Fast. VI. 777 celeri decurrite cumba.

7. caerula uerrentes aequora: cf. Verg. Aen. III. 208 adnixi torquent spumas et caerula uerrunt. — palmis: cf. 4. 4 n. palmulis.

8. diua retinens, etc.: i.e. Athena Polias; cf. Verg. Ecl. 2. 61 Pallas quas condidit arces ipsa colat. — quibus: referring to v. 4 lecti iuuenes. — summis: with the partitive force.

9. ipsa fecit: Catullus here follows the tradition of Apollonius I. 111 αὐτὴ γὰρ καὶ νῆα θοὴν κάμε, with which cf. Phaedr. IV. 7. 9 fabricasset Argus opere Palladio ratem; Sen. Med. 368 non Palladia compacta manu Argo; Val. Flac. I. 94. — currum: the newly invented vehicle for the sea is described by its similarity to those in use on land; cf. Cic. N. D. II. 35. 89 diuinum et nouum uehiculum Argonautarum; and v. 6 decurrere.

11. cursu imbuit: cf. Val. Flac. I. 69 ignaras Cereris qui uomere terras imbuit; Sil. Ital. III. 64 iuuenem primo Hymenaeo imbuerat coniunx. — Amphitriten: i.e. the sea, as in Ov. Met. I. 14 bracchia porrexerat Amphitrite. For the descent of the goddess see v. 29 n. Tethys.

Quae simul ac rostro uentosum proscidit aequor
Tortaque remigio spumis incanduit unda,
Emersere freti candenti e gurgite uultus
Aequoreae monstrum Nereides admirantes.
Illa, siqua alia, uiderunt luce marinas
Mortales oculis nudato corpore nymphas
Nutricum tenus exstantes e gurgite cano.
Tum Thetidis Peleus incensus fertur amore,
Tum Thetis humanos non despexit hymenaeos,
Tum Thetidi pater ipse iugandum Pelea sensit.

12. uentosum aequor: cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 335 a Troia uentosa per aequora uectos; Ov. Her. 16. 5 uentosa per aequora uectum.

13. torta: cf. Verg. Aen. III. 208, cited on v. 7. — incanduit unda: cf. Ov. Met. IV. 530 percussa recanduit unda; and with incanduit in this sense Plin. Pan. 30 pars magna terrarum alto puluere incanduit.

14. With the general picture cf. Sil. Ital. VII. 412 ff. ac totus multo spumabat remige pontus, cum trepidae fremitu uitreis e sedibus antri aequoreae pelago simul emersere sorores. — freti: the MS. feri hardly describes the beautiful faces and forms of Thetis and her companions, being usually joined with such adjectives as immanis, inhumanus, immansuetum; but on freti cf. Oct. 720 talis emersam freto spumante Peleus coniugem accepit Thetim. — candenti e gurgite: cf. v. 13 incanduit unda; v. 18 e gurgite cano; Lucr. II. 767 [mare] uertitur in canos candenti marmore fluctus; Sil. Ital. XIV. 362 spumat canenti sulcatus gurgite limes.

15. monstrum admirantes: cf. the wonder expressed by the shepherd at the sight of the Argo in Accius ap. Cic. N. D. II. 35. 89. — Nereides: sea-nymphs, daughters of Nereus and Doris; cf. v. 29 n. Tethys.

17. oculis: emphasizing the reality of the wonderful sight; cf. Ter. Eun. 677 hunc oculis suis nostrarum nunquam quisquam uidit.

18. nutricum: the word occurs only here in the sense of papillarum. — tenus: with the genitive, as in Cic. Arat. 83 lumborum tenus; Verg. Geor. III. 53 crurum tenus. — gurgite cano: cf. v. 14 n.; Ciris 514 cano de gurgite.

19. tum: Catullus represents this as the first meeting of Peleus and Thetis; but, according to Apollonius (I. 558), Peleus, though an Argonaut, was long since married; while Valerius Flaccus (I. 130) represents the wedding of Peleus and Thetis as pictured among the adornments of the Argo itself, and Achilles as brought by Chiron to bid his father good-by before the sailing (I. 255). — fertur: cf. v. 2 n. dicuntur.

20. hymenaeos: plural, as in v. 141; but singular with the same meaning in 66. 11. On the lengthening of the preceding short syllable see Intr. 86 g.

21. pater ipse: i.e. Zeus, who had himself intended to wed Thetis; but being warned by the Fates (or, according to other stories, by

O nimis optato saeclorum tempore nati
Heroes, saluete, deum genus, o bona matrum
23b Progenies, saluete iterum . . .
Vos ego saepe meo, uos carmine compellabo,
25 Teque adeo eximiē taedis felicibus aucte
Thessaliae columen Peleu, cui Iuppiter ipse,
Ipse suos diuum genitor concessit amores.
Tene Thetis tenuit pulcherrima Nereine?
Tene suam Tethys concessit ducere neptem
30 Oceanusque, mari totum qui amplectitur orbem?

Themis, or by Prometheus) that the son of Thetis would be greater than his father, he gave up his purpose, and furthermore, fearing that his own throne might be endangered by the existence of a rival, declared that Thetis should wed no immortal; cf. Aesch. Prom. 167 ff., 907 ff.; Ov. Met. XI. 221 ff.

22. nimis optato: cf. 43. 4 n. nimis, and with the general sentiment of the verse, Verg. Aen. VI. 649 magnanimi heroes, nati melioribus annis.

23 f. saluete . . . saluete iterum: cf. Verg. Aen. V. 80 salue, sancte parens; iterum saluete, etc. — matrum: either there is hypallage of the adjective, or bonarum must be supplied in the lacuna, as Peerlkamp suggested. With the idea cf. 61. 226 ff.

23b. Cf. Crit. App.

24. Cf. Theocr. 1. 144 ὦ χαίρετε πολλάκι Μοῖσαι, χαίρετ'· ἐγὼ δ' ὕμμιν καὶ ἐς ὕστερον ἄδιον ᾄσω.

25. taedis aucte: cf. 66. 11 auctus hymenaeo.

26. Thessaliae columen: cf. Ter. Phor. 287 columen familiae; Hor. Carm. II. 17. 3 mearum columen rerum; Sen. Troad. 128 columen patriae; Hom. Il. ἔρκος Ἀχαιῶν.

27. amores: not of Thetis herself (cf. 6. 16 n.), but of the passion of Zeus for her, — 'in whose favor the father of the gods himself resigned his passion.' With the plural cf. 38. 6; 64. 334, 372; 68. 69; 96. 3; Plaut. Merc. 2 et argumentum et meos amores eloquar; Hor. Carm. II. 9. 10 nec tibi Vespero surgente decedunt amores; Verg. Ecl. 9. 56 nostros in longum ducis amores.

28. tenuit: sc. complexu; cf. 72. 2; but otherwise in 11. 18; 55. 17. — Nereine: Gr. Νηρηΐνη; but elsewhere the Latins use either Nereis (cf. v. 15) or Nerine (cf. Verg. Ecl. 7. 37 Nerine Galatea).

29. Tethys: the daughter of Uranus and Ge, and the wife of her own brother Oceanus, by whom she became the mother of the sea-nymphs called Oceanides, of the rivers of earth, and of Nereus. From the marriage of Nereus with his sister Doris, one of the Oceanides, sprang the sea-nymphs called Nereides, of whom the most famous were Thetis, Amphitrite, the wife of Poseidon, and Galatea, the beloved of Polyphemus.

30. totum amplectitur orbem: cf. Hom. Il. XVIII. 399 ἀψορρόου Ὠκεανοῖο; Aesch. Prom.

Quae simul optatae finito tempore luces

Deseritur Cieros, linquunt Phthiotica Tempe
Crannonisque domos ac moenia Larisaea,
Pharsalum coeunt, Pharsalia tecta frequentant.
Rura colit nemo, mollescunt colla iuuencis,
Non humilis curuis purgatur uinea rastris,

138 τοῦ περὶ πᾶσάν θ' εἱλισσομένου χθόν' ἀκοιμήτῳ ῥεύματι . . . πατρὸς Ὠκεανοῦ; Val. Flac. I. 195 terras salo complecteris omnes; Pan. Mess. (Tib. IV. 1) 147 Oceanus ponto qua continet orbem; Bryant Thanatopsis 42 and, poured round all, Old Ocean's gray and melancholy waste.

31–42. The introductory narrative finished, the poet turns to the main theme, and describes first the gathering of the mortal wedding-guests.

31. quae luces: with a general reference to the fixing of the wedding-day in v. 29. — simul: sc. atque; cf. 22. 15 n. — optatae: cf. with the thought, 62. 30; 66. 79.

32. domum: sc. of Peleus.

34. dona: wedding-gifts, not propitiatory offerings to a superior. — prae se: thus commonly of things carried in the hands; cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 249 munera praeferimus.

35. Cieros: otherwise Cierium, a town of Thessaliotis, according to Strabo 435. — Phthiotica Tempe: with a poet's license concerning geography, Catullus calls the famous vale of Tempe through which the Peneus flows (cf. v. 285) Phthiotic, as synonymous with Thessalian in general, though in strictness the district of Phthiotis was the southernmost of the divisions of Thessaly, extending not so far north even as Pharsalus.

36. Crannon and Larisa were both towns of Pelasgiotis near the Peneus.

37. Pharsalum coeunt: the commoner form of the legend made Mt. Pelion the place of the wedding, and Chiron the host.

38. mollescunt colla iuuencis: since they no longer bore the yoke; in this expression, as in the following verses, the absolute desertion of the farm is pictured by representing it as if it had lasted a long time.

39 f. Cf. Verg. Ecl. 4. 40, 41 non rastros patietur humus, non uinea falcem; robustus quoque iam tauris iuga soluet arator. — humilis uinea: here, as, according to Varro (R. R. I. 8), in Spain and some parts of Asia, the vines were not trained on trees, but either ran along the ground or were so cut as to be kept low. The latter plan is followed to-day in the great vineyards of California, and to some extent in Italy itself. — curuis: perhaps referring to the crescent-shaped iron, the two points of which form the teeth of the rastrum pictured in Rich's Dict. Ant. s.v. — rastris: the rastrum was a heavy sort of rake of from two to four strong iron teeth, used to break up clods and to loosen the surface of the ground.

Non glaebam prono conuellit uomere taurus,
Non falx attenuat frondatorum arboris umbram,
Squalida desertis robigo infertur aratris.
Ipsius at sedes, quacumque opulenta recessit

Candet ebur soliis, conlucent pocula mensae,
Tota domus gaudet regali splendida gaza.
Puluinar uero diuae geniale locatur

Tincta tegit roseo conchyli purpura fuco.

40. prono: of the point of the share down-pressed, that it may cut a deep furrow; cf. Verg. Geor. I. 45 depresso aratro; II. 203 presso sub uomere.

41. attenuat arboris umbram: that the sun may reach and ripen the grapes. Attempts have been made by various critics to rearrange vv. 38–42 so as to produce a more consistent picture by bringing together details that concern the same objects; but there seems to be no good reason for criticising the alternation of the description between the tasks which men performed alone and those in which cattle shared (after the general statement made in v. 38 that men and beasts ceased from toil).

43–266. The adornment of the palace of Peleus.

43. ipsius: i.e. Peleus; such a remote reference of ipse, so that it is equivalent to some such word as dominus, is not uncommon; cf. 114. 6; Ter. Andr. 360 paululum obsoni; ipsus tristis; Verg. Ecl. 3. 3 ipse Neaeram dum fouet; Juv. 1. 61 lora tenebat ipse. — opulenta recessit regia: the guest standing at the door looks through an imposing vista of room succeeding room; cf. on the word Verg. Aen. II. 300 Anchisae domus arboribus obtecta recessit; Plin. Ep. II. 17. 21 contra parietem medium zotheca recedit; and with the idea, the description of the first series of rooms in Pliny's villa (Ep. II. 17. 5).

44 ff. Cf. Vergil's description of Dido's palace in Aen. I. 637–641.

45. candet ebur soliis: the couches arranged about the tables have ivory legs; cf. v. 303 and 61. 115; like mensae, soliis is a dative.

46. gaudet: i.e. wears a festive appearance, as Sirmio was to do at the master's return (31. 12); cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 11. 6 ridet argento domus.

47. puluinar geniale: for lectus genialis, as a more formal and imposing term, and one especially connected with divinity.

48. sedibus in mediis: the poet is apparently thinking of a Roman house, where the lectus genialis stood in the atrium. — Indo dente politum = ebore polito; cf. Ov. Met. VIII. 288 dentes [apri] aequantur dentibus Indis.

49. Observe the favorite contrast of color between the ivory of the couch and its crimson drapery; cf. Hor. Sat. II. 6. 102 rubro ubi cocco tincta super lectos canderet uestis eburnos.

50. With this verse begins the episode of Ariadne's Lament, which extends through v. 266, thus forming more than half of the entire poem, and setting in striking contrast the unhappy love of Ariadne with the happy love of Thetis. Episodic digressions of a similar character, depicting actions represented in graving or embroidery, are as old as the description of the shield of Achilles (Hom. Il. XVIII. 478 ff.), and are multiplied in later writers. With the episode of Catullus may be compared the story of Ariadne as told by Ovid in Art. Am. I. 527–564; Her. 10.

52. fluentisono: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον, though fluctisonus and undisonus are found in post-Augustan poets. The word has reference to the crash of breakers upon a rock-bound coast, perhaps here to point the impossibility of escape; cf. v. 121 spumosa ad litora Diae, and the more neutral epithet used by Homer in Od. XI. 325 Δίῃ ἐν ἀμφιρύτῃ. — Diae: asserted by several of the Greeks to be but an earlier name for Naxos. But Homer (Od. XI. 321 ff.) very probably thought of the island of Dia that lies very near the north coast of Crete, whence the tradition may have been transferred to Naxos, the favorite haunt of Dionysus, as the later story of Ariadne's rescue by Dionysus gained ground. Catullus certainly must have followed the later tradition, if he had any definite tradition in mind.

53. A favorite subject in the Pompeian frescoes is Ariadne awaking from sleep and gazing after the departing ship of Theseus; cf. Roux Herc. et Pompeii, passim. — classe: cf. v. 212 n.

54. indomitos furores: of uncontrollable love; cf. 50. 11; 64. 94; 68. 129.

55. Cf. Ov. Her. 10. 31 aut uidi, aut tanquam quae me uidisse putarem.

56. fallaci: sleep is traitorous since he made the secret flight of Theseus possible; cf. Ov. Her. 10. 5 in quo me somnusque meus male prodidit et tu.

57. desertam, miseram: with this use of the adjective miser, instead of the adverb, with another adjective, cf. 65. 21 miserae oblitae.

58. immemor: used absolutely and with similar meaning in 30. 1.

59. Cf. 30. 10 n.

60. ex alga: i.e. from the beach;

Saxea ut effigies bacchantis prospicit, eheu,
Prospicit et magnis curarum fluctuat undis,
Non flauo retinens subtilem uertice mitram,
Non contecta leui uelatum pectus amictu,
Non tereti strophio lactentis uincta papillas,
Omnia quae toto delapsa e corpore passim
Ipsius ante pedes fluctus salis adludebant.
Sic neque tum mitrae neque tum fluitantis amictus
Illa uicem curans toto ex te pectore, Theseu,

v. 168; Mart. X. 16. 5 quidquid Erythraea niger inuenit Indus in alga.

61. The figure is that of a Bacchante speechless, motionless, and utterly forgetful of her own appearance through the very exaltation of her wild emotions; cf. Hor. Carm. III. 25. 8 non secus in iugis Edonis stupet Euhias Hebrum prospiciens; Ov. Her. 10. 49 mare prospiciens in saxo frigida sedi, quamque lapis sedes, tam lapis ipsa fui. — prospicit, eheu, prospicit: she stands absorbed in long-continued, but alas, fruitless gazing.

62. curarum: cf. 2. 10 n. — undis: with the figure cf. Lucr. III. 298 irarum fluctus; VI. 34 uoluere curarum tristis in pectore fluctus; Verg. Aen. IV. 532 saeuit amor, magnoque irarum fluctuat aestu; VIII. 19 magno curarum fluctuat aestu.

63. flauo, etc.: cf. the apparent reminiscence in Ciris 511 purpureas flauo retinentem uertice uittas. Fair hair is traditionally a mark of beauty in the poets. — subtilem mitram: the finely-woven, variegated coif worn by Greek women, as by Orientals in general. In Greece it seems to have consisted of a sort of scarf arranged either as headdress or as girdle.

64. non contecta, etc.: her breast unshielded by its veil of light drapery. With the reinforcement of the idea by the introduction of uelatum cf. v. 103 ingrata . . . frustra (but see Crit. App.). — leui amictu: doubtless the chiton; cf. Ov. Art. Am. I. 529 ut erat e somno tunica uelata recincta, nuda pedem, croceas inreligata comas.

65. strophio: a girdle woven or wound like a cord (cf. tereti, and the mother's dress in the well-known Herculanean Toilet of the Bride), and worn by women over the inner tunic just below the breasts, to which it was apparently designed to furnish support. — lactentis: not of the color, but of the full development, of the breasts in the mature woman; cf. Verg. Geor. I. 315 frumenta in uiridi stipula lactentia turgent; Ov. Fast. I. 351 sata uere nouo teneris lactentia sucis; and especially Petron. 86 impleui lactentibus papillis manus.

67 f. adludebant: with the figure cf. Cic. N. D. II. 39. 100 ipsum mare terram appetens litoribus adludit; Top. 7. 32 solebat Aquilius quaerentibus iis quid esset litus ita definire, qua fluctus eluderet.

69. toto pectore, toto animo, tota mente: cf. Vulg. Luc. 10. 27 diliges dominum deum tuum ex toto corde tuo, et ex tota anima tua, . . . et ex omni mente tua.

Toto animo, tota pendebat perdita mente.

71. exsternauit: apparently the first appearance of this rare word; cf. also only v. 165; Ov. Met. I. 641; XI. 77; and much later Latin.

72. Erycina: Venus was so called by the Romans from her ancient and famous shrine on Mt. Eryx in western Sicily.

73. illa tempestate quo ex tempore: a variation of the ordinary prose pleonasm illo die quo die. For one simple ablative repeated by another with ex cf. 35. 13 quo tempore . . . ex eo, where, as here, the starting-point of a continued effect is indicated. — ferox: used absolutely, as in v. 247.

74. curuis litoribus: embracing the harbor.

75. iniusti: so called of course from the Athenian standpoint, since he required such a heavy penalty for the death of one man, his son; but cf. Ov. Her. 10. 69 pater et tellus iusto regnata parenti, and the references to Minos as appointed because of his justice to judge souls in the lower world, e.g. Hom. Od. XI. 568 Ἔνθ' ἦ τοι Μίνωα ἴδον, Διὸς ἀγλαὸν υἱὸν, χρύσεον σκῆπτρον ἔχοντα, θεμιστεύοντα νέκυσσιν; Hor. Carm. IV. 7. 21 cum semel occideris et de te splendida Minos fecerit arbitria. — Gortynia: probably simply 'Cretan'; cf. v. 172 Gnosia litora.

76. nam perhibent: the poet drops the thread of his story for a moment to relate the circumstances that led to the present condition of Ariadne; cf. v. 2 n. dicuntur.

77. Androgeoneae caedis: Androgeos, son of Minos and Pasiphae, conquered all his competitors at wrestling in Athens, and was through jealousy assassinated while on his way to the games at Thebes. According to another story, King Aegeus himself caused his death by sending him against the fire-breathing Marathonian bull. Minos thereupon besieged the Athenians, who were compelled to yield to him by a pestilence sent by the gods, and to accept his hard conditions of peace.

78. electos: cf. v. 4 lecti iuuenes. The number is commonly given as seven of each sex (as also, perhaps, in Verg. Aen. VI. 20 ff.). — innuptarum: for uirginum, as in 62. 6.

79. Cecropiam: traditionally the ancient name of the city of King Cecrops, which was called Athenae after the goddess Athena became recognized as its patron.

80. angusta: of the small size of the young city, and not of the straitening by the hardships of siege.

83. funera nec funera: with the oxymoron cf. 112. 1 multus neque multus (where, however, there is an ἀμφιβολία); Cic. Phil. I. 2. 5 insepultam sepulturam; Ov. Art. Am. II. 93 pater nec iam pater (repeated in Met. VIII. 231); and especially such favorite Greek expressions as πόλεμος ἀπόλεμος, τάφος ἄταφος, etc. The reference is doubtless to the life-in-death of the victims on their way to Crete, who were mourned as dead from the moment of their sailing.

84. atque ita: i.e. with the purpose mentioned in the preceding verses; cf. v. 315 atque ita. — naue leui et lenibus auris: the happy indications of a swift and prosperous voyage are contrasted with the shrinking horror and dread in the hearts of the passengers. — nitens, pressing forward.

85. magnanimum: the Homeric μεγάθυμος. — sedes superbas, the abode of tyranny; with reference to v. 75 iniusti regis.

86 ff. This account of the sudden love of Ariadne for Theseus closely resembles that given by Apollonius (III. 275 ff.) in describing Medea's love for Jason. — uirgo regia: i.e. Ariadne; cf. Ov. Met. II. 570 fueramque ego regia uirgo.

87. suauis exspirans odores lectulus: cf. Ciris 3 suaues exspirans hortulus auras. The idea seems to have been suggested by the Homeric phrase θάλαμος θυώδης (e.g. Od. IV. 121).

88. in molli complexu matris: cf. 61. 58; 62. 21.

89. quales, etc.: cf. 61. 22 n.

90. aura educit: cf. v. 282; 62. 41 n. — colores: by metonymy for flores; cf. Val. Flac. Arg. VI. 492 lilia per uarios lucent uelut alba colores.

91. non prius, etc.: cf. 51. 6 (and note), and contrast the idea with the more complex treatment of Medea's first passion in Ov. Met. VII. 86 ff.

92. cuncto, etc.: cf., however, the commoner phrase in Verg. Aen. VII. 356 necdum animus toto percepit pectore flammam; Ov. Met. VII. 17 excute uirgineo conceptas pectore flammas; Petron. 127 Iuppiter et toto concepit pectore flammas. On the figure see 2. 8 n.

93. imis medullis: cf. 35. 15 n.

95. sancte: a general epithet of divinity; cf. 36. 3 n.; Tib. II. 1. 81 sancte [Amor], ueni dapibus festis, sed pone sagittas. — curis, etc.: cf. the similar phrase concerning Venus in 68. 18 quae dulcem curis miscet amaritiem.

96. Cf. 36. 12 ff.

98. flauo hospite: cf. v. 63 n.

100. quanto magis expalluit: with the construction cf. Cic. Acad. I. 3. 10 quanto magis philosophi delectabunt; with the figure, 81. 4. Dark-complexioned people, as the people of southern Europe usually are, turn yellow rather than white when pale.

103. ingrata, frustra: with the pleonasm cf. v. 64 contecta, uelatum; with ingrata in this passive sense, 'without due return,' cf. 73. 3; 76. 6; but in the active sense, 'ungrateful,' 76. 9.

104. tacito succendit uota labello: the beautiful figure of the incense of prayer is unique in Latin in this pure form, but is so simple that its authenticity is above reasonable suspicion. The connection of prayers with incense-offering is not infrequently noted; cf. Stat. Theb. XI. 236 uota incepta tamen libataque tura ferebat. Ariadne's prayer was offered silently, as became her maidenly feeling, and the necessary concealment of her love from her friends.

105 ff. uelut, etc.: with the figure cf. Verg. Aen. II. 626 ff.; Hor. Carm. IV. 6. 9 ff.; and often.

110. saeuum: apparently used

Nequiquam uanis iactantem cornua uentis.

Tecti frustraretur inobseruabilis error.

here, though perhaps here only, as a substantive, indicating the distinctive characteristic of this monster, as ferus, so often used substantively, (e.g. 63. 85), characterizes ordinary wild beasts.

111. nequiquam, etc.: cf. Cic. Att. VIII. 5. 1 πολλὰ μάτην κεράεσσιν ἐς ἠέρα θυμήναντα; cf. also Verg. Aen. XII. 105 [taurus] uentos lacessit ictibus. — uanis: unsubstantial, offering no resistance; cf. Val. Flac. I. 421 saltem in uacuos ut bracchia uentos spargat; but Shelley Medusa of Da Vinci 23 to saw The solid air with many a ragged jaw.

112. pedem reflexit: perhaps the verb is selected because it suggests the turnings (v. 114) of the labyrinth. — multa cum laude: cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 4. 66 multa proruit integrum cum laude uictorem.

113. Cf. of the same incident Verg. Aen. VI. 30 caeca regens filo uestigia; Prop. III. 14. 8 Daedalium lino cum duce rexit iter; Ov. Her. 10. 103 nec tibi quae reditus monstrarent fila dedissem.

114. labyrintheis: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

115. inobseruabilis error: cf. Verg. Aen. V. 591 irremeabilis error; VI. 27 inextricabilis error (of the Labyrinth); Apoll. Sid. Ep. II. 5 inextricabilem labyrinthum negotii multiplicis; Plin. N. H. XXXVI. 85 itinerum ambages occursusque ac recursus inexplicabiles continet; Ov. Met. VIII. 160 turbatque notas, et lumina flexum ducit in errorem uariarum ambage uiarum; Shelley Medusa of Da Vinci 35 that inextricable error.

118. consanguineae: for sororis. Apollodorus (III. 1. 2) speaks of three other daughters of Minos besides Ariadne, — Acale, Xenodice, and Phaedra, of whom Catullus probably had in mind Phaedra, who is the most prominent of them in mythology, and was later the wife of Theseus himself.

119. misera: contrasting the present wretched condition of Ariadne, betrayed by a false love, with the affection formerly lavished upon her by her family. — deperdita: of the limitless love of the mother, rather than of her present unhappiness; cf. 45. 3; 104. 3.

120. Thesei: dissyllabic, like v. 382 Pelei, and Culex 278 Orphei (cited on v. 139). — praeoptarit: with the synizesis cf. Plaut. Trin. 648 praeóptauisti amórem tuom uti uirtuti praepónere; Ter. Hec.

124. perhibent: cf. v. 2 n. dicuntur. — ardenti corde: cf. v. 197 ardens.

125. clarisonas: a rare word, occurring only here (of the shrill cries of anguish), in v. 320 (of the shrill voice of age), and in Cic. Arat. 280 a clarisonis auris Aquilonis (of the shrilling blast). — imo ex pectore: i.e. after a long-drawn, sighing inspiration; cf. Verg. Aen. I. 371 suspirans imoque trahens a pectore uocem.

126 f. Cf. Ov. Her. 10. 25–28.

128. tremuli, rippling; cf. Ov. Her. 11. 75 ut mare fit tremulum, tenui cum stringitur aura. — procurrere: with the vain impulse to follow the fleeing vessel.

129. mollia, soft; cf. 65. 21 molli sub ueste. — nudatae: proleptic.

130. extremis: for her grief so far overcomes her that she supposes herself to be dying; cf. Prop. IV. 7. 55 flens tamen extremis dedit haec mandata querelis.

131. frigidulos singultus: carrying on the idea of extremis, indicating the last panting breaths as chill death creeps on; cf. Ciris 347 super morientis alumnae frigidulos ocellos.

132–201. With the complaint of Ariadne cf. similar passages in Verg. Aen. IV. 590 ff. (the complaint of Dido); Ov. Met. VIII. 108–142 (of Scylla).

132. patriis ab aris = a domo; cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 269 patriis redditus aris, and often; Charis. 33 K. arae pro penatibus.

134. neglecto numine diuum: the gods punish infidelity of all sorts; cf. 30. 3–4.

140. miserae: the dative with dedisti seems to be continued into the iubebas-clause, though a simple infinitive and dative is a rare construction with that verb.

141. sed, etc.: cf. the close verbal and metrical resemblance of Verg. Aen. IV. 316 per conubia nostra, per inceptos hymenaeos. The repetition of sed corresponds to that of non haec in v. 139 f. — conubia: plural with singular meaning, as in v. 158; but singular in 62. 57. — hymenaeos: cf. v. 20 n.

149. turbine leti: cf. Val. Flac. VI. 279 doloris turbine.

150. germanum: i.e. the Minotaur; cf. v. 181; Ov. Her. 10. 115 dextera crudelis quae me fratremque necauit. — creui: archaic for decreui; cf. Lucil. XIII. 1 acribus inter se cum armis confligere cernit; Plaut. Cist. 1 mihi amicam esse creui matrem tuam.

151. supremo in tempore: i.e. in extreme danger of life; cf. v. 169 extremo tempore; Hor. Carm. II. 7. 1 tempus in ultimum.

Sed quid ego ignaris nequiquam conqueror auris

152. dilaceranda, etc.: cf. Hom. Il. I. 4 αὐτοὺς δὲ ἑλώρια τεῦχε κύνεσσιν οἰωνοῖσί τε πᾶσι; Verg. Aen. IX. 485 canibus data praeda Latinis alitibusque iaces; Ov. Her. 10. 96 destituor rapidis praeda cibusque feris.

153. iniecta . . . terra: the passage of the soul across the Styx was secured only by due burial under at least three handfuls of earth ; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 28. 36 licebit iniecto ter puluere curras.

154 ff. Cf. c. 60.

155. mare, etc.: cf. Hom. Il. XVI. 34 γλαυκὴ δέ σε τίκτε θάλασσα πέτραι δ' ἠλίβατοι, ὅτι τοι νόος ἐστὶν ἀπηνής.

156. Scylla rapax: cf. Ap. Sid. Carm. 9. 165 Scyllae rabidum uoracis inguen.

157. dulci uita: cf. Hom. Od. V. 152 γλυκὺς αἰών.

158. tibi cordi conubia: cf. 44. 3 ; 81. 5 ; 95. 9 ; Ter. Andr. 328 tibi nuptiae haec sunt cordi.

159. prisci, stern, as the older days were proverbially the stricter ; cf. Hor. Carm. III. 21. 11 narratur et prisci Catonis saepe mero caluisse uirtus. — parentis: of course Aegeus, and not Minos, is meant, and the commands that would shut Ariadne, the rescuer of his son, out of his home she justly calls saeua; cf. Hyg. Fab. 43 Theseus in insula Dia cogitans, si Ariadnen in patriam portasset, sibi opprobrium futurum, etc.

160. uestras: i.e. of Theseus and his family; cf. v. 176 nostris.

161. serua, etc.: cf. Shakspere Tempest III. 1 to be your fellow You may deny me ; but I'll be your servant, Whether you will or no.

162. permulcens, etc.: a common duty of female slaves, and Ariadne would especially delight in performing personal service for her hero ; cf. Hom. Od. XIX. 386 ὣς ἄρ' ἔφη, γρῆυς δὲ λέβητ' ἔλε παμφανόωντα, τοῦ πόδας ἐξαπένιζεν, etc. — uestigia: for pedes, an extremely rare use; but cf. Sen. Thy. 1043 rupta fractis cruribus uestigia ; Oed. 833 forata ferro uestigia.

164. sed quid, etc.: with the rhetorical question in self-address cf. v. 116 ff.

Exsternata malo, quae nullis sensibus auctae
Nec missas audire queunt nec reddere uoces?
Ille autem prope iam mediis uersatur in undis,
Nec quisquam adparet uacua mortalis in alga.
Sic nimis insultans extremo tempore saeua
Fors etiam nostris inuidit questibus auris.
Iuppiter omnipotens, utinam ne tempore primo
Gnosia Cecropiae tetigissent litora puppes,
Indomito nec dira ferens stipendia tauro
Perfidus in Creta religasset nauita funem,
Nec malus hic celans dulci crudelia forma
Consilia in nostris requiesset sedibus hospes!
Nam quo me referam? quali spe perdita nitor?
Idaeosne petam montes? ah, gurgite lato
Discernens ponti truculentum ubi diuidit aequor?
An patris auxilium sperem, quemne ipsa reliqui

165. exsternata: cf. v. 71 n. exsternauit. — auctae, endowed; cf. Lucr. III. 628 animas sensibus auctas.

168. alga: cf. v. 60 n.

169. extremo tempore, at my last hour; cf. v. 151 n.

172. Gnosia: doubtless simply 'Cretan'; cf. v. 75 Gortynia tecta.

173. tauro: so the Minotaur is called also in v. 230.

174. religasset funem: of mooring to the shore; cf. Verg. Aen. VII. 106 gramineo ripae religauit ab aggere classem; Luc. Phar. VII. 860 nullus ab Emathio religasset litore funem nauita.

175. malus hic: cf. 29. 21 n.

177 ff. Cf. Eurip. Med. 502 ff.; Ov. Met. VIII. 113 ff. nam quo deserta reuertar? in patriam? deserta iacet, . . . patris ad ora? quem tibi donaui? C. Gracchus (Cic. De. Or. III. 214) quo me miser conferam? quo uertam? in Capitoliumne? at fratris sanguine madet. an domum? matremne ut miseram lamentantem uideam et abiectam?

178 ff. Ariadne proposes to herself three courses, and rejects them successively as impossible, the first, because of her isolation from home, the other two, because also of her past deeds. — Idaeos montes: i.e. Crete, the thought being simply of returning home.

180. sperem: sc. even if I could reach Crete. — quemne = quippe quem; cf. v. 183; 68. 91. The interrogative particle -ne is not infrequently joined to relatives to point the reason for controverting a previous assertion, or for answering in the negative a previous question; cf. Plaut. Trin. 360 quin comedit quod fuit, quod non fuit? Ter. Phor. 923 quodne ego discripsi porro illis quibus debui? and Minton

Respersum iuuenem fraterna caede secuta?
Coniugis an fido consoler memet amore,
Quine fugit lentos incuruans gurgite remos?
Praeterea nullo litus, sola insula, tecto,
Nec patet egressus pelagi cingentibus undis:
Nulla fugae ratio, nulla spes: omnia muta,
Omnia sunt deserta, ostentant omnia letum.
Non tamen ante mihi languescent lumina morte,
Nec prius a fesso secedent corpore sensus
Quam iustam a diuis exposcam prodita multam
Caelestumque fidem postrema comprecer hora.
Quare, facta uirum multantes uindice poena
Eumenides, quibus anguino redimita capillo
Frons exspirantis praeportat pectoris iras,
Huc huc aduentate, meas audite querelas,
Quas ego, uae miserae, extremis proferre medullis
Cogor inops, ardens, amenti caeca furore.

Warren, Amer. Jour. Phil. Vol. II. p. 50 ff.

181. fraterna: cf. v. 150 n.

183. quine, etc.: i.e. as if it were not my husband who is now fleeing from me.

184. nullo, etc.: the appositive phrase sola insula is inserted between the subject and its modifying ablative of characteristic tecto in a somewhat unusual form of hyperbaton; cf. however Juv. 3. 48 mancus et exstinctae corpus non utile dextrae.

186. nulla spes: on the lengthening of the final syllable see Intr. 86*g*. — omnia muta: as no ear was open to her grief (v. 170), so there was no voice to speak sympathy; cf. Prop. I. 18. 1 haec certe deserta loca et taciturna querenti.

193. anguino redimita capillo: cf. Aes. Choeph. 1049 πεπλεκτανημέναι πυκνοῖς δράκουσιν; Hor. Carm. II. 13. 35 intorti capillis Eumenidum angues; Verg. Aen. VI. 280 discordia demens, uipereum crinem uittis innexa cruentis.

194. exspirantis: i.e. the angry, hissing serpents but betoken the anger that breathes forth from the breasts of the furies. — praeportat: of a thing prominently displayed; cf. Lucr. II. 621 tela praeportant, uiolenti signa furoris.

195. huc huc aduentate: cf. 61. 8 huc huc ueni.

196. uae miserae: cf. 8. 15 n.; Ter. Andr. 743 uae miserae mihi; Ov. Her. 3. 82 hic mihi, uae miserae, concutit ossa metus. — extremis medullis, from my inmost soul; but this instance of the ablative alone with proferre is perhaps unique. Cf. 35. 15 n.

197. ardens: like v. 124 ardenti corde.

Quae quoniam uerae nascuntur pectore ab imo,
Vos nolite pati nostrum uanescere luctum,
Sed quali solam Theseus me mente reliquit,
Tali mente, deae, funestet seque suosque.'
Has postquam maesto profudit pectore uoces
Supplicium saeuis exposcens anxia factis,
Adnuit inuicto caelestum numine rector,
Quo nutu tellus atque horrida contremuerunt
Aequora concussitque micantia sidera mundus.
Ipse autem caeca mentem caligine Theseus
Consitus oblito dimisit pectore cuncta
Quae mandata prius constanti mente tenebat,
Dulcia nec maesto sustollens signa parenti
Sospitem Erechtheum se ostendit uisere portum.
Namque ferunt olim, classi cum moenia diuae
Linquentem gnatum uentis concrederet Aegeus,
Talia complexum iuueni mandata dedisse:
'Gnate mihi longe iucundior unice uita,

200 f. quali, etc.: i.e. as Theseus forgot his vows (v. 58 immemor iuuenis; v. 123 immemori pectore), let forgetfulness bring upon him the fatal penalty (cf. vv. 247–248).

203. anxia: explained by v. 197; cf. 68. 8.

204 ff. adnuit, etc.: cf. Hom. Il. I. 528–530; Verg. Aen. IX. 106 adnuit et totum nutu tremefecit Olympum; Stat. Theb. VII. 3 concussitque caput, motu quo celsa laborant sidera proclamatque adici ceruicibus Atlas.

206. mundus, the firmament, as in 66. 1; but cf. 47. 2.

207. caeca caligine: cf. Cic. Arat. 345 adiment lucem caeca caligine nubes; Lucr. III. 304 caecae caliginis umbra; Verg. Aen. III. 203 incertos caeca caligine soles.

208. consitus, beset; very rare in this figurative sense till post-classical times; but cf. Plaut. Men. 756 consitus sum senectute.

209. Cf. the close verbal resemblance of v. 238; Lucr. II. 582 memori mandatum mente teneri.

211. Erechtheum portum: so Homer calls the Athenians by the name of their fabulous king in Il. II. 547 δῆμον Ἐρεχθῆος μεγαλήτορος.

212. classi: perhaps of a single ship; cf. v. 53 with vv. 84 and 121. — diuae: the use of the unmodified noun to indicate Athena seems to be made possible by the unmistakable reference to Athens in v. 211 Erechtheum portum.

215. iucundior uita: cf. 68. 106 uita dulcius atque anima; and on similar expressions, 3. 5 n.

Gnate, ego quem in dubios cogor dimittere casus,
Reddite in extrema nuper mihi fine senectae,
Quandoquidem fortuna mea ac tua feruida uirtus
Eripit inuito mihi te, cui languida nondum
Lumina sunt gnati cara saturata figura,
Non ego te gaudens laetanti pectore mittam,
Nec te ferre sinam fortunae signa secundae,
Sed primum multas expromam mente querelas
Canitiem terra atque infuso puluere foedans,
Inde infecta uago suspendam lintea malo,
Nostros ut luctus nostraeque incendia mentis
Carbasus obscurata decet ferrugine Hibera.
Quod tibi si sancti concesserit incola Itoni,
Quae nostrum genus ac sedes defendere Erechthei

217. extrema, etc.: Theseus passed his early life with his mother Aethra in the home of her father Pittheus, king of Troezene, and when he finally came to Athens, found Aegeus already an old man. — fine: feminine, as regularly in Lucretius, and not very infrequently in other writers of all ages, in the singular; but note the masculine plural in 64. 3; 66. 12.

221. gaudens laetanti pectore: cf. 67. 26 n.

222. fortunae signa secundae: in this instance, white sails. On white as the color proverbially connected with good fortune, cf. 68. 148 n.; Pers. 1. 110 per me equidem sint omnia protinus alba.

224. terra, etc.: a common sign of extreme grief among the ancients; cf. Vulg. Iob 2. 12 plorauerunt, scissisque uestibus sparserunt puluerem super caput suum in caelum; Hom. Il. XVIII. 23 ἀμφοτέρῃσι δὲ χερσὶν ἑλὼν κόνιν αἰθαλόεσσαν χεύατο κὰκ κεφαλῆς, χαρίεν δ' ἤσχυνε πρόσωπον; Verg. Aen. XII. 611 canitiem immundo perfusam puluere turpans.

225. uago, swaying; cf. Enn. trag. 151 R. arbores uento uagant.

227. obscurata ferrugine Hibera: cf. Verg. Aen. IX. 582 ferrugine clarus Hibera; Geor. I. 467 caput obscura ferrugine texit; Ov. Met. V. 404 obscura tinctas ferrugine habenas. The dye was apparently produced from a variety of ochre, and its hue is described by Plaut. Mil. 1181 palliolum habeas ferrugineum (nam is colos thalasicust), and by Servius on Verg. ll. cc. uicinus purpurae subnigrae; purpura nigrior. It was, therefore, a sort of dull, dark violet.

228. sancti incola Itoni: the shrine of Athena in the Boeotian city (and mountain) of Itonus was well known to the Romans; cf. Liv. XXXVI. 20 ibi statua regis Antiochi posita in templo Mineruae Itoniae iram accendit.

229. defendere: the simple complementary infinitive with adnuere in this sense is very rare, but is

Adnuit, ut tauri respergas sanguine dextram,
Tum uero facito ut memori tibi condita corde
Haec uigeant mandata, nec ulla oblitteret aetas,
Vt simul ac nostros inuisent lumina collis,
Funestam antennae deponant undique uestem
Candidaque intorti sustollant uela rudentes,
Quam primum cernens ut laeta gaudia mente
Agnoscam, cum te reducem aetas prospera sistet.'
Haec mandata prius constanti mente tenentem
Thesea ceu pulsae uentorum flamine nubes
Aerium niuei montis liquere cacumen.
At pater, ut summa prospectum ex arce petebat
Anxia in adsiduos absumens lumina fletus,
Cum primum inflati conspexit lintea ueli,
Praecipitem sese scopulorum e uertice iecit
Amissum credens immiti Thesea fato.
Sic funesta domus ingressus tecta paterna justified by the similar construction with other verbs of promising. — Erechthei: genitive; cf. v. 120 Thesei (but v. 382 Pelei, 66. 94 Hydrochoi, dative).

230. tauri: cf. v. 173 n.

232. oblitteret aetas: cf. 68. 43; 64. 322. In these three places, and in v. 237, aetas has the sense of tempus; elsewhere in Catullus, of uita.

233. inuisent: cf. 31. 4 n.

234. funestam uestem, the garb of mourning; cf. Acc. Trag. 86 R. sed quaenam haec mulier est funesta ueste, tonsu lugubri? — undique: the word is probably used merely to emphasize the urgency of the bidding, — 'every stitch of mourning.'

237. te reducem sistet: cf. Liv. XXIX. 27. 3 domos reduces sistatis. — aetas: cf. v. 232 n.

238. Cf. v. 209.

239 f. ceu, etc.: cf. Hom. Il. V. 522 ff.

241. summa ex arce: i.e. from the Acropolis, whence he would have an unimpeded view over the sea southward. This form of the story is followed also by Diodorus (IV. 61. 7) and Pausanias (I. 22. 5); but another form makes the promontory of Sunium the place whence Aegeus watched for the return of the ship, on descrying which he threw himself into the thence-named Aegean Sea; cf. Stat. Theb. XII. 624 ff. linquitur Eois longe speculabile proris Sunion, unde uagi casurum in nomina ponti Cresia decepit falso ratis Aegea uelo.

243. inflati: the spread of canvas made the vessel the sooner visible to his straining eyes.

Morte ferox Theseus, qualem Minoidi luctum
Obtulerat mente immemori, talem ipse recepit.
Quae tum prospectans cedentem maesta carinam
Multiplices animo uoluebat saucia curas.
At parte ex alia florens uolitabat Iacchus
Cum thiaso satyrorum et Nysigenis silenis
Te quaerens, Ariadna, tuoque incensus amore,
. . . . . .
Quae tum alacres passim lymphata mente furebant
Euhoe bacchantes, euhoe capita inflectentes.
Harum pars tecta quatiebant cuspide thyrsos,

247. ferox: cf. with the absolute use of the adjective v. 73. — Minoidi: Gr. dative; cf. 66. 70 Tethyi.

247 f. qualem Minoidi, etc.: cf. v. 200 f.

249. quae tum, etc.: the poet has hastened on to describe the effect of Ariadne's curse, and now returns to tell her own fate.

250. saucia: of the wounds of love; cf. Verg. Aen. IV. 1 regina graui iam dudum saucia cura.

251. at, etc.: in immediate contrast with the absorbing grief of Ariadne is brought the joyous revelry of the Bacchic rout, the leader of which comes to fill the place of the fugitive lover. — parte: sc. of the coverlet. — florens: cf. 17. 14 n. — Iacchus: a mystical name of Bacchus especially used by the poets.

252. thiaso: cf. 63. 28 n. — satyrorum, silenis: of the male attendants upon Bacchus the poets usually designate the wanton younger as satyri and the drunken elder as sileni. — Nysigenis: Bacchus is apparently thought of as returning from his great journey to the far East; cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 804 qui pampineis uictor iuga flectit habenis Liber, agens celso Nysae de uertice tigris, and Apollonius calls Dionysus the prince of Nysa, when speaking of his marriage with Ariadne (V. 431). Nysa is variously described by ancient authorities as a city (or mountain) in India (Plin.), Arabia (Diod.), or Thrace (Hom.; Strabo).

253. tuo: for the objective genitive, a not very common use; cf. 87. 4 amore tuo; Sall. Iug. 14. 8 uos in mea iniuria despecti estis.

254. quae: the following actions are those characteristic of the female followers of Bacchus (cf. also v. 256 harum), while only his male followers have thus far been referred to. Bergk is therefore correct in believing that a verse has been lost after v. 253. — lymphata mente: i.e. crazed with the mad enthusiasm inspired by the god; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 37. 14 mentem lymphatam Mareotico.

255. capita inflectentes: cf. 63. 23 n.

256. tecta cuspide thyrsos: i.e. the vine-rod, or spear, the traditional sceptre and weapon of Bacchus. Its stroke inspired madness; cf. Hor. Carm. II. 19. 7

Pars e diuulso iactabant membra iuuenco,
Pars sese tortis serpentibus incingebant,
Pars obscura cauis celebrabant orgia cistis,
Orgia quae frustra cupiunt audire profani,
Plangebant aliae proceris tympana palmis
Aut tereti tenuis tinnitus aere ciebant,
Multis raucisonos efflabant cornua bombos
Barbaraque horribili stridebat tibia cantu.
Talibus amplifice uestis decorata figuris
Puluinar complexa suo uelabat amictu.

euhoe, parce, Liber, parce, graui metuende thyrso. It was also carried by his worshippers, as here, and was tipped with a pine-cone or with a bunch of vine-leaves (Verg. Aen. VII. 396 pampineas gerunt hastas), or ivy-leaves (Prop. IV. 3. 35 haec hederas legit in thyrsos). All forms of the thyrsus are seen in the frequent representations of Bacchic processions in ancient wall-paintings and bas-reliefs (cf. Rich Dict. Antiq. s. u.).

257. e diuulso, etc.: cf. Pers. 1. 100 raptum uitulo caput ablatura superbo Bassaris. The action is often represented in ancient monuments. So the frenzied Bacchantes tore Pentheus in pieces (Ov. Met. III. 701 ff.).

258. tortis, etc.: cf. Hor. Carm. II. 19. 18 tu separatis uuidus in iugis nodo coerces uiperino Bistonidum sine fraude crines; Ov. Met. IV. 483 [Tisiphone] torto incingitur angue.

259. obscura, etc.: cf. Hor. Carm. I. 18. 12 nec uariis obsita frondibus sub diuum rapiam (addressing Bassareus). The cista was either a cylindrical basket or a box, in which the secret emblems (orgia) of the worship of Bacchus, or of Ceres, were concealed from uninitiated eyes when carried in procession (celebrabant).

261–264. plangebant, etc.: cf. 63. 21 n.; Lucr. II. 618 ff. tympana tenta tonant palmis et cymbala circum concaua, raucisonoque minantur cornua cantu, et Phrygio stimulat numero caua tibia mentis. — proceris: perhaps with the unusual meaning of lifted high (see the monuments).

262. tereti aere: i.e. the hemispherical cymbals; cf. 63. 21. — tenuis tinnitus, the sharp shrill, as contrasted with raucisonos bombos of the horns. Note the alliteration, and cf. Lucr. l.c., and the triple alliteration in v. 320.

263. raucisonos: cf. Lucr. l.c.; IV. 544 et reboat raucum regio cita barbara bombum.

264. barbara: i.e. Phrygian; cf. 63. 22. Catullus speaks from the standpoint of a Greek; cf. Lucr. l.c.; Hor. Epod. 9. 5 sonante mixtum tibiis carmen lyra, hac Dorium, illis barbarum.

265 f. talibus, etc.: the story of Ariadne is left when happiness in a divine marriage is just coming to her; these verses, concluding the description of the embroidered spread, virtually repeat vv. 50–51, with which it began.

Quae postquam cupide spectando Thessala pubes
Expleta est, sanctis coepit decedere diuis.
Hic, qualis flatu placidum mare matutino
Horrificans Zephyrus procliuas incitat undas
Aurora exoriente uagi sub limina solis,
Quae tarde primum clementi flamine pulsae
Procedunt, leuiterque sonant plangore cachinni,
Post uento crescente magis magis increbescunt
Purpureaque procul nantes ab luce refulgent,
— Sic tum uestibuli linquentes regia tecta
Ad se quisque uago passim pede discedebant.
Quorum post abitum princeps e uertice Peli
Aduenit Chiron portans siluestria dona:
Nam quoscumque ferunt campi, quos Thessala magnis

267–277. The mortal guests give place to the immortals, who come also bringing gifts (278–302), and sit down to the marriage-feast (303–304), while the Parcae, still pursuing their endless task of spinning the thread of fate (305–322), sing the prophetic marriage-song (323–381).

267. Thessala pubes: cf. v. 32 tota Thessalia.

268. sanctis: cf. 36. 3 n.

269. hic: temporal, as in 68. 63.

270. horrificans: the word occurs only here in the sense of 'ruffling,' but in later writers in that of 'shudder-causing.' But cf. v. 205 horrida aequora; Acc. ap. Non. 422. 33 mare cum horret fluctibus; Hor. Epod. 2. 6 horret iratum mare.

271. uagi solis, the journeying sun, in distinction from the fixed heavenly lights; cf. 61. 117 n.; Tib. IV. 1. 76 uagi pascua solis; Hor. Sat. I. 8. 21 uaga luna.

273. leuiter sonant plangore: cf. Sen. Ag. 717 f. licet alcyones Cecya suum fluctu leuiter plangente sonent. — cachinni: genitive singular; for the figure cf. Aesch. Prom. 89 ποντίων τε κυμάτων ἀνήριθμον γέλασμα.

274. magis magis: cf. 38. 3 n.

275. purpurea luce: i.e. the rosy light of dawn, reflecting which the more distant surface of the sea (undae procul nantes) loses in the gleam its own color.

277. ad se, to his own home; cf. Plaut. Mil. 121 in aedis med ad se adduxit domum; and often. — uago pede: corroborating passim, with reference to the diverse directions in which the homes lay, and not with the implication of 63. 86.

279. Chiron: the famous centaur, a near neighbor and friend of Peleus, and later the trainer of Achilles. — siluestria dona: but according to Homer one gift of Chiron to Peleus was more warlike; cf. Il. XVI. 143 Πηλιάδα μελίην τὴν πατρὶ φίλῳ πόρε Χείρων Πηλίου ἐκ κορυφῆς, φόνον ἔμμεναι ἡρώεσσιν.

280. quoscumque: continued by the simple quos in the two fol-

Mortibus ora creat, quos propter fluminis undas
Aura parit flores tepidi fecunda Fauoni,
Hos indistinctis plexos tulit ipse corollis,
Quo permulsa domus iucundo risit odore.
Confestim Penios adest, uiridantia Tempe,
Tempe quae siluae cingunt super impendentes,
Naiasin linquens Doris celebranda choreis, —
Non uacuus: namque ille tulit radicitus altas

lowing clauses, in the latter of which occurs the noun flores, which the relatives modify. Chiron has gathered the wealth of blossoms from plain, mountain, and riverside to deck the interior of the house, while Peneus (v. 285) brings masses of foliage to adorn the approaches to it.

281. ora: i.e. the region; cf. Cic. N. D. II. 164 quacumque in ora ac parte terrarum; Mark 5. 17 to depart out of their coasts.

282. aura parit: cf. v. 90; 62. 41 n.

283. indistinctis: the great number of the flowers precluded their artistic assortment. — plexos corollis: flowers were usually woven into long cords for decorative use at banquets, and were sold among the Romans in that form; cf. the frescoes from Pompeii representing Amoretti in the business of preparing such cords.

284. permulsa: often used of the delightful effect of pleasing sounds, but not often of odors; cf., however, Stat. Silu. I. 3. 11 permulsit crocis blandumque reliquit odorem. — risit odore: cf. Hom. Hymn. Cer. 13 κηώδει δ' ὁδμῇ πᾶς οὐρανὸς εὐρὺς ὕπερθεν γαῖά τε πᾶσ' ἐγέλασσε καὶ ἁλμυρὸν οἶδμα θαλάσσης.

286. Tempe, etc.: cf. the description of the famous vale in Ov. Met. I. 568 ff.; Plin. N. H. IV. 8. 31; Anth. Lat. 315. 3 Mey. frondosis Tempe cinguntur Thessala siluis.

287. Naiasin: i.e. the nymphs of the vale of Tempe; cf. Cul. 18 Pierii laticis decus, ite, sorores Naides; 115 ff. hic etiam uiridi ludentes Panes in herba et Satyri Dryadesque choros egere puellae Naiadum coetu. This form of the Greek dative plural apparently occurs here first in extant Latin; but cf. citations from Varro in Charis. I. 15, p. 38 schemasin, and Non. p. 374 ethesin; Prop. I. 20. 12 Adryasin, 32 Hamadryasin, 34 Thyniasin; Ov. Her. 13. 137 Troasin; Art. Am. III. 672 Lemniasin, etc. — linquens (= relinquens, as often in Catullus): the nymphs who dance with and in honor of the river-god are this day left to dance alone. — Doris: see Crit. App.

288. uacuus, empty-handed; the word is rare in this meaning; but cf. Juv. 10. 22 cantabit uacuus coram latrone uiator; Vulg. Exod. 23. 15 non apparebis in conspectu meo uacuus; Hom. Il. II. 298 κενεὸν νέεσθαι. — ille: in contrast with Chiron. — radicitus, roots and all; cf. the figurative meaning in Plaut. Most. 1092 omnia malefacta uostra repperi radicitus; but in v. 108 the meaning is the more usual one, 'from the roots.'

Fagos ac recto proceras stipite laurus,
Non sine nutanti platano lentaque sorore
Flammati Phaethontis et aeria cupressu.
Haec circum sedes late contexta locauit,
Vestibulum ut molli uelatum fronde uireret.
Post hunc consequitur sollerti corde Prometheus
Extenuata gerens ueteris uestigia poenae
Quam quondam silici restrictus membra catena
Persoluit pendens e uerticibus praeruptis.
Inde pater diuum sancta cum coniuge natisque
Aduenit, caelo te solum, Phoebe, relinquens
Vnigenamque simul cultricem montibus Idri :
Pelea nam tecum pariter soror adspernata est
Nec Thetidis taedas uoluit celebrare iugalis.

289. fagos, etc.: the wooded banks of the Peneus (v. 286) made trees his most natural gift.

290. sorore flammati Phaethontis: i.e. the poplar. On the transformation of the Heliades into poplar-trees see Ov. Met. II. 340 ff.; Verg. Aen. X. 189 ff. namque ferunt luctu Cycnum Phaethontis amati, populeas inter frondes umbramque sororum dum canit, etc.; Cul. 127 ff.

294. sollerti corde: cf. Aesch. Prom. 506 πᾶσαι τέχναι βροτοῖσιν ἐκ Προμηθέως. — Prometheus: according to the accounts of Hyginus (Astr. II. 15) and Servius (on Verg. Ecl. 6. 42), Prometheus warned Zeus of the prophecy concerning the son of Thetis (cf. v. 21 n.), and was therefore released from his confinement on Mt. Caucasus. So Prometheus is here a chief guest, as the promoter of the marriage.

295. extenuata uestigia, the fading scars, not the bit of rock set in a ring, mentioned by Servius (l.c.) and Pliny (N. H. XXXVII. 2), which Zeus forced Prometheus to wear as a reminder of his punishment.

296. silici: dative modifying restrictus.

298. sancta: cf. 36. 3 n. With the hypermeter cf. 34. 22; 115. 5.

299. caelo: ablative of place.

300. unigenam: here twin-sister; but cf. 66. 53. — montibus: dative modifying cultricem; cf. 66. 58 Canopiis incola litoribus; and with the idea, 34. 9 ff. n. — Idri: if the reading be correct, the name is perhaps that of the district in Caria called Idrias by Herodotus and Stephen of Byzantium, where Artemis was worshipped as Hecate.

301. Pelea adspernata: no story accounting for this disdain is known, and Homer (Il. XXIV. 62) expressly speaks of the presence of all the gods at the wedding, and of a marriage-song sung by Phoebus (cf. also Aesch. ap. Plat. Rep. II. 383).

Qui postquam niueis flexerunt sedibus artus,
Large multiplici constructae sunt dape mensae,
Cum interea infirmo quatientes corpora motu
Veridicos Parcae coeperunt edere cantus.
His corpus tremulum complectens undique uestis
Candida purpurea talos incinxerat ora,
At roseae niueo residebant uertice uittae,
Aeternumque manus carpebant rite laborem.
Laeua colum molli lana retinebat amictum,
Dextera tum leuiter deducens fila supinis
Formabat digitis, tum prono in pollice torquens
Libratum tereti uersabat turbine fusum,

303. niueis: being of ivory; cf. v. 45.

305. cum interea: cf. 95. 3. — infirmo, etc.: i.e. tremulous with age; cf. v. 307; 61. 161.

306. ueridicos cantus: cf. Hor. Carm. Saec. 25 ff. uosque ueraces cecinisse, Parcae, quod semel dictum stabilis per aeuum terminus seruat.

309. roseae: the contrast between the white robe and its crimson border (v. 308) matches that between the crimson fillets and the snowy locks; cf. Prop. V. 9. 52 [sacerdos] puniceo canas stamine uincta comas. — niueo uertice: cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 13. 12 capitis niues.

310. aeternum: the Fates never cease from their task even to engage in festivities, and the course of destiny is never interrupted.

311 ff. The picture of the spinning is entirely realistic. A mass of prepared wool but loosely fastened together is attached to one end of the distaff (colus), which is held in the left hand. With the right hand the spinner draws the filaments from the mass and twists them between thumb and finger into a thread, the firmness of the twisting being assisted by attaching the end of the thread to the spindle (fusus), weighted by the turbo, which acts as a fly-wheel.

312. supinis: the hand is turned palm upward as the fingers draw the filaments from the elevated distaff, but palm downward (prono pollice) as they grasp the hanging thread near the spindle and set it twirling; cf. Tib. II. 1. 64 fusus apposito pollice uersat opus; Ov. Met. VI. 22 leui teretem uersabat pollice fusum.

314. tereti turbine: a small circular plate of heavy material with a hole through the centre somewhat smaller than the thicker part of the long, tapering fusus. Through this the smaller end of the fusus was passed as far as it would go, and the symmetrically distributed weight of the turbo thus gave additional momentum to the whirling spindle. When the thread was spun to a convenient length, its lower part was wound around the fusus, and the process continued as before.

Atque ita decerpens aequabat semper opus dens,
Laneaque aridulis haerebant morsa labellis
Quae prius in leui fuerant exstantia filo.
Ante pedes autem candentis mollia lanae
Vellera uirgati custodibant calathisci.
Haec tum clarisona uellentes uellera uoce
Talia diuino fuderunt carmine fata,
Carmine perfidiae quod post nulla arguet aetas:
'O decus eximium magnis uirtutibus augens,
Emathiae tutamen opis, clarissime nato,

315. atque ita: i.e. while the process thus described was going on; cf. v. 84 atque ita. — decerpens: while both hands were busy, the yarn was passed between the lips to strip off the outstanding fibres, or to smooth them down so that they might be included in the twist.

316. aridulis, morsa: both ἅπαξ λεγόμενα. On the diminutive of both noun and adjective in aridulis labellis see 3. 18 n.

317. fuerant exstantia (= exstiterant): this periphrastic form is not very common, and where occurring is generally with the present tense of esse, as in 63. 57 carens est.

319. custodibant: older form, chiefly poetic or colloquial, except from ire; cf. 68. 85; 84. 8.

320. haec: for hae; so Varro, Lucretius, Vergil, etc., passim. — clarisona: cf. v. 125 n. clarisonas. — uellentes uellera: i.e. beginning their spinning by drawing from the mass of wool on the distaff the filaments to form the yarn; cf. Ov. Met. XIV. 264 quae uellera motis nulla trahunt digitis nec fila sequentia ducunt. With the triple alliteration cf. v. 262.

322. aetas: cf. v. 232 n.

323–381. The marriage-song of Peleus and Thetis, arranged in twelve strophes, but without precise correspondence in the number of verses in each (cf. on this point c. 62). In theme and general treatment, and in certain details (e.g. the address in vv. 372 ff., with which cf. 61. 211 ff.), the song is a true epithalamium, such as might be sung outside the closed door of the marriage-chamber, and the conclusion of the description of the wedding with the song reinforces this impression of it. But it is represented as sung by the Fates while the other guests were feasting, and vv. 328 ff. suggest that the bride is yet to arrive. Evidently the poet is not attempting to reproduce the exact features of a marriage ceremonial, and precise interpretation from an archaeological standpoint is impossible.

323 f. Peleus boasts a glorious descent, and has made this glory greater by his own great deeds, but is to find his greatest glory in his son. — Emathiae: the name meant to the Greeks Macedonia, but with common poetic inexactness is here used of Thessaly; cf. Verg. Geor. I. 491 nec fuit indignum superis sanguine nostro Emathiam pinguescere (of the battle of Pharsalus).

325. sorores: cf. Ov. Trist. V. 3. 17 dominae fati quidquid cecinere sorores; Mart. V. 1. 3 ueridicae sorores.

326. quae fata secuntur, which the fates follow; the clause modifies subtegmina; cf. Stat. Theb. I. 213 uocem fata secuntur; Anth. Lat. 227 Baehr. consultum fata secuntur.

327. subtegmina = fila; cf. Hor. Epod. 13. 15 reditum certo subtegmine Parcae rupere.

329. Hesperus: cf. c. 62 passim nn. — adueniet coniunx: see introductory note to vv. 323–381.

330. flexanimo, heart-compelling; cf. Pac. fr. 177 R. o flexanima atque omnium regina rerum oratio; Verg. Geor. IV. 516 non ulli animum flexere hymenaei.

331. languidulos somnos: cf. Verg. Aen. XII. 908 languida quies; Tib. IV. 1. 181 languida otia.

332. substernens, etc.: cf. Ov. Am. III. 7. 7 illa quidem nostro subiecit eburnea collo bracchia. — leuia bracchia: cf. 66. 10.

334. contexit, sheltered, doubtless with the notion of privacy usually connected with the verb.

336. adest concordia: with the arrangement cf. 30. 3 n. — Peleo: with synizesis, as in v. 382 Pelei, which is, however, the regular Greek dative.

339. haud tergo, etc.: cf. Hom. Il. XIII. 289–290 οὐκ ἂν ἐν αὐχέν' ὄπισθε πέσοι βέλος οὐδ' ἐνὶ νώτῳ, ἀλλά κεν ἢ στέρνων ἢ νηδύος ἀντιάσειε.

340. cursus: the commonest epithets of Achilles in the Iliad describe him as swift of foot.

341. Cf. Pind. Nem. 3. 90 [Ἀχιλεὺς] κτείνοντ' ἐλάφους ἄνευ κυνῶν δολίων θ' ἑρκέων · ποσσὶ γὰρ κρά-

343. non illi, etc.: Achilles claims this pre-eminence for himself in Hom. Il. XVIII. 105 τοῖος ἐών, οἷος οὔ τις Ἀχαιῶν χαλκοχιτώνων, ἐν πολέμῳ.

344. campi: the vigorous emendation is supported by Stat. Ach. I. 86 cum tuus Aeacides tepido modo sanguine Teucros undabit campos; Il. Lat. 384 sanguine Dardanii manabant undique campi.

345. longinquo: of the length of the war, not of its distance from Greece.

346. periuri Pelopis: Pelops won the chariot-race, and so the hand of Hippodamia, from her father, Oenomaus, by offering half of his kingdom to the latter's charioteer, Myrtilus, if he would loosen the linch-pins of the chariot, or substitute pins of wax. Upon the success of the plot, Pelops refused to carry out his agreement, and threw Myrtilus into the sea near Geraestus in Euboea. But the dying curse of Myrtilus followed the house of Pelops thereafter. Cf. Pind. Ol. 1. 114 ff.; Apoll. Rh. I. 752; Hyg. Fab. 84. — tertius heres: i.e. Agamemnon, the succession being Pelops, Atreus, Thyestes, Agamemnon, as Homer shows in Il. II. 105 ff.

350 f. The traditional signs of grief on the part of women; cf. Hom. Il. XVIII. 30 χερσὶ δὲ πᾶσαι στήθεα πεπλήγοντο; Verg. Aen. I. 480 crinibus Iliades passis supplici ter tristes et tunsae pectora palmis; Ov. Met. XIII. 491 [Hecuba] consueta pectora plangit. Baehrens supports his emendation by citing Ov. Her. 9. 125 nec uenit incultis captarum more capillis; Stat. Theb. VI. 32 incultam ferali puluere barbam. — cano: here as elsewhere (cf. 17. 13; 61. 51; 68. 142) Catullus emphasizes the relations between parent and child, and appeals to our sympathy, by representing the former as in advanced age; cf. putrida (Hor. Epod. 8. 7 pectus et mammae putres) and infirmis. — uariabunt: of the discoloration produced by the blows, which, to mark the depth of woe, were violent, though from weak hands; observe the juxtaposition of infirmis and uariabunt; cf. Plaut. Poen. 26 ne et hic uarientur uirgis et loris domi.

353 ff. uelut, etc.: the figure is Homeric; cf. Il. XI. 67 ff. — praecerpens, clipping down (before him as he advances); the word apparently occurs only here in this meaning, though the figurative meaning in Gell. II. 30. 11 cuius rei causam, cum Aristotelis libros problematorum praecerperemus, notaui seems to point in the same direction; cf. Apoll. Rh. III. 1386 προτάμωνται ἀρούρας. — messor aristas . . . demetit: cf. Il. Lat. 886 maturasque metit robustus messor aristas.

354. sole sub ardenti: cf. Verg. Ecl. 2. 13 sole sub ardenti resonant arbusta cicadis. — flauentia arua: cf. Verg. Geor. IV. 126 qua niger umectat flauentia culta Galaesus.

357 ff. Referring to the great repulse of the Trojans at the hands of Achilles in Hom. Il. XXI.

358. passim diffunditur: of the smaller stream losing itself in the larger. — rapido: perhaps of rushing waves rather than of swift current; cf. 63. 16 rapidum salum; Hom. Il. II. 845 Ἑλλήσποντος ἀγάρροος.

359. caesis corporum aceruis: with hypallage of the adjective, as not infrequently in poetry. — angustans, etc.: cf. Hom. Il. XXI. 218 ff. πλήθει γὰρ δή μοι νεκύων ἐρατεινὰ ῥέεθρα, οὐδέ τί πῃ δύναμαι προχέειν ῥόον εἰς ἅλα δῖαν στεινόμενος νεκύεσσι, σὺ δὲ κτείνεις αἰδήλως (from the address of the Scamander to Achilles; Verg. Aen. V. 806 ff. [Achilles] milia multa daret leto, gemerentque repleti amnes, nec reperire uiam atque euoluere posset in mare se Xanthus.

360. tepēfaciet: see Intr. 86 f.

362. morti quoque reddita praeda: i.e. the power of Achilles will be shown by the fact that he continues even after death to make the Trojans his prey. Polyxena, daughter of Priam, in the course of the siege betrothed on pretence of peace to Achilles, was at the capture of the city sacrificed to his manes by Pyrrhus; cf. Ov. Met. XIII. 439 ff.; Serv. on Verg. Aen. III. 321; Hyg. Fab. 110; Eurip. Hec. 37 ff.; 521 ff.

363. teres, round, i.e. circular;

Currite ducentes subtegmina, currite, fusi.
Non illam nutrix orienti luce reuisens

cf. v. 314. — bustum: Servius and Hyginus apparently think of the tomb of Achilles as on the Sigean shore; Ovid, following Euripides, has in mind a cenotaph on the shore of Thrace.

366. copiam: with a dependent infinitive, soluere; cf. Sall. Cat. 17. 6 molliter uiuere copia; Verg. Aen. IX. 483 te adfari data copia.

367. Neptunia: i.e. built by Neptune. — soluere uincla: cf. Hom. Il. XVI. 100 ὄφρ' οἷοι Τροίης ἱερὰ κρήδεμνα λύωμεν; similarly according to Polybius (XVII. 11. 5) the fortresses of Chalcis, Corinth, and Demetrias were called πέδαι Ἑλληνικαί.

368. madĕfient: cf. v. 360 n. tepefaciet.

369. quae: referring to the adjective Polyxenia (= Polyxenae); cf. Liv. II. 53. 1 Veiens bellum exortum, quibus Sabini arma coniunxerunt. — ancipiti, two-edged; probably with reference to the bipennis, used both as a weapon of warfare and as a sacrificial axe; cf. Lucil. 751 Lachm. uecte atque ancipiti ferro effringam cardines.

370. truncum, headless. — summisso poplite: cf. Ov. Met. XIII. 477 super terram defecto poplite labens (of Polyxena).

372. animi amores: with this use of an apparently otiose genitive cf. 2. 10 animi curas; 68. 26 delicias animi; 102. 2 fides animi. On the plural see v. 27 n.

374. iam dudum, forthwith, modifying dedatur; the emphasis rests on iam, as the speaker looks from a distant beginning; cf. Verg. Geor. I. 213 papauer tempus humo tegere et iam dudum incumbere aratris; Aen. II. 103 iam dudum sumite poenas. But in Plautus the phrase generally means 'a long time ago,' the emphasis usually resting upon dudum, as the speaker looks backward from the present; though the play on Amphitruo's misunderstanding of the term as a synonym for modo (Amph. 692) points toward the beginning of the use here fairly inaugurated by Catullus.

376 f. The belief indicated by these verses was widespread in antiquity; cf. Nem. Ecl. 2. 10 ff. — nutrix: the nurse continued to be the girl's confidential attendant throughout her married life, as was often the case in the times of slavery in the southern part of the United States. — orienti luce, with the morning light; cf. Lucr. V. 664 orienti lumine; Ov. Fast. IV. 832 oriens dies.

380. Cf. 66. 15–16.

382–408. Epilogue, commenting upon the withdrawal of divine presence from the ceremonies of men after the heroic age, on account of the impiety of the race.

382. Pelei: with synizesis, as in v. 336 Peleo, which is, however, the pure Latin dative; but cf. 66. 94 hydrochoi (dat.), and v. 120 Thesei, v. 229 Erechthei (gen.).

384. Ellis quotes Hes. frag. 218 ξυναὶ γὰρ τότε δαῖτες ἔσαν ξυνοὶ δὲ θόωκοι ἀθανάτοισι θεοῖσι καταθνητοῖς τ' ἀνθρώποις. — praesentes, in bodily presence; cf. Hor. Carm. III. 5. 2 praesens diuus habebitur Augustus. — namque: cf. 66. 65 n.

385. coetu: dative, as in 66. 37.

386. caelicolae: cf. 30. 4; 68. 138.

387. templo in fulgente: modifying v. 389 conspexit, etc. Evidently the poet is thinking of the splendid temples of a later date rather than of the simple structures of heroic times. — reuisens: if the correct reading, probably used absolutely; cf. the ordinary use of reuisere with ad.

388. annua, etc.: doubtless a typical occasion only, rather than a known festival.

390. uagus: often used of the aimless, frenzied rushing to and fro of the god's followers; cf. 63. 13, 86. — Parnasi: this famous mountain of Phocis, the haunt of the gods, rose just behind Delphi.

391. effusis, etc.: cf. the description of the Bacchic rout in vv.

Cum Delphi tota certatim ex urbe ruentes
Acciperent laeti diuum fumantibus aris.

254 ff.; Ov. Fast. VI. 514 Thyiades, effusis per sua colla comis.

392. Delphi: i.e. the inhabitants of the city; cf. Just. XXIV. 7. 8 urbem suam Delphi aucti uiribus sociorum permuniuere, and Grk. Δελφοί often. The city was early connected with the worship of Bacchus as of Apollo; cf. Aesch. Eum. 25 ἐξ οὗτε [i.e. Δελφῶν] Βάκχαις ἐστρατήγησεν θεὸς, λαγὼ δίκην Πενθεῖ καταῤῥάψας μόρον; Paus. 394. Mauors: antique and poetic form for Mars.

395. rapidi Tritonis hera: i.e. Athena, called Τριτογένεια by Homer (Il. VIII. 39, etc.), probably from the river Triton in Boeotia (Strab. IX. 407; Paus. IX. 33. 7), rather than from the lake, or river, Triton in Libya (Herod. IV. 178; Plin. N. H. V. 28). — Rhamnusia uirgo: i.e. Nemesis, so called from her famous temple at Rhamnus in Attica; cf. 66. 71; 68. 77; Ov. Met. III. 406 adsensit precibus Rhamnusia iustis; Stat. Silu. III. 5. 5 audiat infesto licet hoc Rhamnusia uultu. Ares and Athena often encourage men to battle in the Iliad, but this function on the part of Nemesis is nowhere else mentioned. Perhaps it is from an unknown Alexandrian source, or else the conjecture of Baehrens is right (Amarunsia uirgo = Artemis of Amarynthus in Euboea; cf. Strabo. X. 448; Paus. I. 31. 4).

397 ff. With this description of the iron age cf. Hes. Op. 182 ff.; Ov. Met. I. 127 ff.; Verg. Geor. II. sub fin.

398. iustitiam, etc.: cf. Ov. Fast. I. 249 nondum iustitiam facinus mortale fugarat.

399. perfudere, etc.: cf. Lucr. III. 72 crudeles gaudent in tristi funere fratris; Verg. Geor. II. 510 gaudent perfusi sanguine fratrum.

401 f. genitor, etc.: was the optimate Catullus thinking of Catiline in his own day (cf. Sall. Cat. 15. 2), or of the story of Hippolytus (to which, however, v. 402 hardly applies)? Cf., however, v. 402 n.

402. innuptae, virgin; the idea apparently is that the father conceives a passion for his son's promised bride, has him put out of the

Ignaro mater substernens se impia nato
Impia non uerita est diuos scelerare parentes,
Omnia fanda nefanda malo permixta furore
Iustificam nobis mentem auertere deorum.
Quare nec talis dignantur uisere coetus
Nec se contingi patiuntur lumine claro.

way upon the eve of the marriage, and proceeds to contract a practically incestuous union with her himself, uniting two unnatural crimes. And as the father sins with the daughter, so (v. 403) the mother with the son. — nouercae: said by a sort of anticipation, to emphasize the unnaturalness of the position of the former wife and sister, now become the stepmother.

403. ignaro, etc.: again, is the story from the poet's own day, or only that of Jocasta (though impia hardly applies to the action of the innocent mother, equally ignorant with her son)?

404. diuos parentes: i.e. the deified ancestors of the family, who would be especially outraged by such impiety in their descendants; cf. Grk. θεοὶ πατρῷοι; Leg. Reg. diuis parentum sacer esto; C. I. L. I. 1241 deis inferum parentum sacrum.

405. fanda nefanda: cf. similar phrases in Ter. Ad. 990 iusta iniusta; Hor. Ep. I. 7. 72 dicenda tacenda; Verg. Aen. XII. 811 digna indigna; but without asyndeton in Verg. Aen. I. 543 fandi atque nefandi; Ov. Art. Am. I. 739 mixtum fas omne nefasque.

406. iustificam, justly-dealing; ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

408. lumine claro: i.e. the open light of day, as distinct from the cloud in which the gods commonly hide themselves.

65. An address to Ortalus accompanying a translation from Callimachus (which is quite possibly c. 66), and explaining that it is sent instead of an original poem because the death of the poet's brother has made all poetic composition impossible for him; cf. in general c. 68ª, and with the lament 68. 20 ff. and 92 ff. Date of composition, about 59 B.C. (see Intr. 22). Beginning with c. 65, all the remaining poems of the liber Catulli are in the elegiac metre, which is used in none of the previous poems. See Intr. 48.

1. defectum: the word apparently occurs here first in this sense, and even later is more common either in the absolute use or with an ablative of specification than with an ablative of means; cf. Ov. Ex Pont. III. 4. 37 his [incitamentis] ego defectus; Phaedr. I. 21. 3 defectus annis et desertus uiribus.

2. doctis uirginibus: i.e. the Muses; cf. Ov. Art. Am. III. 411 doctis Musis; Met. V. 255 doctas sorores. — Ortale: Q. Hortensius Ortalus (see Intr. 65).

Nec potis est dulcis Musarum expromere fetus
Mens animi: tantis fluctuat ipsa malis, —
Namque mei nuper Lethaeo gurgite fratris
Pallidulum manans adluit unda pedem,
Troia Rhoeteo quem subter litore tellus
Ereptum nostris obterit ex oculis.
. . . . . .
Nunquam ego te uita frater amabilior
Adspiciam posthac: at certe semper amabo,
Semper maesta tua carmina morte canam,
Qualia sub densis ramorum concinit umbris
Daulias absumpti fata gemens Ityli, —

3. Musarum fetus: cf. Cic. Tusc. V. 24. 68 animi fetus.

4. mens animi: cf. Plaut. Epid. 530 pauor territat mentem animi; Lucr. IV. 755 cum somnus membra profudit mens animi uigilat. — fluctuat malis: for the same figure carried a little further see 64. 62 curarum fluctuat undis; 68. 3, 13.

5. Lethaeo gurgite: the river of forgetfulness is first mentioned by Plato Rep. 621 C. Riese cites the (earlier) phrase of Simonides 171 Λήθης δόμοι, where the reference, however, is only to the lower world in general (cf. Hor. Carm. IV. 7. 27 Lethaea uincula). Vergil (Aen. VI. 705) describes the river as far within the lower world, Lethaeumque domos placidas qui praenatat amnem; but in Culex 215 Lethaeas transnare per undas is clearly meant, as here, the boundary-stream of Orcus, from beyond which there is no return (elsewhere the Styx); cf. Prop. V. 7. 91; Tib. III. 3. 10 nudus Lethaea cogerer ire rate; III. 5. 24 cognoscere Lethaeam ratem.

6. pallidulum: the diminutive of affection; the paleness is that of death. — adluit unda pedem: as a general expression for crossing a river, although it strictly refers only to fording, while Lethe was crossed by boat; cf. Prop. I. 20. 8 siue Aniena tuos tinxerit unda pedes.

7. subter: the idea is closely connected with that of v. 8 obterit, crushes, the utterance of the brotherly love that shudders at the grave; contrast the familiar sit tibi terra leuis.

10 ff. te, etc.: the fresh grief of the writer carries him away from his theme into an apostrophe to his dead brother. — uita amabilior: cf. 64. 215 n.

14. Daulias: so the transformed Philomela (Ov. Met. VI. 424 ff.) was called, according to Thuc. II. 29, from Daulis, the town of Phocis, where Tereus lived; Homer, however (Od. XIX. 518 ff.), represents Itylus as the only son of Zethus, king of Thebes, by Aedon, daughter of Pandareus, king of Crete, and slain unwittingly by his own mother, who was jealous of the motherhood of Niobe, and supposed herself to be killing Niobe's eldest son.

Sed tamen in tantis maeroribus, Ortale, mitto
Haec expressa tibi carmina Battiadae,
Ne tua dicta uagis nequiquam credita uentis
Effluxisse meo forte putes animo,
Vt missum sponsi furtiuo munere malum
Procurrit casto uirginis e gremio,
Quod miserae oblitae molli sub ueste locatum,
Dum aduentu matris prosilit, excutitur;
Atque illud prono praeceps agitur decursu,
Huic manat tristi conscius ore rubor.

15. sed tamen: after the long parenthesis the poet returns to his theme, sed, as often, being resumptive.

16. haec: probably c. 66 is referred to. — expressa, translated; cf. Ter. Ad. 11 uerbum de uerbo expressum extulit. — Battiadae: Callimachus, the famous Alexandrian scholar and poet at the court of Ptolemy Philadelphus, was the son of a certain Battus of Cyrene, and claimed descent from the founder of that city; cf. 7. 4, 6 n.; 116. 2.

17. credita uentis: with the figure cf. 30. 10 n.

19. ut, etc.: the comparison is of the irrevocable swiftness with which the apple falls and the reminders vanish. — missum munere: cf. 101. 8 tradita munere. — sponsi: the secrecy of the gift, and the confusion of the maiden at its discovery, show that a secret lover is meant. — malum: apples were proverbially the gifts of lovers; cf. the Callimachean story of Cydippe; Theocr. 3. 10, et al.; Verg. Ecl. 3. 71 aurea mala decem misi; 64 malo me Galatea petit; Prop. I. 3. 24 nunc furtiua cauis poma dabam manibus; Petron. Frag. 33. 1 Büch. aurea mala mihi, dulcis mea Marcia mittis. Cf. also the story of Atalanta, and the explanation of the aureolum malum (2. 12) by the quotations from Vergil and Petronius.

20. procurrit, etc.: Festus (p. 165) refers to a proverb based on such accidents. — casto: the girl is not of loose character, but a carefully trained daughter who has not learned how not to blush. — gremio: the girdle around the body just below the breasts made the upper part of the robe a convenient, if not safe, receptacle for small objects.

21. miserae oblitae: with this use of the adjective instead of the adverb misere with another adjective cf. 64. 57. — molli carries still further the general impression of gentle innocence conveyed by casto, and thus emphasizes the painful blush of her embarrassment.

22. prosilit: the girl rises respectfully as her mother enters, but hastily, because she is surprised while dreaming of her lover, and is at first oblivious of other matters; thus her sudden movement dislodges the apple.

23. The spondaic verse well expresses the girl's dismay, which makes even the swift fall of the apple seem to occupy a life-time.

24. huic: contrasted with v. 23

66.

Omnia qui magni dispexit lumina mundi,
Qui stellarum ortus comperit atque obitus,
Flammeus ut rapidi solis nitor obscuretur,
Vt cedant certis sidera temporibus,
Vt Triuiam furtim sub Latmia saxa relegans illud; the eye turns from the tell-tale apple to the tell-tale face of the maiden.

66. This translation of the Βερενίκης Πλόκαμος of Callimachus, a few fragments of which are extant, is quite possibly the poem sent to Hortensius with c. 65. It is complex and artificial, and, indeed, if the translation was made when Catullus was burdened with grief for the loss of his brother, it is not strange that his native genius shows so little through it. Whether the obscurity of some passages in it is due to lack of care on the part of the translator, or to an excessive fidelity to the original, cannot be determined; but the general characteristics of Alexandrian poetry would lead us to refer the fault to Callimachus himself. The theme, a compound of court tradition and of astronomical knowledge, is as follows: Berenice, daughter of Magas, king of Cyrene, and wife of her cousin Ptolemy Euergetes (reigned 247–222 B.C.), king of Egypt, had for her husband's safety vowed to the gods a lock of her hair, when, shortly after his accession to the throne and marriage, the king was setting out on an expedition against Syria. Upon his safe return the vow was paid, and the tress deposited in the temple of the deified Arsinoe on the promontory of Zephyrion. Next morning, however, it had disappeared; but the anger of the king was appeased by the court astronomer, Conon, who said that he had descried it among the stars, where it must have been placed by divine agency. To verify his words Conon pointed out the hitherto undistinguished minor constellation which is now known as Coma Berenices. Date, about 59 B.C. (cf. introductory note to c. 65).

1. omnia qui: the antecedent clause begins in v. 7. — dispexit, descried; as distinguishing in the darkness, or amid the multitude of other stars. — mundi, the firmament; as in 64. 206; but with a different meaning in 47. 2.

3. rapidi, scorching, as the words flammeus nitor clearly indicate; cf. Verg. Geor. I. 92 rapidi potentia solis acrior; IV. 425 rapidus torrens sitientis Sirius Indos. — obscuretur: sc. in an eclipse; cf. Plin. N. H. II. 47 nullum aliud sidus eodem modo obscuretur.

4. ut cedant, etc.: in v. 2 the reference is to the apparent daily motion of the stars, due to the revolution of the earth on its axis; in v. 4, to their yearly motion with reference to the apparent position of the sun, due to the revolution of the earth about the sun.

5. Triuiam: cf. 34. 15 n. — Latmia saxa: Selene was wont to meet secretly upon Mt. Latmus in Caria the beautiful shepherd Endymion, with whom she had fallen in love (cf. Paus. V. 1); sub saxa = in antrum.

Dulcis amor gyro deuocet aerio,
Idem me ille Conon caelesti in lumine uidit
E Bereniceo uertice caesariem
Fulgentem clare, quam cunctis illa deorum
Leuia protendens bracchia pollicita est,
Qua rex tempestate nouo auctus hymenaeo
Vastatum finis iuerat Assyrios,
Dulcia nocturnae portans uestigia rixae
Quam de uirgineis gesserat exuuiis.
Estne nouis nuptis odio Venus, atque parentum
Frustrantur falsis gaudia lacrimulis
Vbertim thalami quas intra limina fundunt?
Non, ita me diui, uera gemunt, iuerint.
Id mea me multis docuit regina querelis
Inuisente nouo proelia torua uiro.

6. aerio: so Horace of the heavens, Carm. I. 28. 5 aerias temptasse domos.

7. me: the poem is a monologue spoken by the lock (v. 51) of Berenice's hair itself. — ille: i.e. the person referred to in v. 1 ff., me ille Conon corresponding to omnia qui. — Conon: the astronomer-royal of Ptolemy, a native of Samos, and friend of Archimedes. He wrote some astronomical treatises, which, however, have not been preserved; cf. Verg. Ecl. 3. 40 ff. Conon et quis fuit alter descripsit radio totum qui gentibus orbem, tempora quae messor, quae curuus arator haberet?

7–10. Cf. Callim. Frag. 34 ἥ με Κόνων ἔβλεψεν ἐν ἤερι τὸν Βερενίκης βόστρυχον, ὃν κείνη πᾶσιν ἔθηκε θεοῖς.

9. cunctis deorum: cf. v. 33 cunctis diuis, and Call. l.c.

10. leuia bracchia: cf. 64. 332. — protendens: standing in the attitude of prayer, with arms outstretched and lifted, and palms turned upward.

11. auctus hymenaeo: cf. 64. 25 taedis felicibus aucte. On the hiatus nouo auctus in thesis and the lengthening of the short syllable before hymenaeo see Intr. 86 d, g.

12. Assyrios: for Syrios; cf. 68. 144; Verg. Geor. II. 465; Hor. Carm. II. 11. 16, etc. The war was to avenge the murder of Berenice, sister of Ptolemy Euergetes and widow of Antiochus Theos, by her step-son Seleucus Callinicus, who had in 246 B.C. succeeded his father on the throne of Syria.

15. parentum gaudia: i.e. in their hope of descendants; cf. 64. 379 f.

18. ita me diui iuerint: cf. 61. 196; 97. 1; and with the hyperbaton, 44. 9. With the syncopation of the consonant u in the verb cf. Enn. Ann. 339 Vahl. (ap. Cic. De Sen. init.) adiuero.

20. inuisente: apparently unique

At tu non orbum luxti deserta cubile,
Sed fratris cari flebile discidium?
Quam penitus maestas exedit cura medullas!
Vt tibi tunc toto pectore sollicitae
Sensibus ereptis mens excidit! at te ego certe
Cognoram a parua uirgine magnanimam.
Anne bonum oblita es facinus, quo regium adepta es
Coniugium, quod non fortior ausit alis?
Sed tum maesta uirum mittens quae uerba locuta es!
Iuppiter, ut tristi lumina saepe manu!

in the sense of active participation in an affair.

21. at: introducing a possible protest of Berenice against the charge of inconsistency. — luxti: for luxisti; see 14. 14 n. misti.

22. fratris: Berenice was the first cousin of Ptolemy (III.) Euergetes, both being grandchildren on the father's side of Ptolemy I. But frater may be used here, like the Gr. ἀδελφός, of this relationship (cf. 111. 4 n.); or, more likely, it represents the way in which Ptolemy and Berenice were usually spoken of; for the custom in the Egyptian royal house of marriage between brother and sister is well known; cf. the decree of Canopus l. 7 βασιλεὺς Πτολεμαῖος . . . καὶ βασίλισσα Βερενίκη ἡ ἀδελφὴ αὐτοῦ καὶ γυνὴ θεοὶ εὐεργέται.

23. quam, etc.: beginning the triumphant rejoinder to the protest in vv. 21 and 22; sisters show no such extremity of grief over separation from brothers. — penitus exedit medullas: cf. 35. 15 n.; Verg. Aen. IV. 66 est mollis flamma medullas.

25. sensibus ereptis: cf. 51. 5 misere quod omnis eripit sensus mihi.

27 f. Hyginus (Poet. Astr. II. 24), evidently referring to this passage, says that Berenice (whom he calls the daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus) once saved her father's life by mounting a horse and rallying his wavering troops. But this would not have won her husband. The reference is doubtless to the story told by Justin (XXVI. 3) that Berenice's mother was opposed to her betrothal to Ptolemy, and desired to marry her rather to Demetrius, brother of Antigonus, king of Macedonia. Demetrius, however, formed a criminal connection with the mother, and was assassinated by a band of conspirators, at whose head stood Berenice, who thereby was enabled to fulfil her former engagement.

28. coniugium = maritum; cf. 68. 107; Tac. Ann. II. 13. 3 matrimonia ac pecunias hostium praedae destinare. — quod . . . alis: i.e. a deed which none other would dare, and prove himself thereby the braver. Ellis compares Hor. Carm. III. 23. 18 non sumptuosa blandior hostia molliuit auersos Penates. — alis: cf. 29. 15 n. alid.

29. tum: directing the thought once more to the later period and greater fear. — mittens: cf. 96. 4 n. missas.

30. Iuppiter: cf. 1. 7 n. —

Quis te mutauit tantus deus? an quod amantes
Non longe a caro corpore abesse uolunt?
Atque ibi me cunctis pro dulci coniuge diuis
Non sine taurino sanguine pollicita es,
Si reditum tetulisset. Is haud in tempore longo
Captam Asiam Aegypti finibus addiderat.
Quis ego pro factis caelesti reddita coetu
Pristina uota nouo munere dissoluo.
Inuita, o regina, tuo de uertice cessi,
Inuita: adiuro teque tuumque caput:
Digna ferat quod si quis inaniter adiurarit:
Sed qui se ferro postulet esse parem?

tristi: cf. v. 21 luxti; 14. 14 n. misti. The action was, of course, that of dashing the tears away.

31. an, etc.: i.e. (utrum deus te mutauit) an eo factum est quod, etc.

33. cunctis diuis: but cf. v. 9 cunctis deorum.

34. taurino sanguine: the sacrifices of cattle may have been in acknowledgment of past favors, while the new vow was made for the future; or they may have been part of the vow to be paid in the future; cf. in either case the uotorum nuncupatio of the Roman consuls at their entry upon office, and Hannibal's offering (Liv. XXI. 21. 9).

35. tetulisset: see 34. 8 n.

36. Asiam: Ptolemy ravaged Asia Minor and the eastern districts, at least as far as the Euphrates; cf. Inscr. of Adule; Just. XXVII. 3.

37. caelesti reddita coetu: the lock speaks from its final resting-place among the stars, passing over the brief interval of deposit in the temple of Zephyritis. On the form coetu see 34. 8 n.

38. pristina, of the past. — nouo, of the present; the lock has but lately reached its present seat, and is explaining to its mistress the cause of its mysterious disappearance. — dissoluo: on the diaeresis see Intr. 86 b.

39. inuita, etc.: cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 460 inuitus, regina, tuo de litore cessi.

40. adiuro, etc.: cf. Callim. Frag. 35[b] σήν τε καρὴν ὤμοσα σόν τε βίον; oaths are sworn by that which is dearest, especially, then, by the life or head of the person himself or of his nearest friend. So with especial fitness the lock swears by the head from which it was severed; cf. Verg. Aen. IV. 492 testor te, germana, tuumque dulce caput; IX. 300 per caput hoc iuro per quod pater ante solebat; Ov. Trist. V. 4. 45 per caput ipse suum solitus iurare tuumque; Plin. Ep. II. 20. 6 (of the perjury of Regulus by the head of his son). In direct imitation of Callimachus (l. c.) Catullus uses the accusative with adiuro in this sense, a construction which appears next in the Augustan age; cf. Verg. Aen. XII. 816 adiuro Stygii caput implacabile fontis.

Ille quoque euersus mons est quem maximum in oris
Progenies Thiae clara superuehitur,
Cum Medi peperere nouum mare, cumque iuuentus
Per medium classi barbara nauit Athon.
Quid facient crines, cum ferro talia cedant?
Iuppiter, ut Chalybon omne genus pereat,
Et qui principio sub terra quaerere uenas
Institit ac ferri fingere duritiem!
Abiunctae paulo ante comae mea fata sorores
Lugebant, cum se Memnonis Aethiopis
Vnigena impellens nutantibus aera pennis
Obtulit Arsinoes † elocridicos ales equus,

43. maximum: cf. Strab. 331 fr. 33 ὑψηλότατον (of Mt. Athos). — in oris: not restrictive of maximum, but modifying quem directly (= in litore stantem), 'that most mighty promontory-mountain.'

44. progenies Thiae: i.e. the sun; Hesiod (Theog. 371) says that Thia bore Helios and Selene to Hyperion; cf. Pind. Isth. 4. 1.

45 f. The cutting by Xerxes of a ship-canal through the isthmus of Athos is described in Herod. VII. 24.

47. quid facient . . . cum . . . cedant: cf. the inverse construction of moods in Verg. Ecl. 3. 16 quid domini faciant, audent cum talia fures?

48. Chalybon, etc.: cf. Callim. Frag. 35[e] Χαλύβων ὡς ἀπόλοιτο γένος, γειόθεν ἀντέλλοντα κακὸν φυτὸν οἵ μιν ἔφηναν; Hor. Sat. II. 1. 42 o pater et rex Iuppiter, ut pereat positum robigine telum. The Chalybes here referred to are undoubtedly not those of Spain, but the tribe of iron-workers in Pontus; cf. Xen. Anab. V. 5. 1 ἀφικνοῦνται εἰς Χάλυβας. οὗτοι ὀλίγοι τε ἦσαν καὶ ὁ βίος ἦν τοῖς πλείστοις αὐτῶν ἀπὸ σιδηρείας.

50. fingere: the verb, usually applied to easily worked substances (such as wax and clay), is strongly contrasted with duritiem; the Chalybes worked against nature in learning to dig iron from the concealing earth, and to mould its hardness so wonderfully into form.

51. With this verse begins a passage of peculiar and probably unsurmountable difficulty. — abiunctae (sc. a me), bereaved; modifying comae. The lock had been severed but a short time from its sister-locks on the head of Berenice, and their sorrow was still fresh (lugebant), when it was snatched from the temple and carried to heaven.

53. unigena: born of the same parents, the brother (cf. 64. 300); i.e. Emathion (cf. Apollod. III. 12. 4 Τιθωνὸν μὲν οὖν Ἠὼς ἁρπάσασα δι' ἔρωτα εἰς Αἰθιοπίαν κομίζει, κἀκεῖ συνελθοῦσα γεννᾷ παῖδας Ἡμαθίωνα καὶ Μέμνονα), who was apparently identified mythically with the ostrich (cf. v. 54) as was Memnon himself with a certain species of black hawk (cf. Ov. Met. XIII. 600 ff.).

54. Arsinoes: Arsinoe was the sister-wife of Ptolemy Philadelphus,

Isque per aetherias me tollens auolat umbras
Et Veneris casto conlocat in gremio.
Ipsa suum Zephyritis eo famulum legarat,
Graia Canopiis incola litoribus,
† Hi dii uen ibi uario ne solum in lumine caeli
Ex Ariadneis aurea temporibus
Fixa corona foret, sed nos quoque fulgeremus
Deuotae flaui uerticis exuuiae,
Vuidulam a fletu cedentem ad templa deum me
Sidus in antiquis diua nouum posuit:
Virginis et saeui contingens namque Leonis and was worshiped under the attributes of Aphrodite in a temple erected to her honor on the promontory of Zephyrion, between Alexandria and Canopus, whence she was called Zephyritis. — No satisfactory emendation of elocridicos has yet been proposed. — ales equus: according to Pausanias Arsinoe was represented riding upon an ostrich; IX. 31. 1 τὴν δὲ Ἀρσινόην στρουθὸς φέρει χαλκῆ τῶν ἀπτήνων.

55. aetherias umbras: it was in the night that the lock disappeared. With aetherias in the sense of aerias cf. Lucr. IV. 182 clamor in aetheriis dispersus nubibus austri; Ov. Fast. I. 682 aetheria spargite semen aqua. — auolat: though the ostrich does not fly, yet his exceedingly swift running when aided by his wings was enough like flight to satisfy the poet.

56. Veneris: i.e. Arsinoes; cf. v. 54 n. Arsinoes.

57. famulum: as the ostrich is called the famulus of Arsinoe, so the hind is the famula of Diana in Silius Italicus (XIII. 124 numen erat iam cerua loci, famulamque Dianae credebant), and the lion the famulus of Cybele in Manilius (IV. 760 Idaeae matris famulus).

58. Graia: as the daughter of Ptolemy I., Arsinoe was of Greek descent. — Canopiis: i.e. Egyptian; cf. Luc. Phar. X. 64 imbelli Canopo; Verg. Geor. IV. 287 Pellaei gens fortunata Canopi. — incola litoribus: cf. 64. 300 cultricem montibus.

59. See Crit. App.

61. corona: the wedding-wreath of Ariadne, given by Dionysus upon her marriage with him, was placed among the stars; cf. Ov. Met. VIII. 177 ff. utque perenni sidere clara foret, sumptam de fronte [Ariadnae] coronam immisit caelo; Germ. Phaen. 71 clara Ariadnaeo sacrata e crine corona. — nos: perhaps plural under the influence of exuuiae (v. 62).

62. flaui: so of Ariadne's hair in 64. 63 flauo uertice. — exuuiae: since the lock had yielded only to force; cf. v. 39 ff.

63. uuidulam a fletu: the lock does not cease to emphasize its own unwillingness to leave its mistress; the words refer to v. 51 f.

65. uirginis: according to the older account she was Astraea, the daughter of the Titan Astraeus, who fought against the gods. She, however, descended to earth and dwelt among men, and was the last of the immortals to leave earth when the brazen age came on; cf. Hyg. Astrom. II. 25; Ov. Met. I. 149 uirgo caede madentes, ultima caelestum, terras Astraea reliquit. According to another tradition Virgo was Erigone, who hanged herself through grief at the murder of her father, Icarius, by shepherds to whom he had for the first time in their lives given wine to drink, and who supposed themselves poisoned by him; cf. Apollod. III. 14. 7; Hyg. Fab. 130; Astron. II. 4. — namque: postpositive, as in 64. 384; but nowhere else before Vergil does it stand after so many words in its clause; cf. Draeger Hist. Synt. II.² p. 162. — Leonis: according to Hyg. Astron. II. 24 the Nemean lion slain by Heracles.

66. Callisto: dative; she was the daughter of the Arcadian Lycaon, and an attendant of the huntress Artemis; but being ravished by Zeus and banished from the presence of her mistress, she was changed by Hera into a bear, and later, on being slain by her own son Arcas, was placed among the stars as the constellation Ursa Major or Helice; cf. Ov. Met. II. 401 ff.; Fast. II. 153 ff.

67. Booten: said by some to be Icarius (cf. v. 65 n.); by others, to be Arcas (v. 66 n.) or Lycaon; cf. Ov. Fast. VI. 235 f.

68. uix sero, etc.: this was a traditional characteristic of Bootes from the time of Homer (cf. Od. V. 272 ὀψὲ δύοντα Βοώτην) and is explained by Sir Geo. C. Lewis (Astron. of the Anc., p. 59 ap. Ellis) as derived from the fact that Bootes rises in a horizontal, but sets in a vertical, attitude.

69 f. sed quamquam, etc.: i.e. although I am one of the stars, and keep company with the gods; cf. Arat. 339 θεῶν ὑπὸ ποσσὶ φορεῖται; Verg. Ecl. 5. 57 sub pedibus uidet nubes et sidera Daphnis.

70. lux, etc.: i.e. at the approach of dawn I set beneath the western wave. — Tethyi (= mari): cf. 88. 5, and with the Greek dative, 64. 247.

71. Rhamnusia uirgo: Nemesis (cf. 64. 395 n.; 68. 77) might punish the arrogance that exalted in estimation things human above things divine.

73. nec: apparently the first instance of the use of nec in the sense of ne quidem. — discerpent: perhaps the only instance of the figurative use of this word in the sense of revile; cf. however carpo and concerpo.

74. quin: depending on non tegam, v. 73 being parenthetical.

Non his tam laetor rebus quam me afore semper

— euoluam: on the diaeresis see Intr. 86 b.

75 f. Observe the epanalepsis with inversion in me afore . . . afore me.

77 ff. The sense is, 'I shared, to be sure, the simple life of my mistress before her marriage; but since that time have lived a life of indulgent luxury for which my present position is not a gratifying exchange. I miss my costly ointments; therefore do you, who, like her, are chaste and happy brides, offer me that gift upon your marriage.' — quicum: feminine, as in 69. 8, but rare in this gender. — expers modifies ego and una goes with quicum.

79. optato lumine: cf. 64. 31 optatae luces; with lumine = die cf. v. 90.

80. non: instead of ne, as belonging more closely to prius than to the clause as a whole. — prius . . . quam mihi (v. 82): cf. Callim. Frag. 35[d] πρὶν ἀστέρι τῷ Βερενίκης. — unanimis: cf. 9. 4 n.; 30. 1.

82. onyx: i.e. the alabaster box in which ointment was kept; cf. Prop. III. 13. 30 cum dabitur Syrio munere plenus onyx.

83. uester: restrictive, as defined by the quae-clause. — iura: used absolutely as contrasted with illicita (i.e. adulteria).

85. ah: here expressing strong reprobation; cf. 60. 5; 64. 135. — bibat puluis: cf. Ov. Fast. III. 472 en iterum lacrimas accipe, harena, meas; Prop. V. 11. 6 nempe tuas lacrimas litora surda bibent.

suppose me happy beyond limit now, and so subject me to the same privations that I suffered before you became queen (v. 77). — non: not infrequent in poetry and post-Augustan prose instead of ne in prohibitions, in spite of Quintilian's censure; I. 5. 50 qui tamen dicat pro illo ne feceris, non feceris, in idem incidat uitium [soloecismum], quia alterum negandi est, alterum uetandi. — tuam: Hor. Carm. I. 25. 7 me tuo pereunte; Ov. Her. 10. 75 uiuimus, et non sum, Theseu, tua; Prop. I. 9. 22 et nihil iratae posse negare tuae.

94. proximus, etc.: the sense is, 'All I care for is to return to my former station; then the stars might do whatever they liked for all of me.' — Hydrochoi: dative, as from ὑδροχοεύς; cf. 64. 382 n. Pelei. The constellation, called by the Romans Aquarius, extends over a space from 90° to 140° distant from Orion. — fulgeret: from fulgĕre, an ante-classical and poetical variant for fulgēre. The imperfect subjunctive follows naturally upon an easily understood protasis like si modo hoc fieret. — Oarion: from the Greek Ὠαρίων.

67. This pasquinade, in the form of a conversation between the poet and the door of a certain house, abounds in difficulties of interpretation for us, though its directness of personal reference must have made it clear enough to the Veronese. Its tone of familiarity with, and personal interest in, the tittle-tattle of the city seems to indicate that it was composed before Catullus left Verona to live at Rome, and not during one of his brief visits to his old home. The motive is apparently as follows (see also later notes): The Door is that of a house in Verona (v. 34), formerly owned by an aged (v. 4) bachelor or widower (v. 6) named Balbus, after whose death (v. 6) it came into the possession of his son (v. 1) Caecilius, who thereupon married (v. 6) and brought home a young and lively widow (v. 20) from Brixia (v. 32), who claimed to be also a maid (v. 19). Strange rumors about her life soon began to spread through Verona, and the poet inquires of the Door why it has betrayed its master's confidence (presumably by letting in lovers to corrupt the young wife). The Door defends itself by saying that it has not betrayed its trust, but the woman was a bad lot before she came to Verona, and the current gossip is true of the period of her former marriage; for though her husband was notoriously impotent, his father stepped in to fill the son's place in the household, and the woman moreover was too intimate with certain other people named and hinted at. The proof of this culpability is found not only in rumors that have followed her

In dominum ueterem deseruisse fidem.
'Non (ita Caecilio placeam, cui tradita nunc sum)

Nec peccatum a me quisquam pote dicere quicquam:
† Verum istius populi ianua qui te facit!
Qui, quacumque aliquid reperitur non bene factum, from Brixia, but in her own familiar talk with her maids in the presence of the Door, which she treated as if it could neither hear nor speak.— The conception of the door as a bar in the way of would-be lovers is familiar enough in ancient poetry (cf. 63. 65 and Plautus, Horace, Ovid, Propertius, etc. passim); Propertius (I. 16) also represents the door as speaking of its experiences.

1–8. The poet speaks: You have been the trusted servant of the newly-made husband (Caecilius), as you were of his father (Balbus); the latter you served faithfully (vv. 3, 4); now that he is dead (v. 6) you know well what he would wish you to do (v. 5 uoto), but you have wilfully disregarded it (seruisse maligne), and have entirely changed (v. 7 mutata) your character; why have you thus abandoned your former habit of fidelity to your master's interests (v. 8)?

1. dulci uiro: cf. 66. 33 dulci coniuge.

2. teque, etc.: cf. the formal expression in the invocation of Scipio, Liv. XXIX. 27 ea uos omnia bene iuuetis, bonis auctibus auxitis. — bona ope: cf. 34. 23 bona ope. — auctet: the word apparently occurs only here and in Plaut. Amph. 6 bono atque amplo auctare lucro, and Lucr. I. 56 unde omnis natura creet res, auctet, alatque.

4. ipse senex: the aged master, in contrast to his son and heir.

5. rursus, on the contrary; cf. 22. 11. — uoto seruisse maligne: observe the emphatic contrast to v. 3 Balbo seruisse benigne.

6. porrecto: sc. in death; cf. Prop. II. 8. 33 uiderat informem multa Patroclon harena porrectum. — marita: i.e. you have come into the possession of a married couple (Balbus having been, therefore, a bachelor or a widower); cf. Liv. XXVII. 31. 5 uagabatur per maritas domos; and on the other hand such phrases as 68. 6 in lecto caelibe.

7. agedum: cf. 63. 78.

9. ita Caecilio placeam: the Door is sincere in its desire to be faithful to the husband, Caecilius, and to be acquitted in his sight, for it evidently views him as sinned against by a designing and criminal wife; cf. 20 ff. n.

11. pote: see 17. 24 n.

12. See Crit. App.

13. qui . . . omnes: apparently referring to v. 12 † populi. — qua-

cumque: sc. ratione, modifying factum.

15. non satis, etc.: the poet suggests that a categorical denial is not enough, but convincing proof of innocence should be offered.

18. nos . . . nobis: referring to the speaker only, as in v. 7.

19 ff. uirgo, etc.: i.e. to be sure, though a widow, she passed herself off as a maid, and every one knew that she might well be so as far as her husband was concerned.

19. nobis: the Door unites interests with the injured husband against the guilty wife.

20. uir prior: carefully to distinguish her weakling husband from Caecilius. — attigerit: subjunctive of concession.

21. tenera beta: so Augustus is said (Suet. Oct. 87) to have used betissare for languere. — sicula: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

23. illius: elsewhere in Catullus this and similar genitives have the penult short.

24. conscelerasse domum: cf. 64. 404 diuos scelerare parentes, also of unnatural crime.

26. iners sterili semine: on the repetition of idea in the adjectives cf. 64. 64, 103, 221.; 90. 5; and (with Ellis) v. 48.

28. zonam, etc.: cf. 2. 13 n.

32. Brixia; the modern Brescia, the capital of the (Gallic) Cenomani (Liv. XXXII. 30). It is about as far to the westward of Sirmio as Verona is to the eastward (one half-hour by rail). — The remainder of the verse is involved in great difficulty; it might naturally be taken to refer to the situation of Brixia at the base of a hill, but suppositum is apparently not used elsewhere in the sense of 'lying at the foot of,' and no hill in the neighborhood of Brixia is called by a name resembling chinea till about A.D. 1500, when this passage from Catullus might have influenced local nomenclature (cf. the case of the Grampian Hills).

33. praecurrit Mella: the Mella (cf. Verg. Geor. IV. 278 curua prope flumina Mellae) flows about a mile to the westward of Brixia.

34. mater: Brixia is nowhere else called the mother-city of Verona, though some writers speak of Verona as a Gallic town; cf. Ptol. III. 1. 27; Just. XX. 5. 8; not so, perhaps, Livy (V. 35. 1), nor, certainly, Pliny (N.H. III. 130).

35. The two men, evidently inhabitants of Brixia, are otherwise unknown.

37–40. A remark of the Door itself, which, having been fairly started on its story by v. 18, continues it to the end, preferring to anticipate rather than to await criticism. — dixerit aliquis: see Roby (Lat. Gram. vol. II. Pref.), who thinks the verb in this construction probably indicative.

39. tigillo: the lintel, not the jamb, as suffixa sufficiently indicates. The ancient door, like some heavier specimens of modern make, swung on two vertical pivots fitting into sockets near the extremity of lintel and sill respectively.

46. tollat supercilia: sc. in anger; cf. Schol. on Ar. Vesp. 655 τὰς ὀφρῦς αἴρειν ἔθος τοῖς ὀργιζομένοις. — rubra: perhaps not of the color of the brows, as a mark of identification, but of the flush of anger on the forehead: the hints toward identification follow later.

47. longus, tall; as in 86. 1 longa. — magnas cui, etc.: i.e. he had been sued on a charge of bastardy (though the expected birth

Longus homo est, magnas cui lites intulit olim
Falsum mendaci uentre puerperium.'

68ª.

Quod mihi fortuna casuque oppressus acerbo
Conscriptum hoc lacrimis mittis epistolium, finally did not take place), and the case had been a noteworthy (magnas) one.

68ª. Over the question of the unity of c. 68 students of Catullus have long been at variance, some believing that vv. 1–40 have nothing to do with vv. 41–160, and others claiming that a more or less perfect union exists throughout the two, or perhaps three (cf. vv. 149–160), divisions of the poem. On the whole the weight of evidence seems to lie in favor of absolute division of vv. 1–40 from 41–160. (1) The absence of division indicated by the MSS. is paralleled by similar omission in the case of other poems: (2) the person addressed in 68ª is Malius (or Manlius; cf. v. 11 n.), in 68ᵇ, Allius, while the use of two nomina by one man was at this time unprecedented, and there is also no reason why one name should be consistently used in vv. 1–40 and the other in vv. 41–160: (3) Malius, in 68ª, is in extremest sorrow, which the expressions (see notes) show can be only over the death of his wife, while Allius, in 68ᵇ, is happy with either wife or mistress (cf. v. 155): (4) Malius asks for consolation in the shape of love-poems, and Catullus explains why he cannot send them; there is no reference to any request on the part of Allius, but he receives an apparently spontaneous expression of thanks for his services to Catullus in the affair with Lesbia, with which is incorporated an account of the poet's happiness entirely incongruous in 68ª: (5) in 68ª the poet is so overcome with grief that he waives all reference to his relations with Lesbia (vv. 28, 29); in 68ᵇ he is happy with her, and is disposed to condone her frailties (vv. 135 ff.), while his grief is not ever-present, but is aroused only by a chance allusion to Troy, and is forthwith suppressed: (6) the repetition of vv. 20 ff. of 68ª in 68ᵇ (vv. 92 ff.) shows that the two poems were not far separated in time, but is more consistent with the theory of division than of unity (see also heading 5). 68ª was evidently written (at Verona or Sirmio) not long before 68ᵇ (see 5 above, and later notes), and both before Catullus had become thoroughly aware of Lesbia's real character, and had finally broken away from her. Perhaps her loose life during this period of separation finally opened his eyes. For convenience of general reference the continuous numbering of verses is retained throughout 68ª and 68ᵇ.

1. quod, etc.: the poetical epistle opens in pure prose form.

2. conscriptum lacrimis: a somewhat forced figure for 'tear-stained.' — epistolium: (Gr. ἐπιστόλιον) a rare word, occurring elsewhere only in Apul. Ap. 6 and 79, and in glossaries.

3. naufragum, etc.: the figure is not infrequently used of great

Naufragum ut eiectum spumantibus aequoris undis
Subleuem et a mortis limine restituam,
Quem neque sancta Venus molli requiescere somno
Desertum in lecto caelibe perpetitur,
Nec ueterum dulci scriptorum carmine musae
Oblectant, cum mens anxia peruigilat,
Id gratum est mihi, me quoniam tibi dicis amicum
Muneraque et Musarum hinc petis et Veneris.
Sed tibi ne mea sint ignota incommoda, Manli,
Neu me odisse putes hospitis officium, and overwhelming misfortune; cf. v. 13; 64. 62; 65. 4.

4. a mortis limine restituam: cf. Lucr. II. 960 leti iam limine ab ipso; Culex 224 te restitui superis leti iam limine ab ipso.

5. sancta Venus: cf. 36. 3 n. — molli somno: cf. Hom. Il. X. 2 μαλακῷ δεδμημένοι ὕπνῳ; Verg. Geor. III. 435 mollis sub diuo carpere somnos; Prop. I. 3. 7 mollem spirare quietem; Tib. I. 2. 74 mollis et inculta sit mihi somnus humo; Ov. Met. I. 685 ille tamen pugnat molles euincere somnos.

6. lecto caelibe: cf. 6. 6 uiduas noctes; Ov. Her. 13. 107 aucupor in lecto mendaces caelibe somnos. The great grief expressed in vv. 1–6 can hardly be attributed to temporary estrangement or separation from wife or mistress, but only to her death; cf. also v. 13 n.

7. ueterum scriptorum musae: cf. Eur. Med. 421 μοῦσαι παλαιγενέων ἀοιδᾶν. The ancient poets would be chiefly Greeks, and the word with those following stands in sharp contrast to v. 9 me, and the following words. Manlius tries to find distraction from his grief in the books of the ancient (Greek) poets (cf. Hor. Sat. II. 6. 61 nunc ueterum libris, nunc somno et inertibus horis) and fails; he therefore appeals to his friend for writings of his, either new or old.

10. munera Musarum et Veneris: i.e. love-poems; cf. Theog. 250 ἀγλαὰ μουσάων δῶρα ἰοστεφάνων; Anacr. 94ᵇ μουσέων τε καὶ ἀγλαὰ δῶρ' Ἀφροδίτης συμμίσγων ἐρατῆς μνήσκεται εὐφροσύνης.

11 ff. Manlius, who apparently has not heard of the affliction of Catullus, had in the first part of his letter begged for consolatory verses from him, and in the second, urged his return to Rome, supporting his urgency by hints about the loose life of Lesbia during the unexplained absence of her lover. Catullus here and in vv. 33 ff. replies to the first part of the letter, and to the second part in vv. 27 ff. — Manli: the reading of V mali can readily stand for manli, as 61. 16 mallio, and 61. 222 maulio sufficiently show; and very tempting is the conjecture of Muretus that the happy bridegroom of 61 is now the grief-stricken widower of 68ª who turns to his friend for comfort in his sorrow as he had for congratulation in his joy. Yet both Malius and Mallius are nomina supported by inscriptions of this age.

12. hospitis: apparently, like ξένος, of one with whom a treaty of

Accipe quis merser fortunae fluctibus ipse,
Ne amplius a misero dona beata petas.
Tempore quo primum uestis mihi tradita pura est,
Iucundum cum aetas florida uer ageret,

Quae dulcem curis miscet amaritiem:
Sed totum hoc studium luctu fraterna mihi mors
Abstulit. O misero frater adempte mihi,
Tu mea tu moriens fregisti commoda, frater,
Tecum una tota est nostra sepulta domus,
Omnia tecum una perierunt gaudia nostra,
Quae tuus in uita dulcis alebat amor.
Cuius ego interitu tota de mente fugaui
Haec studia atque omnes delicias animi.

friendship and hospitality has been made; cf. Cic. Lael. 37 hospes familiae uestrae.

13. The reason that leads Manlius to apply to Catullus for help, the death of one dearly loved, is the very reason why Catullus is unable to comply with the request, so reasonable from an amicus et hospes.— merser fortunae fluctibus: cf. v. 3 n.; Hor. Ep. 1. 2. 22 aduersis rerum immersabilis undis.

15. tempore quo, since the time when; cf. 35. 13 n.— uestis . . . pura: the exchange of the crimson-bordered toga praetexta for the toga uirilis of pure white marked the legal coming of age at about 16 years.

17. multa satis lusi: i.e. I have written love-poems enough; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 32. 2 lusimus tecum, barbite; Ov. Am. III. 1. 27 quod tenerae cantent, lusit tua Musa, puellae. — Apollinaris Sidonius (Ep. V. 21) says of himself mihi quoque semper a paruo cura Musarum.— non est, etc.: a repetitive amplification of the preceding phrase; for love-poems with Catullus were closely connected with love-experiences.

18. dulcem amaritiem: cf. Sappho Frag. 40 γλυκύπικρον ἀμάχανον ὄρπετον (of love); Theog. 1353 πικρὸς καὶ γλυκύς ἐστι . . . ἔρως; Plaut. Pseud. 63 dulce amarumque una nunc misces mihi; Goethe Egmont III. 2. freudvoll und leidvoll . . . die Seele die liebt; Ellis quotes Romaunt of the Rose, p. 86 Bell For ever of love the siknesse Is meinde with swete and bitternesse.

19 ff. Cf. c. 65; 68. 92 ff.; 101. 6.

22. tecum, etc.: not so much, perhaps, that the bachelor Catullus looked to his brother's prospective children to keep alive the family name, as that brotherly love led him to ascribe to his brother all the qualities that honored the family, and to himself none.

26. haec studia: i.e. the writing of love-poems; corresponding to v. 17 multa satis lusi as omnes delicias animi does to non est dea,

Quare, quod scribis Veronae turpe Catullo
Esse quod hic quisquis de meliore nota
Frigida deserto tepefactet membra cubili, etc. With delicias cf. 45. 24. n; 74. 2; with the otiose genitive animi, 2. 10 animi curas; 64. 372 animi amores; 102. 2 fides animi.

27–30. The reference to love-affairs in v. 26 leads Catullus to the second part of the letter of Manlius, wherein the writer, desiring the personal presence and sympathy of Catullus, and not knowing any reason for his long tarrying in Verona, endeavored to draw him thence by a warning (though using no names) that his duty to himself in the protection of his honor summoned him back to Rome; Catullus replies that his grief makes it impossible for even such considerations to move him.

27. Veronae turpe Catullo esse: apparently the predicate infinitive esse is (though contrary to general usage) omitted here, or else (and most improbably) the later esse serves as both subject and predicate; for in spite of v. 28 hic and the MS. Catulle, a direct quotation in such a setting would be extremely rare. The meaning evidently is, 'to be staying at Verona is dishonorable for Catullus, when his place with Lesbia is being filled by promiscuous lovers.' The reply is, 'the matter is not one of dishonor but of sorrow.' — Catullo: the poet likes to refer to himself in the third person, and V not infrequently gives e for o; hence the MS. reading is no great argument for a direct quotation.

28. hic: at the place where Manlius was writing, the word being quoted directly from his letter: there is no reason for believing the place to be other than Rome. — quisquis: apparently the masculine is here used absolutely (without est) after analogy of established use of the neuter in that way. — de meliore nota, of the better sort; cf. Cic. Fam. VII. 29. 1 Sulpicii successori nos de meliore nota commenda. Clodia's lovers were naturally not from the lowest orders of society.

29. frigida membra: they had been excluded while Catullus was on hand. — tepĕfactet: on the quantity cf. 64. 360 n. tepefaciet; the word is ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

30. magis: in a sense approaching that of the French mais; cf. Sall. Iug. 85. 49 neque quisquam parens liberis uti aeterni forent, optauit, magis uti boni honestique uitam exigerent. — miserum, pitiful; cf. 91. 2; 99. 15; Cic. Fin. V. 84 bonum liberi, misera orbitas.

33 ff. Catullus now returns to the first part of the letter of Manlius and explains why he cannot send poems earlier composed, — he has none with him, or none that would be new and pleasing to Manlius. The lack of logical order, with the prosaic sentence-openings in vv. 1, 27, 33, and prosaic expression elsewhere, may be taken to indicate the distracted state of the writer's mind.

33. scriptorum copia: the genetive is neuter; cf. Hor. Ep. I. 18.

Hoc fit quod Romae uiuimus : illa domus,
Illa mihi sedes, illic mea carpitur aetas ;
Huc una ex multis capsula me sequitur.
Quod cum ita sit, nolim statuas nos mente maligna
Id facere aut animo non satis ingenuo
Quod tibi non utriusque petenti copia parta est :
Vltro ego deferrem, copia si qua foret.

68ᵇ.

Non possum reticere, deae, qua me Allius in re
Iuuerit aut quantis iuuerit officiis,
Ne fugiens saeclis obliuiscentibus aetas

109 sit bona librorum copia ; Ov. Trist. III. 14. 37 non hic librorum copia.

36. capsula: i.e. scrinium.

37. mente maligna, etc., in grudging temper or ungracious spirit.

39. non: modifying the entire expression, though placed before the pronoun, as frequently in Catullus. Riese gives a full list of such phrases. — utriusque: i.e. of verses composed especially for you at this time, and also of earlier verses.

40. ultro ego deferrem, etc.: Catullus had apparently known of the sorrow of Manlius before his letter came, but because of his own grief had taken no notice of it till personally appealed to.

68ᵇ. A panegyric on Allius for his assistance in furthering the poet's affair with Lesbia, into characterization of whose love as like that of Laodamia the poem straightway glides, to be recalled to Allius once more only with v. 149. — The Allius addressed is otherwise unknown, though the name is found not infrequently in inscriptions; he must, however, have been a man of some position in Rome for Clodia's visits to his house (v. 68) not to arouse question. — The involution of theme, with the introduction of the Laodamia episode, itself interrupted by the lament over the death of the poet's brother, is thoroughly Alexandrian. — See also introductory note to c. 68ª.

41. non possum reticere: the earnestness of the poet's feeling is well expressed by the abruptness of the opening, carried out by the emphatic repetition of iuuerit. — deae: the poem opens, in epic style, with an address to the Muses; cf. Theocr. 17 (the panegyric upon Ptolemy).

43. ne, etc.: it gives an easier passage of thought to v. 45 sed dicam to take vv. 43 and 44 as a final clause directly dependent upon non possum reticere, rather than to read with the MSS. nec and understand the clause as a parenthetical wish (for a potential subjunctive here seems impossible). With MS. nec for a genuine ne cf. v. 103; 21. 13; 62. 59; 99. 9. — fugiens . . . aetas, the flight of time through ages of forgetfulness ; cf. 64. 232.

Nam mihi quam dederit duplex Amathusia curam

Cum tantum arderem quantum Trinacria rupes
Lymphaque in Oetaeis Malia Thermopylis,
Maesta neque adsiduo tabescere lumina fletu
Cessarent tristique imbre madere genae,
Qualis in aerii perlucens uertice montis

45. porro, in time to come; cf. 45. 3.

46. anus: with the adjectival use of the word cf. 9. 4 n.; 78b. 4; Mart. XII. 4. 4 [hoc te] fama fuisse loquax chartaque dicet anus; I. 39. 2 famaque nouit anus.

48. magis atque magis: a frequent and classical phrase; but cf. the asyndetic form in 38. 3 n.; 64. 274.

49 f. The figure is of a forgotten memorial inscription. The spider-web as a sign of human desertion is as old as Homer; cf. Od. XVI. 34 Ὀδυσσῆος δέ που εὐνὴ χήτει ἐνευναίων κάκ' ἀράχνια κεῖται ἔχουσα; and the reminiscence in Prop. IV. 6. 33 putris et in uacuo texetur aranea lecto; also Ov. Am. I. 14. 7 uel pede quod gracili deducit aranea filum, cum leue deserta sub trabe nectit opus.

51. duplex: of the twofold character of Venus as causing grief as well as joy; cf. v. 18 n.; 64. 95; but the expression is sometimes understood to refer to the hermaphroditic statue of the goddess at Amathus. — Amathusia: i.e. Venus; cf. 36. 14 n.

52. in quo genere, after what manner. — corruerit, overwhelmed; love's visit to him was with a vigorous assault that carried all defenses at once. With the active meaning of the verb cf. Lucr. V. 367 quae possint forte coorta corruere hanc rerum summam.

53. quantum, etc.: the comparison of figurative flames to the fires of Etna is not uncommon; cf. Hor. Epod. 17. 30 ardeo quantum . . . nec Sicana feruida uirens in Aetna flamma; Ov. Epist. Sapph. 12 me calor Aetnaeo non minor igne tenet. — rupes: for mons, as in 61. 28; cf. Grat. Cyn. 430 in Trinacria rupe.

54. lympha, etc.: the waters referred to are the hot springs that by their vicinity gave its name to the pass of Thermopylae.

57. qualis, etc.: i.e. the lover's tears ran as freely and constantly as an unfailing mountain-brook. The

Is clausum lato patefecit limite campum,
Isque domum nobis isque dedit dominae, development of the details of the figure is but a poetical embellishment. With the figure in general cf. Hom. Il. IX. 14 ἵσταο δάκρυ χέων ὥς τε κρήνη μελάνυδρος, etc.; XVI. 3; and a similar comparison of tears to melting snows in Sen. Phaedr. 389 ff. — perlucens: of the thread-like sheen of a stream seen afar off on a mountain-side.
Ad quam communes exerceremus amores.

59 ff. The stream rises among lofty mountains, finds its way down through a valley, and finally emerges from its solitudes upon the plains in the midst of the paths of a great people (v. 60), whom it furnishes with refreshment on their journeys.

63. hic: temporal, as in 64. 269. — nigro turbine: cf. Verg. Aen. X. 603 torrentis aquae uel turbinis atri more furens.

64. lenius, etc.: cf. Sil. Ital. XV. 162 leuis inde secunda adspirans aura propellit carbasa flatus.

65. Pollucis: objective genitive; cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 4 uota deum uictor soluebat; Liv. Praef. 13 cum precationibus deorum dearumque; and on the divinities appealed to, 4. 26 n. — implorata: probably a nominative modifying aura (cf. Hor. Ep. II. 1. 135 caelestes implorat aquas docta prece blandus), though Nipperdey and Jordan believe it to be an ablative with prece absolute, after the analogy of Plaut. Rud. 258 qui sunt, qui a patrona preces mea expetessunt? Corn. Nep. Ep. Corn. non pudet te deum preces expetere?

66. nobis: for mihi, as in vv. 68 and 156, where Lesbia (domina) is mentioned separately.

67. clausum, etc.: i.e. he gave us free course, by allowing us to meet under the protection of his roof; with the figure cf. Sen. De Ben. I. 15. 2 minus laxum limitem aperire.

68. domum dedit: with the order cf. 30. 3 n. — dominae: i.e. Lesbia, as in v. 156 and elsewhere; the emendation appears certain for MSS. dominam (from dominē; cf. v. 73 MSS. amorem for amore).

69. ad quam: for in qua (sc. domo); cf. Cic. Verr. II. 4. 2 ad aedem Felicitatis; Att. XII. 36. 2 ad uillam; Liv. XXXIX. 4. 2 ad aedem Apollinis in senatu; and Draeger Hist. Synt. I.² p. 585. — communes: i.e. shared mutually

Quo mea se molli candida diua pede

Innixa arguta constituit solea,
Coniugis ut quondam flagrans aduenit amore
Protesilaeam Laodamia domum
Inceptam frustra, nondum cum sanguine sacro
Hostia caelestis pacificasset eros.
Nil mihi tam ualde placeat, Rhamnusia uirgo,
Quod temere inuitis suscipiatur eris.

by Catullus and Lesbia; cf. Lucr. IV. 1200 est communis uoluptas (sc. to two lovers); Ov. Am. II. 5. 31 haec tibi sunt mecum, mihi sunt communia tecum.

70. molli: an almost formal epithet, as often. — diua: only here as an appellation of a mistress, though comparisons to particular deities are not uncommon; cf. v. 133 where Lesbia is invested with the attributes of Venus.

71. trito: a formal epithet of a threshold, as worn smooth by use; cf. the Homeric οὐδὸς ξεστός, and v. 115 tereretur. — fulgentem: of the smooth, luminous skin; cf. Hom. λιπαροὶ πόδες.

72. arguta: apparently of sound rather than of shape (cf. 6. 11), but whether some omen was connected with the creaking of the sandal, or it was simply the happy presage of her coming to the eagerly listening lover, is doubtful.

73–130. The comparison of the warmth of Lesbia's love to that of Laodamia's. The episode is thoroughly Alexandrian in its length and complexity. It seems unnecessary and unfitting after observation of other similar mythological illustrations in Catullus to suppose the comparison to extend to the details of the unrighteous beginning (vv. 75, 76) and fatal effects (vv. 85, 86) of the passion, even if Catullus could have admitted to himself such an extension of the resemblance. — Part of the story is as old as Homer (cf. Il. II. 695 ff.), though nothing is said there of the final cause of the death of Protesilaus. Euripides in his Protesilaus appears first to embody the tale of the hero's return to earth for one day in accordance with his wife's prayer (cf. also Hyg. Fab. 103, and Wordsworth Laodamia). On the subject cf. also Ov. Her. 13.

75. inceptam frustra: i.e. his home-life was indeed begun, but was not to last; cf. Hom. Il. II. 701 δόμος ἡμιτελής.

76. hostia: probably not with reference to a special pre-nuptial sacrifice, but to the sacrifices thought necessary before entering upon any new undertaking. — caelestis eros, the lords of heaven; repeated, without distinguishing epithet, in v. 78.

77 f. Cf. Verg. Aen. II. 402 heu nihil inuitis fas quemquam fidere diuis. — Rhamnusia uirgo: cf. 64. 395 n.; 66. 71. — inuitis eris: cf. 76. 12 dis inuitis; Hom. Il. XII. 8 θεῶν ἀέκητι, where the lack of divine favor was due solely, as here, to the omission of preliminary sacrifice (XII. 6).

Quam ieiuna pium desideret ara cruorem
Docta est amisso Laodamia uiro,
Coniugis ante coacta noui dimittere collum
Quam ueniens una atque altera rursus hiems
Noctibus in longis auidum saturasset amorem,
Posset ut abrupto uiuere coniugio:
Quod scibant Parcae non longo tempore abesse,
Si miles muros isset ad Iliacos:
Nam tum Helenae raptu primores Argiuorum
Coeperat ad sese Troia ciere uiros,
Troia (nefas) commune sepulcrum Asiae Europaeque,
Troia uirum et uirtutum omnium acerba cinis:
Quaene etiam nostro letum miserabile fratri

79. quam ieiuna, how thirstily; with the adjective in this meaning cf. Prop. IV. 15. 18 uilem ieiunae saepe negauit aquam.

80. amisso: i.e. by his departure for Troy, whither he was compelled to go by the other Greeks.

82. una atque altera hiems: i.e. winter after winter; cf. v. 152.

84. uiuere: i.e. to endure life; cf. 5. 1 n.

85. quod, etc., which (i.e. the final severing of the marriage bond by death) the Fates knew to be not far distant. — scibant: as if the Fates were powerless to alter this decree of Necessity, and could only register it; with the form cf. 64. 319 custodibant; 84. 8 audibant. — abesse: the MSS. abisse can be only the perfect for the future in a definitely decided contingency, and that effect is interfered with by the occurrence of a phrase (non longo tempore) pointing definitely to the future. With the MSS. error cf. Prop. III. 16. 32 where V reads abire for abesse.

89. Troia: the word leads the poet into a digression on his brother's death, from which he returns to the main digression with v. 101. — nefas: a parenthetical exclamation, as in Verg. Aen. VII. 73 uisa (nefas) longis comprendere crinibus ignem. — commune sepulcrum: so of the earth itself in Lucr. V. 259 omniparens eadem rerum commune sepulcrum; but of a public burying-ground in Hor. Sat. I. 8. 10 hoc miserae plebi stabat commune sepulcrum.

90. uirum et uirtutum: cf. Verg. Aen. I. 566 uirtutesque uirosque. — acerba: of the 'untimely' death of young warriors; cf. on this meaning of the word Mayor on Juv. 11. 44, who gives numerous citations. — cinis, funeral-pyre; found only here in this sense. The noun is feminine also in the singular in 101. 4 (as in Lucr. IV. 926 and not infrequently in late Latin), but masculine in the plural in 68. 98; cf. Non. 198 [cinis] feminino apud Caesarem et Catullum et Caluum lectum est, quorum uacillat auctoritas.

91. quaene = quippe quae: cf. 64. 180 n.; 64. 183.

Attulit. Hei misero frater adempte mihi,
Hei misero fratri iucundum lumen ademptum,
Tecum una tota est nostra sepulta domus,
Omnia tecum una perierunt gaudia nostra,
Quae tuus in uita dulcis alebat amor.
Quem nunc tam longe non inter nota sepulcra
Nec prope cognatos compositum cineres,
Sed Troia obscena, Troia infelice sepultum

Ad quam tum properans fertur simul undique pubes

Ne Paris abducta gauisus libera moecha

Quo tibi tum casu, pulcherrima Laodamia,
Ereptum est uita dulcius atque anima
Coniugium: tanto te absorbens uertice amoris
Aestus in abruptum detulerat barathrum,

92–96. hei, etc.: cf. vv. 20–24.

98. compositum: in the meaning of buried the word is poetical and post-Augustan only; its next appearance is in Hor. Sat. I. 9. 28 omnes composui.

99. obscena, malign. The word was originally applied to things of ill omen. — infelice, baleful. Elsewhere in Catullus the ablative in -i (of the simple adjective) occurs; cf. 62. 30; 64. 373.

100. extremo, far distant; cf. 11. 2 in extremos Indos.

102. penetralis focos: the sacred hearths that formed the centre of the home and its life.

103. libera, unchallenged; cf. 64. 402.

105. quo casu: i.e. by the sudden despatch of a Greek army against Troy.

106. uita dulcius atque anima: cf. 3. 5 n.

107 ff. tanto, etc.: explaining uita dulcius, etc.; he was dearer to you than life; for your love was deeper than the abyss of Pheneus (vv. 109–118), and your joy in him greater (vv. 129, 130) than that of the aged grandfather in the birth of an heir (vv. 119–124), or of a dove in the endearments of her mate (vv. 125–128). And such was the joy with which Lesbia came to me (vv. 131–134).

107. coniugium: cf. 66. 28 n. — absorbens, etc.: cf. Verg. Aen. III. 421 [Charybdis] imo barathri ter gurgite uastos sorbet in abruptum fluctus.

108. barathrum: this name was sometimes applied by the Greeks to an artificial, in many cases subterranean, channel for the draining of a lake or overflowing river; cf. the emissarium of the Alban Lake.

Quale ferunt Grai Pheneum prope Cylleneum

Quod quondam caesis montis fodisse medullis
Audit falsiparens Amphitryoniades,
Tempore quo certa Stymphalia monstra sagitta

Pluribus ut caeli tereretur ianua diuis,
Hebe nec longa uirginitate foret.
Sed tuus altus amor barathro fuit altior illo,
Qui tunc indomitam ferre iugum docuit.
Nam nec tam carum confecto aetate parenti

109. Pheneum: Pheneus was a city in northwestern Arcadia, near Mt. Cyllene. Pausanias (VIII. 14) mentions the ascription to Heracles of an existing outlet for the swollen waters of the neighboring river Olbios.

111. montis medullis: cf. the more common figure in Verg. Aen. III. 575 uiscera montis.

112. audit = dicitur; perhaps only here in this sense with an infinitive; but cf. Grk. ἀκούειν, and Latin cluere (e.g. Lucr. IV. 46 imago cuiuscumque cluet de corpore fusa uagari). — falsiparens: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον, possibly suggested by Call. Hymn. Cer. 99 ψευδοπάτωρ (though in a different sense from that). Heracles was the reputed son of Amphitruo, but really the son of Zeus.

113. Stymphalia: the place lay just to the east of Pheneus, and the destruction of the ravenous birds congregating there was the fifth of the labors imposed upon Heracles by Eurystheus, the deterioris eri (v. 116). — certa sagitta: cf. Hor. Carm. I. 12. 23 metuende certa Phoebe sagitta.

114. deterioris eri: cf. the words of Heracles himself in Hom. Od. XI. 621 μάλα γὰρ πολὺ χείρονι φωτὶ δεδμήμην, ὁ δέ μοι χαλεποὺς ἐπετέλλετ' ἀέθλους.

115 f. The mighty deeds of Heracles were proving his fitness for a place among the gods and for the hand of Hebe.

116. Hebe: called Iuuentas by the earlier Romans; her marriage with Heracles is mentioned as early as Homer (Od. XI. 602).

118. qui: sc. amor. — tunc: i.e. at the time of v. 107 f. — indomitam: sc. prius; cf. Hor. Carm. III. 3. 14 tigres indocili iugum collo trahentes: with the comparison of the maiden to an untamed heifer cf. Hor. Carm. II. 5. 1 nondum subacta ferre iugum ualet ceruice: on the yoke of love, Hor. Carm. III. 9. 17 Venus diductos iugo cogit aeneo; I. 33. 11 formas atque animos sub iuga aenea saeuo mittere cum ioco; Stat. Silu. I. 2. 138 thalami quamuis iuga ferre secundi saepe neget maerens.

119 ff. Cf. Hom. Il. IX. 481 καί μ' ἐφίλησ' ὡς εἴ τε πατὴρ ὃν παῖδα φιλήσῃ μοῦνον τηλύγετον. — confecto aetate parenti: cf. Verg. Aen. IV. 599 confectum aetate parentem.

Quam quae praecipue multiuola est mulier:
Sed tu horum magnos uicisti sola furores,
Vt semel es flauo conciliata uiro.

120. caput: cf. 15. 16 n.

121 ff. The birth of an heir finally sets at naught the joy of the next-of-kin at the prospect of his own succession to the old man's wealth. By the Voconian Law (B.C. 169) no woman, not even an only daughter, could be the heir; cf. Gaius II. 274; Aug. Ciu. Dei III. 21. 5 lata est etiam illa lex Voconia, ne quis heredem feminam faceret, nec unicam filiam.

121. qui: sc. nepos. — inuentus: sc. heres.

122. testatas tabulas: i.e. the will, as duly signed and sealed in the presence of witnesses. After the completion of this legal form in favor of the grandson, the old man for the first time feels safe from the greedy expectations of the gentilis.

123. impia: because his joy was over the childlessness (save for a daughter) of a relative. — derisi: as the gentilis has rejoiced over the disappointed hopes of the old man, so his own disappointment now becomes the object of mockery; for a similar example see Hor. Sat. II. 5. 55. — gentilis: the next-of-kin was not even one of the nearest relatives, the order of legal heirs established in the Twelve Tables being sui heredes, agnati, gentiles.

124. uulturium: i.e. the presumptive heir, awaiting the old man's death as a vulture circles above his expected prey; cf. Sen. Epist 95. 43 at hoc hereditatis causa facit: uultur est, cadauer exspectat; Mart. VI. 62. 1 and 4 amisit pater unicum Salanus . . . cuius uulturis hoc erit cadauer? and (probably in the same sense) the reference to the coruus in Hor. Sat. II. 5. 56. — capiti: a very rare form of the ablative; see Neue Formenlehre I² p. 238.

125 ff. Doves were patterns of conjugal affection and fidelity; cf. Prop. III. 15. 27, 28 exemplo iunctae tibi sint in amore columbae, masculus et totum femina coniugium; Plin. N. H. X. 104 columbae coniugi fidem non uiolant communemque seruant domum; Porph. on Hor. Epod. 16. 32 dicitur columba nulli alii concumbere quam cui se semel iunxit.

126. improbius, more wantonly.

128. multiuola: from the comparison to the dove, apparently with the meaning of multa oscula uolens, rather than of multos amatores uolens like v. 140 omniuoli. The word occurs elsewhere only in the Vulgate (Sir. 9. 3).

131. aut nihil, etc.: the theme now turns back to Lesbia, whom it left with v. 72.

132. lux mea: cf. the same pet-name in v. 160; Tib. IV. 3. 15; (Sulp.) IV. 12. 1; Ov. Am. I. 8. 23.

133. The lover ascribes to Lesbia the attributes of Venus; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 2. 33 Erycina ridens, quam Iocus circum uolat et Cupido. — hinc illinc: cf. 3. 9 n.

134. crocina in tunica: on the less common representation of a draped Eros see Sappho Frag. 64 [Ἔρωτα] ἐλθόντ' ἐξ ὀράνω πορφυρίαν περθέμενον χλάμυν; and illustrations in Baumeister Denkmäler I. p. 498. The saffron color is chosen perhaps because it was the color of Hymen's garb also; cf. 61. 8 and 10.

135 ff. Catullus has apparently been informed (perhaps by Manlius; 68. 27) of the other infidelities of Lesbia, but now at first is trying to compromise with his love for her by pleading that they are but few (rara), and do not indicate a settled defection from his love, since they are so carefully concealed (uerecundae erae); that even Queen Juno puts up with the multitudinous wanderings of her husband, and that after all Lesbia is not his wife, and, therefore, he ought rather to be grateful for the favors he does receive than to be overjealous of others.

136. furta: the word occurs first here in the erotic sense, but is found often in this sense in Vergil and the elegiasts; cf. however v. 145 furtiua munuscula; 7. 8 furtiuos amores. — erae: cf. v. 68 dominae; v. 156 domina.

140. omniuoli: i.e. omnes puellas uolens; ἅπαξ λεγόμενον. — plurima furta: see the list in Hom. Il. XIV. 317 ff.

141. componier: cf. 61. 42 n. citarier. The very evident loss of at least two vv. between vv. 141 and 142 makes the point of v. 141 unintelligible.

Nec tamen illa mihi dextra deducta paterna
Fragrantem Assyrio uenit odore domum,
Sed furtiua dedit mira munuscula nocte
Ipsius ex ipso dempta uiri gremio.
Quare illud satis est, si nobis is datur unis
Quem lapide illa diem candidiore notat.

Hoc tibi quod potui confectum carmine munus
Pro multis, Alli, redditur officiis,
Ne uestrum scabra tangat robigine nomen
Haec atque illa dies atque alia atque alia.
Huc addent diui quam plurima, quae Themis olim
Antiquis solita est munera ferre piis:
Sitis felices et tu simul et tua uita
Et domus, in qua nos lusimus et domina,

143. tamen, after all. — dextra deducta paterna: not literally that the father conducted the bride in the marriage procession to the bridegroom's house, but figuratively only, in that marriages were arranged with the consent of the head of the family; cf. 62. 60.

144. Assyrio odore: cf. 6. 8 n.

148. lapide candidiore: cf. 64. 222 n.; 107. 6; Hor. Carm. I. 36. 10 Cressa ne careat pulchra dies nota, which Porphyrio explains by saying that the Cretans were accustomed to drop a white pebble into their quivers as a memorial of a day of happiness, and a black pebble to mark a day of sorrow. Bentley on the same passage gives further citations.

149–160. The panegyric concludes with a direct address to Allius, which some critics have taken as a distinct poem, or as a strongly marked division of c. 68 as a threefold, though single, poem.

151. uestrum: as the name belonged, not to Allius alone, but to his family; cf. 64. 160 uestras sedes.

152. haec atque illa dies: apparently a unique expression for 'to-day and to-morrow' (i.e. the course of time). Cf. with the entire verse v. 82. — alia atque alia: cf. Plin. Ep. I. 3. 4 reliqua rerum tuarum post te alium atque alium dominum sortientur.

153. huc: i.e. to this small tribute of mine. — Themis: the goddess of justice, often identified with Astraea, on whom see 66. 65 n. uirginis.

155. sitis felices: so also with reference to a love affair in 100. 8 sis felix. — uita: see 45. 13 n., and cf. 104. 1; 109. 1.

156. lusimus: cf. 17. 17 ludere. — domina: i.e. Lesbia; together with nos the word is the subject of lusimus; not together with tu, etc., of sitis, since the wish for Lesbia's prosperity is expressed in v. 159 f.

Et qui principio nobis † terram dedit aufert,
A quo sunt primo omnia nata bona,
Et longe ante omnes mihi quae me carior ipso est,
Lux mea, qua uiua uiuere dulce mihi est. 120

69.

Noli admirari quare tibi femina nulla,
Rufe, uelit tenerum supposuisse femur,
Non si illam rarae labefactes munere uestis
Aut perluciduli deliciis lapidis.
Laedit te quaedam mala fabula, qua tibi fertur
Valle sub alarum trux habitare caper.
Hunc metuunt omnes. Neque mirum : nam mala ualde est
Bestia, nec quicum bella puella cubet.

157. The verse apparently refers to some person whose assistance antedated that of Allius, perhaps in that he introduced Catullus to Lesbia or to Allius.

158. primo: on the hiatus following see Intr. 86 d. — omnia bona: the love of Lesbia was all in all to Catullus; cf. 77. 4.

159. longe ante omnes: sc. sit felix. — me carior ipso: cf. Culex 211 tua dum mihi carior ipsa uita fuit uita; Ov. Ex. Pont. II. 8. 27 per patriae nomen, quae te tibi carior ipso est; and for similar comparisons in Catullus, 3. 5 n.

160. lux mea: i.e. Lesbia; cf. v. 132 n. — qua uiua, etc.: cf. Hor. Epod. 1. 5 nos quibus te uita si superstite iucunda, si contra, grauis.

69. A bit of personal satire directed probably against M. Caelius Rufus; see Intr. 59. Caelius is generally known as an exquisite and a lady-killer, — a reputation probably better deserved than that indicated in this satire.

3. non si: following a preceding negation (nulla), as in 48. 5; 70. 2; 88. 8. — rarae uestis: i.e. the delicate and translucent Coan robes; cf. Ov. Am. I. 5. 13 deripui tunicam: nec multum rara nocebat; Hor. Sat. I. 2. 101 Cois tibi paene uidere est ut nudam. — labefactes, corrupt; cf. Cic. Clu. 194 fidem pretio labefactare conata sit.

4. perluciduli: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον as diminutive; but cf. Sen. Epist. 90. 45 non aurum nec argentum nec perlucidos lapides. — deliciis: cf. 2. 1 n.; Hor. Carm. IV. 8. 10 animus deliciarum egens.

6. caper: a common figure for this particular odor; cf. 37. 5; 71. 1; Hor. Ep. I. 5. 29 nimis arta premunt olidae conuiuia caprae.

7. neque mirum: cf. 23. 7 n.

8. quicum: feminine, as in 66. 77, but rare in this gender.

Quare aut crudelem nasorum interfice pestem,
Aut admirari desine cur fugiunt.

70.

Nulli se dicit mulier mea nubere malle
Quam mihi, non si se Iuppiter ipse petat.
Dicit : sed mulier cupido quod dicit amanti
In uento et rapida scribere oportet aqua.

71.

Si cui iure bono sacer alarum obstitit hircus,
Aut si quem merito tarda podagra secat,

9. interfice: carrying on the figure in bestia.

10. fugiunt: on the indicative instead of subjunctive in indirect questions in archaic and colloquial Latin see Draeger Hist. Synt. II. § 463. 1 e.

70. A jesting epigram addressed to Lesbia, and written while the amour with her was as yet undisturbed. The precise date cannot be more accurately determined. It is unnecessary to suppose that Metellus was actually dead and Lesbia considering a new marriage as a practical problem.

1. mulier mea: cf. Hor. Epod. 12. 23 magis quem diligeret mulier sua quam te (of lovers); and mea puella of Lesbia in 2. 1 and often.

2. non si: see 69. 3 n. — Iuppiter ipse petat: cf. 72. 2; Plaut. Cas. 302 negaui enim ipsi me [Casinam uxorem] concessurum Ioui; Ov. Met. VII. 801 nec Iouis illa meo thalamos praeferret amori. 3 f. Cf. Soph. Frag. 741 n. ὅρκους ἐγὼ γυναικὸς εἰς ὕδωρ γράφω; Plat. Phaedr. 276 οὐκ ἄρα σπουδῇ αὐτὰ ἐν ὕδατι γράψει, and frequent examples in the Greek; Aug. Ciu. Dei XIX. 23 magis poteris in aqua impressis litteris scribere . . . quam pollutae reuoces impiae uxoris sensum; also 30. 10 n., and the epitaph of Keats, Here lies one whose name was writ in water.

71. A puzzling bit of coarseness addressed, perhaps in a satirical tone (cf. v. 4 n. a te), to an unnamed and unknown man (cf. in this respect cc. 78[b] and 104). Perhaps, however, the aemulus (v. 3) is Caelius Rufus (cf. c. 69).

1. iure bono, justly; apparently with the meaning of the familiar iure optimo, though not found elsewhere. The conjunction of iure with merito, as here (v. 2), was common; cf. Plaut. Most. 713 te ipse iure optumo merito incuses licet; Cic. Cat. III. 6. 14 merito ac iure laudantur; Juv. 2. 34 iure ac merito uitia ultima fictos contemnunt Scauros. — sacer, cursed; cf. 14. 12. — alarum hircus: cf. 69. 6 n. — obstitit: i.e. hindered him from being an attractive lover, while the gout hindered him from being a happy one.

2. tarda podagra, the limping gout, the adjective being used in

Aemulus iste tuus, qui uestrum exercet amorem,
Mirifice est a te nactus utrumque malum.
Nam quotiens futuit totiens ulciscitur ambos :
Illam adfligit odore, ipse perit podagra.

72.

Dicebas quondam solum te nosse Catullum,
Lesbia, nec prae me uelle tenere Iouem.
Dilexi tum te non tantum ut uulgus amicam,
Sed pater ut gnatos diligit et generos.
Nunc te cognoui : quare etsi impensius uror, the factitive sense; cf. Hor. Sat. I. 9. 32 tarda podagra. — secat, torments; cf. Mart. IX. 92. 9 tortorem metuis? podagra cheragraque secatur Gaius.

3. qui uestrum exercet amorem: if it be true that there are no cases so early as this period of uester for tuus, the meaning must be somewhat as follows: 'your rival has usurped your place entirely, and now himself enjoys all that love shared mutually by you and your mistress (uestrum) before she was corrupted.' But the passage is at best unsatisfactory. With exercet amorem cf. 61. 235 exercete iuuentam; 68. 66 exerceremus amores.

4. a te nactus: i.e. in succeeding to your place in the affections of your mistress he has also succeeded to your diseases, and thereby brings upon himself and her the punishment due to false friend and faithless mistress. In the character of the consolation administered there seems to be a back-handed slap for the person addressed, in implying that he was himself thus afflicted with diseases arising from habits of dissipation.

6. podăgra: but v. 2 podāgra; with the variation in quantity of the syllable containing a short vowel before a mute and a liquid cf. Lucr. IV. 1222 quae pătribus pătres tradunt ab stirpe profecta; Verg. Aen. II. 663 gnatum ante ora pătris, pătrem qui obtruncat ad aras; Hor. Carm. I. 32. 11, 12 et Lycum nīgris oculis nĭgroque | crine decorum; Ov. Met. XIII. 607 et primo similis uolŭcri, mox uera uolucris.

72. An address to Lesbia written after the poet had become convinced of her unworthiness, and showing more, perhaps, than any other one poem the pure sentiment of his passion for her (in vv. 3 and 4). With the theme cf. cc. 75 and 85.

1 f. A reminiscence of 70. 1 f. — nosse: sensu uenerio.

2. tenere: sc. complexu; cf. 64. 28.

3. dilexi: doubtless chosen here to indicate pure sentiment as distinguished from physical passion, though diligere sometimes has the same meaning as amare, as in 6. 5; 81. 2.

4. generos: i.e. generum et nurum, as gnatos is equivalent to filium filiamque, and 63. 59 genitoribus to patre et matre.

5. impensius uror: in spite of his better knowledge of her char-

Multo mi tamen es uilior et leuior.
Qui potis est? inquis. Quod amantem iniuria talis
Cogit amare magis, sed bene uelle minus.

73.

Desine de quoquam quicquam bene uelle mereri
Aut aliquem fieri posse putare pium.
Omnia sunt ingrata, nihil fecisse benigne:
Immo etiam taedet, taedet obestque magis:
Vt mihi, quem nemo grauius nec acerbius urget
Quam modo qui me unum atque unicum amicum habuit.

acter, his passion continues to grow, and overmasters his judgment. But the fact that he recognizes this shows at least a possibility of recovery. Cf. c. 85; Ter. Eun. 70 ff. nunc ego et illam scelestam esse et me miserum sentio et taedet; et amore ardeo.

7. potis est: sc. fieri, as in 42. 16; 76. 16, 24. potis stands here before a vowel for pote, as in 76. 24.

8. bene uelle, to respect; cf. 75. 3.

73. A disheartened complaint concerning the ingratitude and faithlessness of some friend, perhaps of Caelius Rufus, whose rivalry with Catullus in the affections of Lesbia is referred to in c. 77. Cf. also Intr. 21.

1. quicquam modifies bene mereri, while uelle depends upon desine.

2. aliquem: instead of quemquam, as if repeated from the form of direct discourse aliquis fieri pius possit. — fieri = esse; cf. 80. 2 fiant. — pium, grateful; cf. Ov. Trist. V. 4. 43 pro quibus adfirmat fore se memoremque piumque; Cic. Fam. I. 9. 1 cum illud ipsum grauissimum et sanctissimum nomen pietatis leuius mihi meritis erga me tuis esse uideatur.

3. omnia sunt ingrata: cf. Plaut. Asin. 136 f. ingrata atque irrita esse omnia intellego quae dedi et quod bene feci. With ingrata in this sense cf. 64. 103 n. — nihil (sc. est), 'tis of no avail to have done deeds of kindness; cf. Ter. And. 314 id 'aliquid' nil est; Cic. Fam. VII. 33. 1 nos enim plane nihil sumus.

5. ut mihi: sc. obest.

6. unum atque unicum: cf. Gell. XVIII. 4. 2 se unum et unicum lectorem esse; Apul. Met. IV. 31 idque unum et pro omnibus unicum. The succession of elisons in this verse is noteworthy; cf. Intr. 86 a.

74.

Gellius audierat patruum obiurgare solere,
Si quis delicias diceret aut faceret.
Hoc ne ipsi accideret, patrui perdepsuit ipsam
Vxorem et patruum reddidit Harpocratem.
Quod uoluit fecit : nam, quamuis irrumet ipsum
Nunc patruum, uerbum non faciet patruus.

75.

Huc est mens deducta tua, mea Lesbia, culpa,
Atque ita se officio perdidit ipsa suo,

74. The first in arrangement, though apparently not in time of composition, of seven virulent invectives directed against a rival (cf. c. 91) named Gellius. The other six poems are cc. 80, 88, 89, 90, 91, 116. See Intr. 72.

1. patruum: proverbially among the Romans the stern and rigorous relative; cf. Cic. Cael. 11. 25 fuit in hac causa pertristis quidam patruus, censor, magister; Hor. Carm. III. 12. 3 metuentes patruae uerbera linguae; Sat. II. 3. 87 siue ego praue seu recte hoc uolui, ne sis patruus mihi.

2. delicias: cf. 45. 24; 68. 26; 2. 1 n. deliciae.

3. perdepsuit: ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

4. patruum reddidit Harpocratem: i.e. made him the very picture of silence; for the Egyptian deity Horus, the rising sun, is called in the Osiris myths Harpocrates (i.e. the child Har), and is often represented with the left forefinger laid upon the lips, as if to enjoin silence; cf. the cut in Rawlinson's Anc. Egypt, vol. I., chap. 10; also Varr. L. L. V. 57 etsi Harpocrates digito significat ut taceam. The phrase is parodied in Anth. Lat. 159. 6 Riese, 346. 6 Baehrens.

75. Another address to Lesbia, resembling in tone, and agreeing in time with cc. 72 and 85. There is no good reason for believing, with Scaliger and some later critics, that these verses are the conclusion of c. 87, from which they were accidently severed in the life of the archetype. The poem is complete and satisfactory in itself, while a union with c. 87 would necessitate the substitution of nunc for huc (with Scaliger and one interpolated MS.) and of diducta for deducta (with Lachmann), contrary to the MSS.

1. mea Lesbia: the use even here of the earlier affectionate address is in accord with the declaration that love for her still dominates him; cf. 87. 2.

2. se perdidit: i.e. by devotion to her (suo officio) through good and ill his reason has so far suffered that he is no longer in a normal mental condition, and cannot be consistent, and cease to love when he has ceased to respect,

Vt iam nec bene uelle queat tibi, si optuma fias,
Nec desistere amare, omnia si facias.

76.

Si qua recordanti benefacta priora uoluptas
Est homini, cum se cogitat esse pium,
Nec sanctam uiolasse fidem, nec foedere in ullo
Diuum ad fallendos numine abusum homines,
Multa parata manent in longa aetate, Catulle,
Ex hoc ingrato gaudia amore tibi.
Nam quaecumque homines bene cuiquam aut dicere possunt
Aut facere, haec a te dictaque factaque sunt:
Omnia quae ingratae perierunt credita menti.
Quare cur tu te iam amplius excrucies?

3 f. Cf. 72. 7, 8. — si optuma fias: all confidence in her has been irrevocably lost, so that no change in her character could make him believe her true.

4. omnia: for quidlubet; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 3. 25 audax omnia perpeti.

76. A prayer to be cured of love for the unworthy Lesbia. On its chronological position in the cycle of Lesbia poems see Intr. 41.

1. priora: as man with increasing age (v. 5 in longa aetate) is more inclined to review the course of his past life.

2. pium: explained by v. 3 f.

3 f. nec sanctam uiolasse fidem: of fidelity in all relations with one's fellow-men. — nec foedere . . . homines: of practical reverence for the gods, toward whom, as witnesses to an oath, obligation exists.

5. parata manent tibi: i.e. are from now on yours to enjoy; on manere with the dative cf. 8. 15 n. tibi manet. In his despair Catullus speaks as if the chapter of his active life were closed, and nothing were left him but the reminiscent period of old age.

6. ingrato: in the passive sense; i.e. his love and faithfulness had won no return; cf. 64. 103 n. ingrata munuscula; but in the active sense in v. 9.

7. cuiquam: one of the less frequent cases where quisquam occurs when no negative is either used or implied; but perhaps here the preceding quaecumque suggesting an idea of contingency (= si qua) is sufficient to prompt the use of cuiquam.

9. ingratae . . . menti: cf. 65. 16 f.; the adjective is here active, and not passive as in v. 6.

10. tu: the conjecture of Schoell in adding this word is more satisfactory than the awkward transposition to iam te cur. The omission

Quin tu animo offirmas atque istinc teque reducis
Et dis inuitis desinis esse miser?
Difficile est longum subito deponere amorem;
Difficile est, uerum hoc qua libet efficias.
Vna salus haec est, hoc est tibi peruincendum;
Hoc facias, siue id non pote siue pote.
O di, si uestrum est misereri, aut si quibus unquam
Extremam iam ipsa in morte tulistis opem,
Me miserum adspicite et, si uitam puriter egi,
Eripite hanc pestem perniciemque mihi!
Hei mihi subrepens imos ut torpor in artus
Expulit ex omni pectore laetitias.
Non iam illud quaero, contra ut me diligat illa, of tu by the copyist was of course due to te standing next.

11. animo offirmas: a phrase apparently not occurring elsewhere, though approximated by, e.g., Plaut. Merc. 82 animum offirmo meum; Ter. Eun. 217 censen posse me offirmare perpeti; Ov. Met. IX. 745 quin animum firmas teque ipsa recolligis; Plin. Ep. VII. 27. 8 offirmare animum. — -que: correlative with v. 12 et; the recovered soul-courage is to be shown by abandoning once for all his unworthy passion, and, as a consequence, by regaining his peace of mind. With -que appended to the second word of its clause cf. 57. 2. — te reducis: expressions of the same meaning are 8. 9 tu quoque noli; 30. 9 retrahis te.

12. dis inuitis: i.e. it is his own choice and not the will of the gods that keeps him in his present state of wretchedness; cf. the appeal in vv. 17 ff. — desinis esse miser: cf. 8. 1 desinas ineptire; 8. 10 nec miser uiue.

13. longum amorem: the connection with Lesbia had extended over four or five years.

14. qua libet, no matter how; cf. 40. 6.

16. pote: sc. est fieri; cf. 17. 24 n.; 42. 16.

17. si: not as intimating a possible doubt, but, as in the following clause si unquam, suggesting nunc potissimum; cf. 96. 1; 102. 1.

18. extremam, etc.: cf. Verg. Aen. II. 447; XI. 846 extrema iam in morte.

19. puriter: explained by v. 3 f. On the form see 39. 14 n.

20. pestem perniciemque: i.e. the deadly disease of v. 25 (cf. 75. 2). The union of the two alliterated words is common; cf. Cic. Cat. I. 13. 33 cum tua peste ac pernicie.

21. hei: with MS. seu for hei cf. 77. 4 si for hei. — subrepens ut torpor, like a creeping palsy. — imos artus: cf. 64. 93 imis medullis; 35. 15 interiorem medullam.

23. contra diligat, love in return; cf. Plaut. Mil. 101 is amabat meretricem, et illa illum contra.

Aut, quod non potis est, esse pudica uelit:
Ipse ualere opto et taetrum hunc deponere morbum.
O di, reddite mi hoc pro pietate mea.

77.

Rufe mihi frustra ac nequiquam credite amice
(Frustra? immo magno cum pretio atque malo),
Sicine subrepsti mi atque intestina perurens
Hei misero eripuisti omnia nostra bona?
Eripuisti, eheu nostrae crudele uenenum
Vitae, eheu nostrae pestis amicitiae.

78.

Gallus habet fratres, quorum est lepidissima coniunx
Alterius, lepidus filius alterius.
Gallus homo est bellus: nam dulces iungit amores,
Cum puero ut bello bella puella cubet.

24. potis: before a vowel for pote, as in 72. 7.

77. Like c. 73, addressed probably to M. Caelius Rufus. Cf. Intr. 59.

1. frustra: often of a finally unproductive investment; nequiquam, of one hopeless from the very beginning. — credite, believed; cf. Verg. Aen. II. 247 [Cassandra] non unquam credita Teucris.

2. With the rhetorical figure (epanorthosis) in frustra . . . frustra? immo, etc., cf. Cic. Cat. I. 1. 2 hic tamen uiuit. uiuit? immo, etc. — magno cum pretio: cf. 40. 8 cum longa poena.

4. hei misero: cf. 68. 92, 93. — omnia nostra bona: i.e. Lesbia's love; cf. 68. 158 omnia bona; nostra is for mea, with a change from the singular personal pronoun in the preceding verse like that in 91. 1, 2; 116. 5, 6.

6. nostrae: i.e. the mutual friendship of Catullus and Rufus. With the change from the singular meaning in the preceding verse cf. 68. 94, 95.

78. A finely-pointed epigram directed against a man otherwise unknown.

1. lepidissima: like v. 2 lepidus, of physical rather than of mental characteristics; cf. 1. 1 lepidum libellum; Ter. Heaut. 1060 tibi dabo illam lepidam quam tu facile ames.

3. bellus: here of the charming politeness of a man of society training and discrimination; cf. 22. 9 n.

4. bello bella: synonymous with lepidissima . . . lepidus above, as the similar conjunction shows. —

Gallus homo est stultus nec se uidet esse maritum,
Qui patruus patrui monstret adulterium.

78ᵇ.

. . . . . .
. . . . . .
Sed nunc id doleo quod purae pura puellae
Sauia comminxit spurca saliua tua.
Verum id non impune feres: nam te omnia saecla
Noscent et qui sis fama loquetur anus.

puella: of a youthful matron; cf. the frequent application of the same word to Lesbia.

5. Gallus . . . stultus: an abrupt correction of the commendation in v. 3; instead of having a fine sense of the fitness of things, Gallus has no sense at all.

6. qui, etc.: i.e. in helping his nephew to dishonor another uncle he prompts him to practice upon his teacher. The clause modifies se and not maritum.

78ᵇ. It is evident that these verses lack an introduction, but quite as clear that (as Statius decided) they cannot be the ending of c. 78, which is admirably complete in itself. Scaliger would add them to c. 77; but (1) the tone of that reproachful hexastich is entirely different from the coarse bitterness of these verses; (2) Catullus would hardly think of Lesbia as an innocent girl, as in vv. 1, 2; (3) vv. 5, 6 seem to indicate that the person addressed is not named in the poem (cf. cc. 71 and 104), while in c. 77 and the group to which it belongs Rufus is expressly named. Nor does either c. 80, as Bergk thought, or c. 91, as was the opinion of Corradius de Allio, need any completion at all, still less such a completion as these verses would afford. It seems best to regard them as a fragment of an independent poem, from the beginning of which certain verses are lost. These, which need not be more than two, apparently contained a conditional sentence embodying some sentiment like 'if you were a man of cleanly life, I would not object to your amour' (cf. 21. 9, 10 si faceres satur, tacerem: nunc ipsum id doleo, quod, etc.).

3. puellae: apparently not Lesbia (see note above).

4. sauia: here, as sometimes oscula, of the lips; cf. Plaut. Mil. 94 maiorem partem uideas ualgis sauiis; Gell. XIX. 11. 4 dum semihiulco sauio meo puellum sauior. — comminxit, etc.: cf. 99. 10.

5. id non impune feres: of stealing and carrying off something without challenge; cf. 99. 3; 14. 16.

6. fama loquetur anus: cf. 68. 46 n. charta loquatur anus.

79.

Lesbius est pulcher: quid ni? quem Lesbia malit
Quam te cum tota gente, Catulle, tua.
Sed tamen hic pulcher uendat cum gente Catullum,
Si tria notorum sauia reppererit.

80.

Quid dicam, Gelli, quare rosea ista labella
Hiberna fiant candidiora niue,

79. Against his rival Lesbius; written after the final rupture with Lesbia.

1. Lesbius: surely P. Clodius Pulcher, the brother of Clodia 'Quadrantaria,' if Lesbia is this Clodia (cf. Intr. 28). The allusion in vv. 1, 2 must, therefore, be to that incestuous connection of which Cicero speaks (e.g. Pis. 28; Sest. 16; Har. Resp. 42, 59). — pulcher: Cicero plays on this well-known cognomen of P. Clodius in Att. I. 16. 10 surgit pulchellus puer; and similarly in II. 1. 4 and II. 22. 1. — quid ni, etc.: i.e. to be sure, since Lesbia's preference is proof sufficient of it. The play is on pulcher as a true descriptive adjective, and as also the cognomen of Lesbia's brother; the intimation being that the very fact that he is her brother gives him added attraction in her eyes as a paramour; cf. the ascription of a similar taste for enormities to Gellius in 91. 5, 6.

2. quam te: since he is pulcher (i.e. a beauty), and you are not. — cum tota gente tua: since he is Pulcher (i.e. an eminent Claudian), and you are a nobody.

3. tamen hic pulcher: i.e. in spite of his being beautiful and of high birth. — uendat: apparently a colloquial expression of superior worth, like our 'he can buy and sell me.' The phrase comes from the sale of the goods of an insolvent debtor. — Catullum: for bona Catulli; cf. Juv. 3. 33 praebere caput domina uenale sub hasta.

4. si tria, etc.: i.e. if peradventure he can find even so few as three acquaintances who will accept the common friendly greeting from his lips. The allusion is doubtless to the defilement of his lips by unnatural lust; cf. Cicero ll. cc. — tria: of an indefinitely small number; cf. Plaut. Trin. 963 te tribus uerbis uolo, and often. — notorum, acquaintances; cf. Caes. B. C. I. 74. 5 hi suos notos hospitesque quaerebant; Hor. Sat. I. 1. 85 uicini oderunt, noti, pueri atque puellae. Others, reading with G, natorum, understand the reference to be to the ius trium liberorum of so much importance later (the implication being that Clodius was impotent). But there is no indication that at this time the lack of three children was a political disadvantage, and Clodius had a son and a daughter (Drumann Gesch. Roms II. p. 385 f.), both young at the time of his death.

80. See introductory note to c. 74.

1. rosea: Gellius is apparently youthful; cf. 45. 12 n. purpureo ore.

2. fiant: for sint; cf. 73. 2 fieri.

Mane domo cum exis et cum te octaua quiete
E molli longo suscitat hora die?
Nescio quid certe est: an uere fama susurrat
Grandia te medii tenta uorare uiri?
Sic certe est: clamant Victoris rupta miselli
Ilia, et emulso labra notata sero.

81.

Nemone in tanto potuit populo esse, Iuuenti,
Bellus homo quem tu diligere inciperes
Praeterquam iste tuus moribunda ab sede Pisauri
Hospes inaurata pallidior statua?

— candidiora niue: cf. Hom. Il. X. 437 [ἵπποι] λευκότεροι χιόνος; Verg. Aen. XII. 84 [equi] qui candore niues anteirent; Ov. Pont. II. 5. 37 [pectora] lacte et non calcata candidiora niue.

3. quiete: i.e. the midday siesta; cf. 32. 3; 61. 118.

4. longo die, well along in the day; contrasted with v. 3 mane.

7. sic certe est: cf. 62. 8 n. — clamant: cf. 6. 7 n. — Victoris: otherwise unknown. — rupta ilia: cf. 11. 20.

81. A poem of the Juventian cycle (cf. introductory note to c. 15), and, like c. 24, a remonstrance addressed to Juventius for his intimacy, this time with a certain Pisaurian who was his host. This last circumstance would seem to point to Aurelius (c. 15), and the supposition is further strengthened by the facts that Aurelius and Furius were intimately associated in the mind of Catullus; that he broke friendship with both; that the cause of the break with at least Furius was his intimacy with Juventius; that Aurelius was at least an object of suspicion and warning on the same score. Bruner finds this idea confirmed by a possible play upon the name of Aurelius in v. 4 inaurata.

2. bellus homo: such a lover Juventius also found in Furius; cf. 24. 7 f.

3. Pisauri: Pisaurum (now Pesaro) was an Umbrian town on the Adriatic planted as a Roman colony B.C. 184 (cf. Liv. XXXIX. 44). Plutarch (Ant. 60) reports that the town was swallowed up by an earthquake just before the battle of Actium. The previous settlement there of a number of military colonists by Antony (Plut. l.c.) may have been an attempt to check the decay (moribunda sede) noted by Catullus.

4. inaurata statua: gilded statues were common in Rome at a later date, the second supplement to the Notitia (written in the first half of the fourth century A.D.) mentioning eighty of gods alone. This number is understood to be exclusive of statues in temples and other shrines. With the comparison cf. 64. 100 n.

Qui tibi nunc cordi est, quem tu praeponere nobis
Audes et nescis quod facinus facias.

82.

Quinti, si tibi uis oculos debere Catullum
Aut aliud si quid carius est oculis,
Eripere ei noli multo quod carius illi
Est oculis seu quid carius est oculis.

83.

Lesbia mi praesente uiro mala plurima dicit:
Haec illi fatuo maxima laetitia est.
Mule, nihil sentis. Si nostri oblita taceret,
Sana esset: nunc quod gannit et obloquitur,

5. cordi est: cf. 44. 3 n.

6. nescis, etc.: perhaps the idea is that Nemesis will avenge the slighted love of Catullus (cf. 50. 20 n.), or simply that Catullus by great and continued kind services has a strong claim upon the gratitude and affection of Juventius. But the offense of slighting love was often exaggerated by the poets. With facinus facias cf. 110. 4 n.

82. An appeal to Quintius not to rob the poet of Lesbia. This Quintius is probably the lover of Aufilena in c. 100, and now, like his friend Caelius Rufus, has joined the ranks of Lesbia's lovers, and thus aroused the indignation of Catullus.

2. si quid est, etc.: cf. 13. 10 n. — carius oculis: cf. 3. 5 n.

3. ei: here monosyllabic.

4. seu: for uel si, as in 13. 10.

83. On the evidence of Lesbia's love for him. Written at least before 59 B.C. (when Q. Metellus Celer, the husband of Clodia, died) and probably to be placed among the earliest of the poems concerning Lesbia (see Intr. 16). With the theme cf. c. 92; Prop. IV. 8 passim; Ov. Rem. Am. 647 f.

1. mi praesente uiro: it does not follow, however, that Catullus was himself present; but the epigram may have been sent to Lesbia on hearing of the incident from others, and may date from the period when he was first paying court to her. — mala dicit: cf. Plaut. Men. 717 omnia mala ingerebat, quemquem aspexerat; Tib. I. 2. 11 mala siqua tibi dixit.

2. fatuo: cf. 98. 2 n. fatuis.

3. mule: not common as a synonym for a fellow of persistent dullness; but cf. Juv. 16. 23 mulino corde Vagelli.

4. sana: i.e. free from the passion of love; cf. Verg. Aen. IV. 8 [Dido] adloquitur male sana sororem; Tib. IV. 6. 18 uritur nec sana fuisse uelit. — gannit: strictly of Non solum meminit, sed, quae multo acrior est res,

Irata est : hoc est, uritur et loquitur.

84.

Chommoda dicebat, si quando commoda uellet
Dicere, et insidias Arrius hinsidias,
Et tum mirifice sperabat se esse locutum
Cum quantum poterat dixerat hinsidias.
Credo, sic mater, sic liber auunculus eius,
Sic maternus auus dixerat atque auia.

the snarling of a dog; cf. Non. 450. 11 gannire cum sit proprie canum; Ter. Ad. 556 quid ille gannit? quid uolt? Juv. 6. 64 Appula gannit.

5. acrior, more to the point.

6. uritur: of the passion of love; cf. Hor. Carm. I. 13. 8 quam lentis penitus macerer ignibus; uror, etc.; 2. 8 n. ardor. — et, and therefore; introducing a result of the preceding fact; cf. Plaut. Asin. 447 audio et quiesco.

84. A jest at the tendency to aspiration in pronunciation of a certain Arrius, perhaps the Quintus Arrius mentioned by Cicero (Brut. 242) as an orator of low birth and poor parts, who by time-serving had won some success. He was especially a follower of M. Crassus, but his career as an orator was wrecked by the time-limit imposed upon pleas by the Pompeian law of 52 B.C. — The tendency of the age toward excessive aspiration is noticed by Cicero in his Orat. 160, and was discussed by Caesar in his (lost) De Analogia; see also Quint. I. 5. 20, who cites this poem of Catullus. The skit was perhaps written in 55 B.C. (cf. v. 7 n.).

1. uellet: the subjunctive imperfect in the protasis of a general condition with the imperfect indicative in the apodosis is a construction rarely found in writers of the republican period, though it is not infrequent in Livy and later writers.

3. sperabat, used to flatter himself.

4. quantum poterat: i.e. with so great an effort after distinctness and precision that he fairly shouted the words out at the top of his voice.

5 f. The point of these two parenthetical verses (cf. the verse introduced by credo in 2. 8) seems to be that this super-aspiration was considered to be a characteristic of low-born and uneducated people (Gell. XIII. 6. 3); and as the relations cited are all on the mother's side, it looks as though the ancestry of Arrius in the female line had already been the subject of jest among his acquaintances (cf. Cicero's remark concerning him in Brut. 243 infimo loco natus). The point of liber as an adjective and not a proper name is then clear, if infimo loco be understood of the condition of slavery: his maternal uncle (perhaps only one of his uncles on that side) was a libertus, and the social standing of the entire family is thus indicated.

Hoc misso in Syriam requierant omnibus aures :
Audibant eadem haec leniter et leuiter,
Nec sibi postilla metuebant talia uerba,
Cum subito adfertur nuntius horribilis
Ionios fluctus, postquam illuc Arrius isset,
Iam non Ionios esse, sed Hionios.

85.

Odi et amo. Quare id faciam fortasse requiris.
Nescio, sed fieri sentio et excrucior.

86.

Quintia formosa est multis, mihi candida, longa,
Recta est. Haec ego sic singula confiteor,

7. misso : sc. on some public service; perhaps with his friend Crassus, who assumed the governorship of Syria in 55 B.C.

8. audibant: with the form cf. 64. 319 n. custodibant. — leniter et leuiter: i.e. though the people left behind misused aspirates, they did not at any rate bellow out so horribly their mispronunciations.

9. postilla : a word of older Latin for the later postea, perhaps, however, still used colloquially in the time of Catullus.

11. Ionios fluctus: that part of the Mediterranean Sea lying west and northwest of Greece, and hence the first sea encountered by Arrius on his journey. The report of its fate was, then, but a foretaste of what was to come to the Romans who had hoped for relief on the departure of Arrius.

85. An epigram on his own feeling for Lesbia; written at about the same time with cc. 72 and 75.

1. odi et amo: cf. Ov. Am. II. 4. 5 odi nec possum cupiens non esse quod odi.

2. nescio, etc.: cf. Mart. I. 32 Non amo te, Sabidi, nec possum dicere quare : hoc tantum possum dicere, non amo te ; and its imitation by Tom Brown, I do not love thee, Dr. Fell, etc.

86. On the inferiority of Quintia to Lesbia. Cf. also c. 43. Quintia is evidently not the sister of the Quintius of cc. 82 and 100; for this poem dates from the time of the faith of Catullus in Lesbia, at which time Quintius was his friend (cf. c. 100). With the sentiment cf. Petron. ap. Poet. Lat. Min. IV. 89 Baehrens non est forma satis, etc.

1. candida, longa, recta: these being characteristics of typical female beauty, as of that of the goddesses; cf. Ov. Am. II. 4. 33 tu, quia tam longa es, ueteres heroidas aequas ; Hor. Sat. I. 2. 123 f. candida rectaque sit, munda hactenus, ut neque longa nec magis alba uelit,

Totum illud 'formosa' nego: nam nulla uenustas,
Nulla in tam magno est corpore mica salis.
Lesbia formosa est, quae cum pulcherrima tota est,
Tum omnibus una omnis subripuit Veneres.

87.

Nulla potest mulier tantum se dicere amatam
Vere, quantum a me Lesbia amata mea es:
Nulla fides ullo fuit unquam in foedere tanta
Quanta in amore tuo ex parte reperta mea est.

88.

Quid facit is, Gelli, qui cum matre atque sorore
Prurit et abiectis peruigilat tunicis?
Quid facit is patruum qui non sinit esse maritum?
Ecquid scis quantum suscipiat sceleris?
Suscipit, o Gelli, quantum non ultima Tethys
Nec genitor nympharum abluit Oceanus:

quam dat natura, uideri; Tennyson Princess, A daughter of the gods, divinely tall, and most divinely fair.

3. uenustas: cf. 3. 1 n. Veneres.

4. mica salis: cf. Mart. VII. 25 nullaque mica salis nec amari fellis in illis [uersibus] gutta sit.

6. Veneres: cf. Plaut. Stich. 278 amoenitates omnium Venerum et uenustatum adfero; Quint. X. 1. 79 Isocrates omnes dicendi Veneres sectatus est.

87. A fragment, written on losing faith in Lesbia, and resembling in tone 75. 3–4. Scaliger sought vainly to complete it by affixing c. 75 (q.u.).

1 f. Cf. 8. 5; 37. 12 amata tantum quantum amabitur nulla.

4. tuo: cf. 64. 253 n. tuo amore. — ex parte mea: not as contrasted with Lesbia in her faithlessness, — the phrase in amore tuo precludes that, — but as contrasted with the mere wanton passion of Lesbia's new lovers.

88. On the crimes of Gellius; cf. c. 74.

1. matre: perhaps his stepmother only; cf. Intr. 72.

5. ultima: i.e. to her farthest bounds. — Tethys: cf. 64. 29 n.; 66. 70.

6. nec abluit: cf. Lucr. VI. 1077 non, mare si totum uelit eluere omnibus undis; Sen. Phaedr. 723 ff. quis eluet me Tanais? aut quae barbaris Maeotis undis Pontico incumbens mari? non ipse toto magnus oceano pater tantum expiarit sce-

Nam nihil est quicquam sceleris quo prodeat ultra,
Non si demisso se ipse uoret capite.

89.

Gellius est tenuis : quid ni ? cui tam bona mater
Tamque ualens uiuat tamque uenusta soror
Tamque bonus patruus tamque omnia plena puellis
Cognatis, quare is desinat esse macer ?
Qui ut nihil attingat, nisi quod fas tangere non est,
Quantumuis quare sit macer inuenies.

90.

Nascatur magus ex Gelli matrisque nefando

Nam magus ex matre et gnato gignatur oportet,
Si uera est Persarum impia religio,
Gratus ut accepto ueneretur carmine diuos
Omentum in flamma pingue liquefaciens.

leris. — Oceanus : with this conjunction of Oceanus with Tethys cf. Hom. Il. XIV. 201 Ὠκεανόν τε, θεῶν γένεσιν, καὶ μητέρα Τηθύν.

7. nihil quicquam : a not infrequent expression in the comedians; cf. Plaut. Bacch. 1036 nihil ego tibi hodie consili quicquam dabo ; Ter. Andr. 90 comperiebam nil ad Pamphilum quicquam attinere.

8. non si : see 48. 5 n.

89. On the same theme as c. 88.

1. bona, obliging ; cf. 110. 1 bonae amicae.

3. bonus patruus : the expression finds an explanation in c. 74. — omnia plena : cf. Cic. Att. II. 24. 4 ita sunt omnia omnium miseriarum plenissima ; Verg. Geor. II. 4 tuis hic omnia plena muneribus ; Tib. I. 8. 54 lacrimis omnia plena madent.

90. On the same theme as the preceding.

4. Persarum : the practice of incestuous marriages among the Persian Magi is mentioned by Strabo XV. p. 735 τούτοις δὲ καὶ μητράσι συνέρχεσθαι πάτριον νενόμισται; cf. also Eurip. Androm. 173 ff. and scholia; Tert. Apol. p. 10 Persas cum suis matribus misceri Ctesias refert.

5. gratus accepto carmine : cf. 67. 26 n. — carmine : the litanies of these priests are also mentioned in Strabo XV. p. 733.

6. omentum, etc. : cf. Pers. 2. 47 in flammas iunicum omenta liquescant. — liquēfaciens : cf. Intr. 86 f.

91.

Non ideo, Gelli, sperabam te mihi fidum
In misero hoc nostro, hoc perdito amore fore
Quod te cognossem bene constantemue putarem
Aut posse a turpi mentem inhibere probro,
Sed neque quod matrem nec germanam esse uidebam
Hanc tibi cuius me magnus edebat amor;
Et quamuis tecum multo coniungerer usu,
Non satis id causae credideram esse tibi.
Tu satis id duxti: tantum tibi gaudium in omni
Culpa est in quacumque est aliquid sceleris.

92.

Lesbia mi dicit semper male nec tacet unquam
De me: Lesbia me dispeream nisi amat.
Quo signo? quia sunt totidem mea: deprecor illam
Adsidue, uerum dispeream nisi amo.

91. On the same theme as the preceding, but making clear the original grievance of Catullus against Gellius, that he was one of Lesbia's numerous lovers.

2. misero: cf. 68. 30 n. — nostro: for meo; with the change in the same sentence from mihi to nostro cf. 77. 3, 4; 116. 5, 6.

3. cognossem bene: cf. 61. 187 n. cognitae bene: the subjunctive indicates a possible reason, but marks it as contrary to fact; the indicative, in v. 5, states the real reason.

5 f. A bitter turn of irony, explained by cc. 88–90. — edebat: cf. 35. 15 edunt.

7 ff. quamuis, etc.: i.e. any misdoing (culpa) which has a spice of wickedness (sceleris) in it has a charm for Gellius, and if a chance to violate the most sacred ties of kindred is not at hand, the ties of friendship will do.

92. On the same theme as c. 83, and written about the same time.

1. dicit nec tacet: cf. 6. 3.

2. dispeream nisi: cf. Hor. Sat. I. 9. 47 dispeream ni summosses omnes; Verg. Cat. 9. 2 dispeream nisi me perdidit iste putus; Mart. XI. 90. 8 dispeream ni scis (where the expression is labeled as an antique).

3. totidem mea: Ellis takes these words to mean 'I have scored the same number of points' (i.e. my case is exactly the same), referring to the game of duodecim scripta described by Ovid in Art. Am. III. 363 ff.: but though the general meaning of the clause is clear, the precise interpretation is doubtful.

93.

Nil nimium studeo, Caesar, tibi uelle placere,
Nec scire utrum sis albus an ater homo.

94.

Mentula moechatur. Moechatur mentula certe.
Hoc est quod dicunt, ipsa olera olla legit.

95.

Zmyrna mei Cinnae nonam post denique messem
Quam coepta est nonamque edita post hiemem,

— deprecor, exsecrate; see the discussion of this use of the word by Catullus in Gell. VII. (VI.) 16.

93. Apparently a rude answer to some approaches by, or on behalf of, Julius Caesar. The date of its composition, even with reference to cc. 29 and 57, is doubtful; see Intr. 38. Cf. the remark of Quintilian XI. 1. 38 negat se magni facere aliquis poetarum 'utrum Caesar ater an albus homo sit,' insania; uerte, ut idem Caesar de illo dixerit, adrogantia est.

1. nimium: cf. 43. 4 n. — studeo uelle: with the pleonasm cf. Nep. Att. 4. 2 noli aduersum eos me uelle ducere; Cic. Dom. 146 nolite eum uelle esse priuatum (and Markland's note); Petron. 98 si Gitona tuum amas, incipe uelle seruare; Sen. Apoc. 14 incipit patronus uelle respondere.

2. nec scire, etc.: i.e. I have no interest in you whatever. — albus an ater: the expression is proverbial; cf. Cic. Phil. II. 41 uide quam te amarit is qui albus aterne fuerit ignoras; Phaedr. III. 15. 10 unde illa sciuit niger an albus nascerer? Apul. Apol. 16 etiam libenter te nuper usque albus an ater esses ignoraui.

94. A play on the name of a certain dissolute person called here, and in cc. 105, 114, and 115, Mentula. On his identification with the Mamurra mentioned in cc. 29, 41, 43, and 57, cf. 29. 13 n. and Intr. 73. The point of the epigram is, 'You say that Mentula is an adulterer. Why, of course. How could he be otherwise with such a name as his. 'Tis as natural as for a pot to gather in potherbs.'

2. hoc est quod dicunt: of a proverbial expression; cf. 100. 3.

95. On the enduring fame of the Zmyrna of C. Helvius Cinna, who was mentioned in 10. 29 f.; see also Intr. 63.

1. nonam, etc.: so also Quint. X. 4. 4 Cinnae Smyrnam nouem annis accepimus scriptam; Serv. on Verg. Ecl. 9. 35 quem libellum [Smyrnam] decem annis elimauit; cf. Hor. A. P. 388 nonum prematur in annum, membranis intus positis.

2. edita: sc. est, suggested from the preceding est.

Milia cum interea quingenta Hortensius uno
. . . . . .
Zmyrna cauas Satrachi penitus mittetur ad undas,
Zmyrnam cana diu saecula peruoluent.
At Volusi annales Paduam morientur ad ipsam
Et laxas scombris saepe dabunt tunicas.
Parua mei mihi sint cordi monumenta sodalis:
At populus tumido gaudeat Antimacho.

3. cum interea: cf. 64. 305. — milia quingenta: cf. 9. 2 n. — Hortensius: perhaps Q. Hortensius Ortalus, the poet and man of letters, to whom c. 65 is addressed; cf. Intr. 65. But the genuineness of the reading has often been doubted. — uno, etc.: sc. anno, or perhaps, as Haupt suggests, die (cf. Plut. Cic. 40). The simplest guess at the gist of the lost verse is that it contrasted the careless literary fecundity of Hortensius with Cinna's careful elaboration of merely a short poem. But others, troubled by the speedy introduction of Volusius, see in v. 4 a reference to him as the facile author of the myriads of verses, and to Hortensius only as his patron (cf. Crit. App.).

5. cauas, deep; cf. 17. 4 caua in palude. — Satrachi: a river of Cyprus, a favorite haunt of Aphrodite and Adonis, the son of Myrrha, or Zmyrna. The idea is that the poem of Cinna will be read in the depths of the distant island where its scene was laid. — penitus: i.e. far into the interior.

6. cana saecula, the hoary ages; so Martial of the distant past in VIII. 80. 2. — peruoluent: with diæresis; cf. Intr. 86 b.

7. Volusi annales: cf. c. 36. Why Catullus turns suddenly from Hortensius to Volusius it is impossible to say, in the lack of knowledge concerning the latter, between whom and Hortensius there may have been some definite connection. — Paduam: with the river Satrachus is here contrasted the branch of the Po called by Polybius (II. 16) Παδόα. Near this stream lay the birthplace of the Annals (as ipsam shows), and doubtless of Volusius himself.

8. laxas: as both fish and wrapping-paper were cheap, the parcel was not wrapped as neatly as it might have been. — scombris dabunt tunicas: cf. the reminiscence in Mart. IV. 86. 8 nec scombris tunicas dabis [libelle] molestas (also III. 2. 3; III. 50. 9); and on a similar fate for bad verses, Hor. Ep. II. 1. 269, et al. — saepe: for the Annals covered many pages, and would serve the fish-mongers a long time.

9. parua: of the length of the Zmyrna. — sodalis: cf. 10. 29.

10. populus: i.e. the οἱ πολλοί, who have no critical sense. — Antimacho: an epic poet of Colophon, who flourished about 400 B.C. He was proverbial among the ancients for wordiness; for a famous story about him see Cic. Brut. 191. Quintilian (X. 1. 53) remarks that he is generally accorded the second place among epic writers, but criticises his looseness and carelessness of style, which would be 96.

Si quicquam mutis gratum acceptumue sepulcris
Accidere a nostro, Calue, dolore potest,
Quo desiderio ueteres renouamus amores
Atque olim missas flemus amicitias,
Certe non tanto mors immatura dolori est
Quintiliae, quantum gaudet amore tuo.

97.

Non (ita me di ament) quicquam referre putaui
Vtrumne os an culum olfacerem Aemilio.
Nilo mundius hoc, nihiloque immundius illud,
Verum etiam culus mundior et melior:
Nam sine dentibus est. Hoc dentis sesquipedalis, unpardonable sins in the eyes of an Alexandrian like Catullus. But the comparison of Volusius to him here is plainly in respect of his voluminousness.

96. To Calvus on the death of his wife, Quintilia; cf. Intr. 60. From Propertius (III. 34. 89 f.) we learn that Calvus himself wrote a threnody on his loss.

1. si quicquam, etc.: the phrase is probably not intended as an expression of skepticism which might destroy the effect of the consolation, but to emphasize the apodosis following in v. 5 f.; cf. 76. 17 n. 102. 1. For more definite echoes of the prevailing agnosticism among the Romans regarding immortality cf. Sulpicius ap. Cic. Fam. IV. 5. 6; Tac. Agr. 46. — mutis sepulcris: cf. 101. 4 mutam cinerem. — gratum acceptumue: the conjunction of these adjectives is common; cf. also 90. 5 gratus ut accepto.

2. nostro: of men in general, — though Catullus had himself felt the need of similar consolation.

3 f. desiderio, etc.: in apposition with dolore, carrying on the idea with specification; cf. 2. 8 and note.

4. missas: not here, as frequently, of a thing voluntarily surrendered, but of one given up in obedience to a greater power; cf. 66. 29. — amicitias: of the sentiment rather than the passion of love; cf. 109. 6.

97. An exceedingly coarse epigram on a certain Aemilius, of whom nothing further is known.

1. ita me di ament: a colloquial form of asseveration; cf. Ter. Andr. 947 ita me di ament, credo; and similar phrases with iuuare in 61. 196; 66. 18. On the hiatus in arsis see Intr. 86 d.

3. hoc . . . illud: with this reference of hic to the former and ille to the latter of two items cf. 100. 3.

5. hoc: referring to os, as in v. 3.

Gingiuas uero ploxeni habet ueteris,
Praeterea rictum qualem diffissus in aestu
Meientis mulae cunnus habere solet.
Hic futuit multas et se facit esse uenustum,
Et non pistrino traditur atque asino?
Quem si qua attingit, non illam posse putemus
Aegroti culum lingere carnificis?

98.

In te, si in quemquam, dici pote, putide Victi,
Id quod uerbosis dicitur et fatuis:
Ista cum lingua, si usus ueniat tibi, possis
Culos et crepidas lingere carpatinas.
Si nos omnino uis omnes perdere, Victi,
Hiscas: omnino quod cupis efficies.

6. ploxeni: explained by Festus to mean a wagon-box (capsum in cisio capsaue), and said by Quintilian to be circumpadane (Gallic?) in origin; I. 5. 8 Catullus 'ploxenum' circa Padum inuenit. The comparison here may be of the wrinkled and fissured look of diseased gums to some peculiarity in shape of the ploxenum, or to its wrinkled and split rawhide covering.

10. pistrino, etc.: i.e. relegated to the occupation of the rudest slaves, that of driving the ass that turns the mill.

98. Against an unknown Victius, or Vittius (Haupt and a single interpolated MS.), or Vettius (Statius and many others). The man referred to may be L. Vettius, the Titus Oates of his time, who in B.C. 62 charged Julius Caesar with complicity in the conspiracy of Catiline (Suet. Iul. 17), and three years later trumped up against a number of leading senators a charge of conspiracy to assassinate Pompey. He was himself accused of forging his evidence, and was cast into prison, and died there. But though Vettius is a much more common name than either of the others, some mere loud-mouthed nonentity may be meant instead of the notorious Lucius Vettius.

2. fatuis: especially used of silly speakers, and distinguished from insulsus by Donatus (ad Ter. Eun. 1079 fatui sunt qui uerbis et dictis fatui sunt; insulsi uero corde et animo); cf. Serv. ad Verg. Aen. VII. 47 fatuos dicimus inconsiderate loquentes.

4. carpatinas: a rude shoe made from a single piece of hide and apparently worn only by the lowest classes.

5 f. si nos, etc.: i.e. such is our just fear of being addressed by your foul tongue that you have only to 99.

Subripui tibi, dum ludis, mellite Iuuenti,
Sauiolum dulci dulcius ambrosia.
Verum id non impune tuli: namque amplius horam
Suffixum in summa me memini esse cruce,
Dum tibi me purgo nec possum fletibus ullis
Tantillum uestrae demere saeuitiae.
Nam simul id factum est, multis diluta labella
Guttis abstersisti omnibus articulis,
Ne quicquam nostro contractum ex ore maneret,
Tanquam commictae spurca saliua lupae.
Praeterea infesto miserum me tradere Amori
Non cessasti omnique excruciare modo,
Vt mi ex ambrosia mutatum iam foret illud open your mouth to see us immediately drop dead. — omnino, out-and-out; modifying not omnes, but perdere; cf. v. 6 omnino efficies (but Cic. Inuent. 86 omnino omnis argumentatio).

99. On the cruelty of Juventius in shunning the poet's kisses. On Juventius cf. c. 15 and Intr. 37. This poem antedates c. 15 and the rest of the cycle immediately connected therewith.

2. dulci dulcius: cf. 22. 14 n. infaceto infacetior.

3. non impune tuli: cf. 78b. 5 non impune feres.

4. suffixum in cruce, kept upon the rack. The reference is perhaps to the punishment by impalement, rarer and more dreaded than the ordinary forms of crucifixion; cf. Sen. Cons. ad Marc. 20. 3 uideo istic cruces non unius quidem generis, sed aliter ab aliis fabricatas . . . alii per obscoena stipitem egerunt; Ep. 101. 12 suffigas licet et acutam sessuro crucem subdas. — summa: of the intensity of the torture; cf. Colum. I. 7. 2 summum ius antiqui summam putabant crucem.

6. tantillum, an atom. — uestrae saeuitiae: i.e. the cruelty that is peculiar to you and your like.

7. simul: sc. atque; cf. 22. 15 n. — id: with reference to the theft of the kiss.

8. guttis: sc. of water; cf. Lucr. VI. 942 saxa superne guttis manantibus stillent. — articulis, fingers, as occasionally in the elegiasts and later.

9. contractum: a technical word connected with contagious and infectious diseases.

10. Cf. 78b. 4. — lupae: a nickname for a prostitute; cf. Liv. I. 4. 7 sunt qui Larentiam uulgato corpore lupam inter pastores uocatam putent.

11. infesto tradere Amori: i.e. to hand me over as a captive to a merciless jailer, — the idea being that the boy's petulant anger made him more attractive than ever, and Saŭiolum tristi tristius elleboro.

Quam quoniam poenam misero proponis amori,
Nunquam iam posthac basia subripiam.

100.

Caelius Aufilenum et Quintius Aufilenam
Flos Veronensum depereunt iuuenum,
Hic fratrem, ille sororem. Hoc est quod dicitur illud
Fraternum uere dulce sodalicium.
Cui faueam potius? Caeli, tibi: nam tua nobis
Per facta exhibita est unica amicitia
Cum uesana meas torreret flamma medullas.
Sis felix, Caeli, sis in amore potens.

quickened, instead of quenching, the poet's passion.

14. tristi, bitter; cf. Anth. Pal. V. 29. 2 πικρότερον γίγνεται ἐλλεβόρου. On the collocation tristi tristius cf. 22. 14 n.

15 f. The poem concludes with a mock simplicity that allows the sportive character of the preceding complaints to be seen. — misero: cf. 91. 2 n.

16. basia: cf. 5. 7 n.

100. On the love of two friends for a certain brother and sister respectively. On Caelius see Intr. 59; Quintius is probably the Quintius of c. 82, but apparently not the brother of the Quintia of c. 86 (see introductory note to c. 86). Aufilenus is otherwise unknown, though to Aufilena are addressed cc. 110 and 111, in which she is accused of faithlessness as a mistress and of incest with an uncle. The lack of any apparent feeling against Aufilena in c. 100 leads to the supposition that it was written before cc. 110 and 111; but it is not necessary to suppose that its scene is laid at Verona, for v. 2 Veronensum indicates merely origin and not residence.

2. flos iuuenum: cf. 24. 1. — depereunt: see 35. 12 n.

3. hic: referring to the first-mentioned person, Caelius, while ille refers to Quintius; cf. the similar use of hoc and illud in 97. 3. — hoc est quod dicitur: cf. 94. 2.

5. cui faueam potius: i.e. in whose success shall I feel the most lively interest? With the question and answer cf. 1. 1 ff. cui is for utri, as occasionally in writers of this and the following periods.

6. per facta exhibita: the friendship may have been proved by withdrawing from rivalry with Catullus in his affair with Lesbia; but if Caelius be Caelius Rufus, we must suppose the withdrawal was but feigned, as Catullus afterward discovered; see Intr. l.c.

7. uesana flamma: of the love of the poet for Lesbia; cf. 7. 10 uesano Catullo. — torreret medullas: cf. 35. 15 n.

8. potens, successful; cf. Prop.

101.

Multas per gentes et multa per aequora uectus
Aduenio has miseras, frater, ad inferias,
Vt te postremo donarem munere mortis
Et mutam nequiquam adloquerer cinerem,
Quandoquidem fortuna mihi tete abstulit ipsum,
Heu miser indigne frater adempte mihi.
Nunc tamen interea haec, prisco quae more parentum
Tradita sunt tristi munere ad inferias,
Accipe fraterno multum manantia fletu
Atque in perpetuum, frater, aue atque uale.

III. 26. 21 quod tam mihi pulchra puella seruiat et tota dicar in urbe potens; and the fuller form in Ov. Met. VIII. 409 uoti potente.

101. An invocation accompanying offerings made at the tomb of the poet's brother in the Troad (cf. 65. 5 ff.; 68. 19 ff. 89 ff.). See Intr. 22.

1. multas, etc.: the exaggeration of the expression marks the intensity of the poet's grief over the distance that separated him from his brother's deathbed and tomb.

2. miseras: cf. 68. 30 n. — inferias: defined by Servius on Verg. Aen. X. 519 inferiae sunt sacra mortuorum, quod inferis soluuntur. Perhaps Catullus is now offering the cena nouemdialis, omitted perforce up to this time, since none of the family were present at the burial. In this case the offerings would be especially dishes of eggs, lentils, and salt, and the phrase in v. 9 multum manantia fletu would be quite in point, as it would not be if libations only were offered.

4. mutam cinerem: cf. 96. 1 mutis sepulcris. — adloquerer: cf. v. 10 n.

5. quandoquidem, etc.: cf. 64. 218 f. — tete: cf. 30. 7 tute.

6. Cf. 68. 20 and 92.

7. interea: with an imperative, indicating the relinquishment of the previous line of thought, at least for a season; cf. 14. 21; 36. 18; Ciris 44 ff. haec tamen interea . . . accipe dona meo multum uigilata labore. — haec: i.e. the offerings he came to bring; cf. v. 2 n.

8. tradita, offered; cf. with the collocation 65. 19 missum furtiuo munere; Tac. Ann. I. 62. 2 caespitem Caesar posuit gratissimo munere in defunctos. — ad inferias, as funeral offerings.

9. accipe, etc.: cf. Mart. VI. 85. 11 f. accipe cum fletu maesti breue carmen amici, atque haec absentis tura fuisse puta.

10. aue atque uale: the offerings are concluded with the final farewell that should have been spoken at the burial. The fullest form of this conclamatio was salue, uale, aue, but other forms are mentioned; cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 97 salue aeternum mihi, maxime Palla, aeternumque uale; Servius on Verg. Aen. II. 644; and the selection of forms occurring in inscriptions in the index to Wilmann's Exempla Inscr. Lat. II. p. 692.

102.

Si quicquam tacito commissum est fido ab amico
Cuius sit penitus nota fides animi,
Meque esse inuenies illorum iure sacratum,
Corneli, et factum me esse puta Harpocratem.

103.

Aut sodes mihi redde decem sestertia, Silo,
Deinde esto quamuis saeuus et indomitus:
Aut, si te nummi delectant, desine quaeso
Leno esse atque idem saeuus et indomitus.

104.

Credis me potuisse meae maledicere uitae,
Ambobus mihi quae carior est oculis?
Non potui, nec, si possem, tam perdite amarem:
Sed tu cum Tappone omnia monstra facis.

102. A pledge of secrecy to Cornelius, otherwise unknown: for he apparently was not Cornelius Nepos (cf. 1. 3), if we may judge anything from the tone of equality rather than of inferiority that prevails here; nor is it likely that he was the Brixian Cornelius (cf. 67. 35), for whom Catullus had no regard.

1. tacito: dative.

2. cuius: referring to tacito. — fides animi: on the pleonastic genitive cf. 2. 10 n. animi curas.

3. meque: for me quoque or et me. — illorum: i.e. tacitorum, apparently with a reference to initiation into the mysteries. — iure sacratum: i.e. initiatum.

4. Harpocratem: cf. 74. 4 n.

103. To an arrogant pander who had received a large sum for his services. Apparently the epigram is prompted by the manner of Silo's reception of some complaint on the part of Catullus.

1. sodes, pray; colloquial, and almost always with imperatives (from si audes for si audies). — decem sestertia: cf. 41. 2 n.

2. esto: cf. Juv. 5. 112 hoc fac et esto, esto diues tibi, pauper amicis.

4. idem: cf. 22. 3 n.

104. On the impossibility of his maligning Lesbia. Apparently written when he was beginning to hear of Lesbia's depravity; cf. 68. 135 ff., 159 ff. See Intr. 21.

1. meae uitae: cf. 109. 1; 45. 13; 68. 155.

2. carior oculis: cf. 3. 5 n.

3. non potui, etc.: however true this statement at the time of writing (cf. Intr. 24), Catullus found it possible later to love and hate 105.

Mentula conatur Pipleum scandere montem :
Musae furcillis praecipitem eiciunt.

106.

Cum puero bello praeconem qui uidet esse,
Quid credat, nisi se uendere discupere ?

107.

Si cui quid cupido optantique obtigit unquam
Insperanti, hoc est gratum animo proprie.

(c. 85), and to speak bitter enough words of Lesbia. — perdite amarem: cf. 45. 3.

4. Tappone : otherwise unknown, though the name is not rare in inscriptions. B. Schmidt, however, suggests that as Tappo was shown by Mommsen (Arch. Zeit. vol. XL. col. 176) to be a stock comic figure at Roman feasts, Catullus may here mean to reprove jestingly his unnamed friend for taking in earnest words of the poet about Lesbia let fall in ioco atque uino. — omnia monstra facis: i.e. you and Tappo are given to that scandalous gossip that makes mountains out of mole-hills, and delights in fanning enmities between friends.

105. On the attempt of Mentula to become a poet. Concerning him cf. cc. 94, 114, 115, and Intr. 73, 74. He is sneered at as eruditulus also in 57. 7.

1. Pipleum montem: Pimpla (Pipla) was a region (with a hill and fountain) in the Macedonian district of Pieria, and was sacred to the Muses. — scandere: cf. Enn. Ann. 223 Vahl. neque Musarum scopulos quisquam superarat.

2. furcillis eiciunt: a proverbial expression for expulsion with violence and ignominy; cf. Hor. Ep. I. 10. 24 naturam expelles furca, tamen usque recurret; Cic. Att. XVI. 2. 4 sed, quoniam furcilla extrudimur, Brundisium cogito; Arist. Pax 637 τήνδε μὲν δικροῖς ἐώθουν τὴν θεὸν κεκράγμασιν.

106. On a boy walking with an auctioneer. Some critics, comparing 21. 5, have thought of Juventius and Furius; others, of Clodius; but the epigram may well be suggested by an accidental encounter on the street.

2. se: i.e. puerum, the implied subject of discupere. — discupere: of eager desire that searches for satisfaction in every direction (dis-); cf. Plaut. Trin. 932 quin discupio dicere; Cic. Fam. VIII. 15. 2 te uidere discupio.

107. On a visit of reconciliation from Lesbia. Apparently written after the period of temporary estrangement marked by c. 8. Cf. Intr. 19.

1. cupido : on the hiatus see Intr. 86 d.

2. proprie, genuinely; cf. Quint.

Quare hoc est gratum nobis quoque, carius auro,
Quod te restituis, Lesbia, mi cupido:
Restituis cupido atque insperanti, ipsa refers te
Nobis. O lucem candidiore nota!
Quis me uno uiuit felicior, aut magis hac res
Optandas uita dicere quis poterit?

108.

Si, Comini, populi arbitrio tua cana senectus
Spurcata impuris moribus intereat,
Non equidem dubito quin primum inimica bonorum
Lingua exsecta auido sit data uulturio,
Effossos oculos uoret atro gutture coruus,
Intestina canes, cetera membra lupi.

X. 1. 114 mira sermonis, cuius proprie studiosus fuit, elegantia.

3. carius auro: for similar expressions of estimated value cf. 3. 5 n.

6. lucem candidiore nota: cf. 68. 148 n.

7. quis, etc.: cf. 9. 10 n.

108. On a certain unpopular Cominius, perhaps one of two brothers from Spoletium, P. and C. or L. Cominius, who are mentioned by Cicero (Cluent. 100) as prosecutors. In the year 66 B.C. a popular tumult terrified them into giving up their prosecution of C. Cornelius, though one of them, in spite of general unpopularity, resumed it the following year, on which occasion Cornelius was defended by Cicero.

1. cana senectus: cf. 61. 162 cana anilitas.

2. spurcata impuris moribus: the hoary head that should be a crown of glory is to him but a mark of confirmed infamy.

3. bonorum: perhaps in the sense of optimatium (as often in Cicero), if this Cominius was one of the prosecutors.

4. lingua exsecta: cf. Cic. Cluent. 187 Stratonem in crucem esse actum exsecta scitote lingua. — sit data: perfect, followed by the present uoret, since the loss of the tongue, as a punishment for his perjuries, would be inflicted upon him before his execution and the throwing of his body to the crows and their associates. — uulturio: cf. 68. 124 n.

5. effossos oculos, etc.: cf. Vulg. Prouerb. 30. 17 oculum . . . effodiant eum corui de torrentibus, et comedant eum filii aquilae, Hor. Ep. I. 16. 48 non pasces in cruce coruos. With vv. 5 and 6 Statius compares Ov. Ib. 167 ff.

6. canes: cf. Hor. Epod. 17. 11 addictum feris alitibus atque canibus. — lupi: cf. Hor. Epod. 5. 99, 100 post insepulta membra different lupi et Esquilinae alites.

109.

Iucundum, mea uita, mihi proponis amorem
Hunc nostrum inter nos perpetuumque fore.
Di magni, facite ut uere promittere possit
Atque id sincere dicat et ex animo,
Vt liceat nobis tota perducere uita
Aeternum hoc sanctae foedus amicitiae.

110.

Aufilena, bonae semper laudantur amicae:
Accipiunt pretium quod facere instituunt.
Tu, quod promisti mihi, quod mentita, inimica es;

109. On Lesbia's wish for unbroken harmony between herself and Catullus. Apparently following c. 107 by a brief interval that has allowed the first joy of reconciliation to subside and give place to a less passionate feeling: for the tone of vv. 3 and 4 seems to indicate that the voyage has been not without some storms.

1. mea uita: cf. 104. 1; 45. 13; 68. 155. — proponis, proclaim, but with a suggestion of pledge rather than of mere prophecy; cf. Caes. B. G. V. 58. 5 magna proponit iis qui occiderint praemia; Cic. Tusc. V. 20 praemium proposuit qui inuenisset nouam uoluptatem.

3. di magni: here a true invocation, and not, as in 14. 12 and 53. 5, a mere expletive. Ellis compares Cic. Att. XVI. 1. 6 di faxint ut faciat ea quae promittit, — commune enim gaudium, — sed ego, etc.

5. perducere: Lachmann, following the early Italian editors, would read producere, on the ground that perducere occurs only when a limit is definitely set. But the MSS. of Prop. I. 3. 39 o utinam tales perducas, improbe, noctes seem to support this reading, and the omitted limit is easily supplied from tota uita.

6. sanctae amicitiae: of the pure sentiment rather than the passion of love; cf. 96. 4.

110. On the faithlessness of the courtesan, Aufilena, mentioned in c. 100 as the mistress of Quintius.

1. bonae, obliging; cf. 89. 1. So Tibullus (II. 4. 45) praises the courtesan bona quae nec auara fuit, and Horace's Cinara was bona (Carm. IV. 1. 3).

2. accipiunt, etc.: i.e. the price they set is willingly paid. — quod: see Crit. App. — facere, to set; cf. Plaut. Pers. 582 'Indica; fac pretium.' 'Tua merx est; tua indicatio est.'

3 ff. quod . . . quod: the first quod is probably a conjunction and the second a relative. In promising what she has not performed Aufilena has played the part of an inimica instead of an amica. (With quod as direct object of mentita cf. Prop. III. 17. 1 mentiri noctem.) Thus vv. 3 and 4 correspond verb

Quod nec das et fers saepe, facis facinus.
Aut facere ingenuae est, aut non promisse pudicae,
Aufilena, fuit : sed data corripere
Fraudando † efficit plus quam meretricis auarae,
Quae sese toto corpore prostituit.

III.

Aufilena, uiro contentam uiuere solo
Nuptarum laus e laudibus eximiis :
Sed cuiuis quamuis potius succumbere par est
Quam matrem fratres ex patruo parere.

112.

Multus homo est, Naso, neque tecum multus homo est qui Descendit : Naso, multus es et pathicus.

for verb, — promisti . . . nec das, she promises but does not perform, mentita . . . fers, she breaks her appointment but pockets the price. — promisti: cf. v. 5 promisse; 14. 14 n. misti.

4. saepe: for she had often received money from him, and hence ought to treat him better now. — facis facinus: cf. 81. 6; Propertius also (l.c.) thought such a breach of faith an awful crime.

5. ingenuae, honest.

6. fuit: strictly related in time to v. 5 est: the time to profess virtue was before she made the promise; now honesty requires her to keep it. — data corripere fraudando, etc.: to secure the reward by fraud is to exceed the wicked greed of the most abandoned of prostitutes. But none of the emendations yet offered for the corrupt efficit are at all satisfactory.

111. On the incest of the same Aufilena with her uncle.

1. Riese compares Afran. 117 R. proba et pudica quod sum . . . comparatum est, uno ut simus contentae uiro. — uiro, husband, as frequently.

2. nuptarum: Aufilena was evidently married.

4. The swift succession of matrem, fratres, patruo indicates the jumble of relationship involved. The point lies in the fact that Aufilena's children by her uncle would be her own cousins. — fratres: sc. patrueles; cf. Cic. Att. I. 5. 1 Lucii fratris nostri morte. — parere: see Crit. App.

112. On an unknown Naso, who is apparently a candidate for office. The text is unusually corrupt, and the interpretation extremely uncertain.

1. multus, wordy; cf. Afran. 202 R. multa ac molesta; Plaut.

113.

Consule Pompeio primum duo, Cinna, solebant
Maeciliam : facto consule nunc iterum
Manserunt duo, sed creuerunt milia in unum
Singula. Fecundum semen adulterio.

Men. 316 hominem multum et odiosum; Cic. N. D. II. 46. 119 nolo in stellarum ratione multus uobis uideri. — neque multus: the apparent contradiction (cf. 64. 83) involves an untranslatable play upon the word multus, which is, perhaps, as has been suggested, a colloquial form for molitus, from molere (sensu obscoeno); cf. colere cultus, adolere adultus, etc. — tecum qui descendit, your competitor; sc. in campum, perhaps omitted colloquially; but cf. Hor. Carm. III. 1. 10 hic generosior descendat in campum petitor; Ep. I. 20. 5 fuge quo descendere gestis.

2. multus et pathicus: contrasted with multus neque multus, the emphasis lying especially upon the conjunctions, while the ambiguous second multus of v. 1 is unveiled by the substitution for it of the brutally plain pathicus; i.e. your competitor is multus ('wordy') and yet not multus (sens. obsc.); but you, Naso, are multus ('wordy') and multus, for you are pathicus; in other words, your competitor is foul-mouthed but not foul-lived, while you, Naso, are foul-mouthed and foul-lived.

113. On the profligacy of a Maecilia. Pleitner emends in v. 2 to Mucillam, as a diminutive of Mucia, understanding the reference to be to the daughter of Q. Mucius Scaevola, married to Pompey soon after the death of Aemilia, his second wife, and divorced by him upon his return from the conquest of Mithradates, on the charge of adultery, especially with Julius Caesar. The mention of Pompey's consulships gives some color to this view, but as Maecilia is a well-known Roman name, and this epigram was written in 55 B.C. (cf. v. 2), seven years after the divorce of Mucia and several years after her marriage to M. Aemilius Scaurus, it is needless to emend the MSS. in order to bring in a special reason for the reference to Pompey.

1. consule Pompeio : in the year 70 B.C., with M. Licinius Crassus. — Cinna : doubtless the poet C. Helvius Cinna mentioned in 10. 29 and 95. 1; cf. Intr. 63.

2. Maeciliam : dependent upon an infinitive euphemistically omitted with solebant; cf. such constructions as Plaut. Cist. 37 uiris cum suis praedicant nos solere; Mart. III. 76. 4 cum possis Hecuben, non potes Andromachen. — consule iterum : in the year 55 B.C., with the same colleague as before.

3. manserunt, etc.: i.e. there are still two, but it is two thousand. If the reading be correct, the numeral unum, which is not infrequently joined with distributive pronouns, is here used instead of the distributive utrumque, because of the contrast with the numeral milia; 'to each one has accrued a thousand.' But the expression of such an idea by crescere with an accusative with in is unprecedented, the meaning apparently demanding increscere with the dative.

Firmanus saltu non falso Mentula diues
Fertur, qui tot res in se habet egregias,
Aucupium omne genus, piscis, prata, arua, ferasque.
Nequiquam: fructus sumptibus exsuperat.
Quare concedo sit diues, dum omnia desint;
Saltum laudemus, dum domo ipse egeat.

115.

Mentula habet iuxta triginta iugera prati,
Quadraginta arui: cetera sunt maria.
Cur non diuitiis Croesum superare potis sit

114. On Mentula as a 'land-poor' property owner. On the identity of Mentula with Mamurra see Intr. 73. The next poem speaks of the same estate as this.

1. Firmanus: Firmum, now Fermo, was a town in Picenum, about forty miles south of Ancona. — saltu: the word denoted first uncultivated land (cf. Fest. p. 302 saltus est ubi siluae et pastiones sunt, quarum causa casae quoque), and then a measure of 800 iugera as a single grant of such land by the land-commissions (Varr. R. R. I. 10. 2), and then the grant in general, an 'estate,' even though comprising, as here, some arable land (cf. Fest. l.c. si qua particula in eo saltu pastorum aut custodum causa aratur, ea res non peremit nomen saltui).

2. tot res egregias: spoken ironically, like non falso in v. 1, for c. 115 shows that the fine things specified in 114. 3 are but supposed attractions of the estate, which is really a small and worthless affair.

3. omne genus: accusative of specification.

4. exsuperat: sc. probably saltus as subject; the estate is good for nothing, and its necessary expenses more than eat up the income from it.

5. concedo, etc.: i.e. I grant, then, that he is rich, if a man can be rich who hasn't a cent to his name.

6. laudemus, etc.: i.e. let us praise the estate, if praise can mean anything when the owner hasn't a roof over his head. — domo: with hiatus; see Intr. 86 d. — ipse, the owner; cf. 64. 43 n.

115. On Mentula, reputed great in riches, but great only in profligacy.

1, 2. These verses give the plain facts about the size of Mentula's estate, while in vv. 3–6 are ironically rehearsed the exaggerated rumors about it.

1. iuxta, all in one lot (ironically); with iuxta of the proximity of several objects to one another cf. Plin. N. H. XXXVI. 117.

2. maria: i.e. swamps; cf. v. 5.

3. Croesum: cf. 24. 4 n. Midae.

Vno qui in saltu tot bona possideat,
Prata, arua, ingentis siluas saltusque paludesque
Vsque ad Hyperboreos et mare ad Oceanum?
Omnia magna haec sunt, tamen ipse est maximus ultro,
Non homo, sed uero mentula magna minax.

116.

Saepe tibi studioso animo uenante requirens
Carmina uti possem mittere Battiadae
Qui te lenirem nobis, neu conarere
Tela infesta mihi mittere in usque caput,
Hunc uideo mihi nunc frustra sumptum esse laborem,
Gelli, nec nostras hic ualuisse preces.

5. paludes: apparently common report had bestowed extensive and well stocked fish-ponds upon Mentula, but it is only marsh-land that he owns (cf. v. 2 maria). — -que: hypermetric: see Intr. 76.

6. Hyperboreos: the fabulous dwellers in the extreme north by the streams of ocean. — mare ad Oceanum: cf. Caes. B. G. III. 7. 2 proximus mare Oceanum; Tac. Ann. I. 9 mari Oceano aut amnibus longinquis saeptum imperium.

7. ultro: emphasizing ipse; cf. Plaut. Men. 831 hei mihi, insanire me aiunt, ultro quom ipsi insaniunt; Varr. R. R. III. 17. 6 nisi etiam ipse eos pasceret ultro.

8. mentula: a similar play to that in c. 94. The triple alliteration is noteworthy.

116. On his rejected advances toward a reconciliation with Gellius, concerning whom see Intr. 72.

1. studioso: the adjective probably modifies tibi, indicating that Gellius was a man of literary tastes, and perhaps an especial admirer of Callimachus; for the modification of animo by two words of similar meaning would be extremely awkward, and is not supported by such phrases as Verg. Geor. IV. 370 saxosus sonans Hypanis, where the adjectives differ in meaning. Perhaps, after all, the conjecture of Guarinus (studiose) was right.

2. carmina: i.e. translations, like c. 66. — Battiadae: i.e. Callimachus; cf. 65. 16 n.

3. qui, whereby; the use of qui for quibus is not uncommon in other writers (cf. Munro's Lucr. V. 233). — nobis: for mihi; especially noteworthy because immediately following a verb in the first person singular. On the metre of the verse see Intr. 76.

4. usque: this addition to in seems to imply that the aim was effectual, and pain was inflicted; cf. 4. 24 ad usque .

6. hic, in this matter. — nostras: for meas; with the change in the same sentence from mihi to nostras cf. 77. 3, 4; 91. 1, 2.

Contra nos tela ista tua euitamus amictu :
At fixus nostris tu dabis supplicium.

7. contra, instead of this ; i.e. instead of my former policy of deprecating your anger, I am now armed for defense (v. 7) and offense (v. 8). — amictu : i.e. the toga is wrapped about the left arm to serve as a shield; cf. Pacuvius 186 R. chlamyde contorta astu clipeat bracchium ; Sen. De Const. 7. 4 non minus latro est cuius telum opposita ueste elusum est ; Petron. 80 intorto circa bracchium pallio composui ad proeliandum gradum.

8. dabis : the elision of final s occurs only here in Catullus, though often found in Cicero's juvenile verses and in Lucretius, as well as in the earlier writers (see Cic. Or. 161).

CRITICAL APPENDIX.

THE sources chiefly used in constituting the text of this edition (cf. Intr. 53, 54) are as follows: —

Codex Oxoniensis (O), preserved in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, numbered 30 in the official catalogue of Latin MSS. formerly in the possession of the abbot Canonici of Venice. It is without date, but was apparently written in the latter part of the 14th century, and is therefore of about equal age with codex G. The book, which is in a beautiful state of preservation, contains only the poems of Catullus. It consists of 37 leaves of parchment, each 27 centimeters long and 19.5 centimeters wide. The rectangular space on each page reserved for writing is carefully indicated by ruling, and averages 20 centimeters long and 10.5 centimeters wide. Each page of the first four fascicles (of 8 leaves each) is ruled to contain 31 lines of writing, from 5.5 to 6.5 millimeters apart. Beginning with fol. 33 r., each page is ruled to contain 32 lines. The initial letter of each verse is a capital, and is somewhat separated from the rest of the text, being placed to the left of the vertical boundary line. Illuminated initials are found at the beginning of cc. 1 (very elaborate), 2 (with considerable tracery), 65, 68, 69, 72, 77, 80, and 89. In some other instances space was left in the text at the beginning of a poem for a large illuminated letter, and the proper letter indicated in the margin by the scribe, but never filled in. In other instances yet, the initial letter of a poem was omitted from the text and indicated in the margin as a guide to the illuminator, but no space was left for it in the text. Poems are occasionally separated by an interval of one verse, but often are written continuously (cf. also c. 60 fin. n.). In many instances the beginning of a poem (whether divided from the preceding poem by an interval, or not) is indicated by a paragraph mark consisting of two slight, inclined, parallel strokes of the scribe's pen just before the initial letter; but this mark, too, is often lacking. In a single instance (before c. 31) it is accompanied by a paragraph mark of more formal shape, illuminated in greenish blue. A few scholia are found on the first and second pages, and again on fol. 21 r., on the opening verses of c. 64.

In a pocket inside the back cover of the book are five sheets of note-paper of four pages each containing variant readings, and headed Varie lectiones cod- ms- catulli memb- in f^a^ sec- XIV- apud Ab- Canonici cum edit- Aldina 1502 collati. Just below and to the right on the same page is written, apparently by the same hand, but at a later date, coeperam in gratiam Laurentii Santenii, sed non absolui, neque ei misi quicquam. The first of these readings is arido modo . . (1. 2), and the last (apparently) sanna esset nunc quod gannit . . (83. 4).

A facsimile of fol. 26 u.(64. 336–366) by the collotype process is given in the edition of Catullus by Robinson Ellis (Oxford, 1878[2]); facsimiles of fol. 13 r. (50. 3–51. 12) and fol. 20 u. (63. 57–87) were published by Mr. Ellis in his XII. Facsimiles from Latin MSS. in the Bodleian Library (1885); a reduced facsimile of fol. 21 r. follows the preface to this volume, and since it has passed through the press a facsimile of the same page by the heliographic process has come to hand as plate XV.A in the Paléographie des Classiques Latins of M. Chatelain (Paris, 1892).

Codex Sangermanensis (G), now No. 14,137 of the Latin MSS. in the National Library in Paris, formerly No. 1,165 in the library of the abbey of St.-Germain-des-Prés. Its subscription shows it to have been written in the year 1375; and even if the words et cetera there occurring are taken as an indication that its scribe was but copying from a longer subscription of the year 1375, the style of the writing shows that this copy could not have been made much later than that date. The book contains the works of Catullus only, and is described by Schwabe as consisting of 36 leaves of parchment, each 24.3 centimeters long and 16.9 centimeters wide, with 33 lines of writing on a page. The last page, however, contains 34 lines. The text presents many erasures and corrections, the very large majority of which, at any rate, were made either by the original copyist, or by another not far removed from him in time. The copyist of G seems to have been somewhat more sophisticated than the copyist of O, and (as the subscription also intimates) to have been more worried about the condition of the text he was reproducing. The result is that the more ignorant blunders committed or perpetuated in O are often the better guide to the readings of the common original of the two MSS. A heliographic facsimile of two adjoining pages of G, fol. 35 u. and 36 r. (110. 7–116. 8), forms plate XV. in the Paléographie des Classiques Latins of M. Chatelain, and the entire MS. has recently been reproduced in excellent facsimile by a photolithographic process (Paris, Leroux, 1890).

Codex Thuaneus (T), which is of great importance for the text of c. 62, is now No. 8,071 of the Latin MSS. in the National Library in Paris. It is a book of 61 leaves, each measuring 29 by 20.5 centimeters, and is written in a Carolingian hand of the ninth century. It contains the writings of Juvenal, and of Eugenius of Toledo, together with extracts from Martial, the 62nd poem of Catullus, and a Latin Anthology. A heliographic facsimile of fol. 51, containing some epigrams of Martial and 62. 1–22 of Catullus, forms plate XIV. of the Paléographie des Classiques Latins of M. Chatelain, and a less accurate reproduction of the same verses of Catullus was published by Mr. Ellis in his second edition.

Orthographical peculiarities, as such, are noted in this Appendix only when they occur in proper names, or are otherwise of especial interest.

Italics are used in the variant readings to designate all letters that are written in the MSS. in abbreviation or ligature. Where variant readings are given in the MSS. themselves, not written as a part of the text, but either between the verses or in the margin, they are enclosed in parentheses.

O denotes codex Oxoniensis.

G denotes codex Sangermanensis.

T denotes codex Thuaneus.

V (codex Veronensis) denotes the common reading of O and G. Where the reading of but one of these MSS. is given, the reading of the other is that adopted in the text.

The letter ω is often used to designate such readings as occur in at least several of the interpolated MSS. or of the earliest (Italian) editions of Catullus. Where the source of a reading adopted in the text is not otherwise noted, it is understood to be due to ω. In ascribing emendations to individual sources the names of scholars of the present century are usually given in the vernacular; those of scholars of preceding centuries, with a few more familiar exceptions, in the Latin form.

(This subscription is entirely wanting in O, and in several of the better class of later and interpolated MSS. Many other of these MSS., however, contain the epigram of Campesani, either with or without the title given to it here, though in some it stands at the beginning instead of the end of the book. The other concluding formulae of the later MSS. are of no critical interest.)
